Shortly afterwards, Kenny came out again. He stretched out his hands and said casually, "Your grandfather said he doesn't agree to dealing with the Larson family. Henrik, you'd better start solving your problems by yourself. You won't grow up if you keep on depending on the power of the Wright family. What's more, Cecelia should remain locked up until your grandfather recovers, lest she cause more trouble."

Hearing Kenny's words, Duran was delighted and fell into deep thought.

Did Henrik really think the Wright family was the same as it used to be? He was too naive.

On the other side, when Henrik heard Kenny's words, his heart sank as he understood a lot. He pretended to be angry and left the villa.

After Henrik left with a downcast face, Duran immediately pulled out his phone and called Kurt. As soon as the phone was connected, Duran scolded the man on the other end of the line. "You idiot! It was such an easy task, yet you were unable to do it. Worse still, you were caught! What use are you to me?"

Duran paused for a while and then added smugly, "I have solved the problem now. If such a thing happens again, don't come to me for help!"

When Kurt heard that the crisis was resolved, he felt relieved and thanked Duran excitedly.

"Thank you, Mr. Wright! Thank you so much! I will be careful from now on and won't cause you any trouble again!"

Duran snorted coldly. He decided to stop blaming Kurt and instead asked, "What about the things that I have asked you to do?"

Kurt quickly understood what Duran was talking about and said in earnest, "Don't worry, Mr. Wright! I will try my best to deal with Trevor. He has hired a group of workers to repair his villa, but I have already sent someone to make trouble there. I guess Trevor is hitting a snag."

Hearing that, Duran nodded with satisfaction, a smug smile tugging the corners of his lips.

He judged that as long as Trevor was distracted and kept busy with his own issues, Trevor wouldn't have time to care about Henrik.

That would give him the perfect opportunity to make Henrik suffer!

Early the next morning Henrik went to find Trevor and told him what had happened in the Wright family.

"The situation is as you suspected. Duran must be behind all this! Not only are they unwilling to deal with the Larson family, but they also have no intention of releasing my sister!" Henrik hissed.

Trevor nodded and thought for a while. Then he said, "Though I don't know what they have in mind, it's clearly not simple. You'd better not do anything reckless for the time being. Besides, make sure you disguise yourself for a while."

Henrik agreed reluctantly.

On the other side, Luisa went to the Sanderson family's burnt villa alone.

When she saw the dilapidated villa, she felt a slight headache and covered her forehead. At this moment, some sweet memories she had with Trevor came back to her.

But the memories were fragmented and incomplete.

Meanwhile, the villa site was bustling with workers going up and down. It was the construction crew that Trevor had hired and they were getting things ready to repair the villa.

All of a sudden, a group of people broke in, followed by a few noisy excavators.

The leader of the group shouted in a loud speaker, "All of you get away right now! We are going to demolish this villa!"

The noise forced Luisa out of her thoughts. She was shocked and angry and shouted, "Who the hell are you? What right do you have to demolish this villa?"

The construction team also stopped what they were doing and gathered around.

"What are you doing? Get out of here! Who allowed you in here in the first place?" the foreman shouted.

Disturbances were very common on construction sites, and soon, the two sides confronted each other.

When the argument became seriously heated, Kurt came out from behind the group of intruders and asked loudly, "Is this Trevor's house?"

The foreman immediately recognized their former evil boss and said coldly, "Yes! What do you want to do?"

Kurt laughed scornfully and said, "What are we going to do? We are going
