

Chapter 1959 Meeting Lyman Again

Kurt flashed a confident grin taunting Trevor, "So, what's your big idea? Drawing a blank, aren't you? Remember, humility goes a long way here in Dreles, especially for someone as wealthy as you."

Garry chimed in with his own jibe, "Money is no good without power in Dreles. Only then will people heed your words."

Promptly, they commanded the demolition crew, "Get moving! Drive those diggers over there!"

Upon their command, the crew prepared to begin the operation.

Just then, Lyman made his entrance, bellowing, "Hold it right there! Who authorized this demolition?"

Kurt, about to hurl an insult, checked himself at the sight of Lyman. Scampering over, he greeted Lyman with a sycophantic grin, "Lyman, what brings you to this part of town?"

Lyman paid him no attention, his gaze sweeping the area.

Yet Dragon was nowhere to be seen.

At that moment, Trevor, with a knowing smile, stepped forward. "Over here, Lyman!"

Lyman, hearing his name, turned to look but didn't recognize the speaker.

Seizing the chance, Kurt sneered, "Trying to get into Lyman's good graces? You're just a non-entity here."

Lyman, looking puzzled, furrowed his brow at Trevor.

Undeterred, Trevor greeted him warmly, "Hello, Lyman. Feeling better, I hope? Seems like the days of silver needle treatments are behind you now."

At these words, Lyman's heart leapt. He suddenly connected the dots; Trevor was Dragon.

He erupted into laughter, responding "It's been ages! I didn't realize it was you. You've changed so much. I wondered if you'd had plastic surgery."

Kurt and Garry watched Lyman and Trevor converse, growing increasingly uneasy.

They feared there was a connection between the two and speculated if Trevor had been the one to call Lyman.

Their suspicions were soon confirmed by Trevor himself.

"Lyman, these two attempted to demolish private property with a forged document. How should we handle this?" Trevor questioned.

In a rush, Garry defended himself, "That's a baseless accusation! We haven't forged anything. It's merely that some procedures were overlooked in the rush. I'll rectify it immediately!"

Lyman, however, completely disregarded Garry's explanation. He snatched the document from Trevor, his anger escalating as he exclaimed, "Who do you think you are, disregarding the law so blatantly? You can't start construction until every procedure is meticulously followed. Must I remind you of that? Humph! I'll see to it that the director of Construction Department hears about your unlawful actions!"

Garry, his face flushed with fury, held his tongue, not daring to retort Lyman.

Kurt, distressed and realizing that Lyman was siding with Trevor, pleaded, "Lyman, please! We were just about to complete the signing and stamping. Is there any need for such an uproar?"

Trevor, with a mischievous grin, shot back, "Earlier, you seemed confident in your actions. What's caused this sudden change of heart? Luisa, please show Lyman the video."
