

Chapter 1967 The Power Of Family

---

Observing the unfavorable situation, Kurt hastily intervened in the conversation between the two individuals. "Mr. Walsh, this is the man I'm referring to as the despicable person! He's falsely accusing Garry and me due to a personal vendetta against me!"

Kurt even believed his own words.

With a hint of disdain on his face, Trevor playfully asked, "Come on, you are in no position to make me hold a grudge against you."

This incited anger in Kurt, and he firmly said, "Quit the act. You came here today to bribe Mr. Walsh and slander me, didn't you?"

As he continued to speak, his excitement grew, and he became increasingly confident in the validity of his conjecture. Therefore, he self-assuredly criticized, "I see through your intentions, despite your claims of holding no grudges."

Trevor paid no attention to Kurt's unwarranted accusations.

His visit today had nothing to do with Kurt. He asked, "Mr. Walsh, I've heard about your innovative building materials. I'm here to purchase some for the repairs on my villa. Would that be possible?"

Before Abram could respond, Kurt burst into laughter and sarcastically said, "You're quite presumptuous. You're only interested in the new construction materials. Huh! Before I came here, I heard that Mr. Walsh's new construction materials could potentially revolutionize the industry! Do you think you can acquire such a valuable asset with empty hands? Don't overestimate yourself."

With that said, he turned to Abram and flattered, "Only top-tier companies like mine deserve the privilege of using Mr. Walsh's revolutionary construction materials. Mr. Walsh, please consider collaborating with me once your materials are ready for the market. It would be a tremendous honor."

Nevertheless, Abram remained expressionless.

Do you think you can acquire such a valuable asset with empty hands? Don't overestimate yourself."

With that said, he turned to Abram and flattered, "Only top-tier companies like mine deserve the privilege of using Mr. Walsh's revolutionary construction materials. Mr. Walsh, please consider collaborating with me once your materials are ready for the market. It would be a tremendous honor."

Nevertheless, Abram remained expressionless.

At that moment, he was preoccupied with his thoughts about the fraternity association. He struggled to recollect if he had encountered a young man like Trevor before.

In fact, it would be out of the question for Abram to remember Trevor, since Trevor's identity at the time was Raven.

After much contemplation, worried that he might have a bad memory since he could not remember seeing Trevor before, Abram politely asked, "If you can prove your membership in the fraternity association, I can provide you with a batch of the new construction materials."

Kurt's expression drastically changed upon hearing this. He opposed and hastily attempted to dissuade Abram. "This is inappropriate, Mr. Walsh! How can such a valuable resource be given to someone like him? He could potentially steal your achievements and significantly diminish the business's value."

Nonetheless, Abram continued to disregard Kurt and patiently awaited Trevor's response.

Trevor paused and replied, "I am not a member of the fraternity association."

Kurt breathed a sigh of relief and continued to mock him, "I knew it. How could someone like you be associated with Mr. Walsh? You must be here to deceive him. Let me escort you out immediately!"

He then tried to push Trevor away.

Trevor regarded Kurt with contempt and said, "Clown."

He then turned back to Abram and said, "While I may not be affiliated with the fraternity association, I do come from the Sanderson family."

Abram was momentarily taken aback. He suddenly remembered something significant.

In Glareder, Raven had prioritized saving the Sanderson family. This strongly indicated that Raven was likely a member of the Sanderson family.

Abram realized this and became elated. The young man before him was the savior he had been searching for a while.

< Chapter 1967 The Power Of Family

 +120 Points at most

Abram's demeanor shifted abruptly, and he said in a generous tone, "You need the construction materials? I will gladly provide them for you!"