

Chapter 1969 Kurt's Struggle

As the innovator behind the new construction materials, Abram was unwilling to take risks solely for financial gain.

Nevertheless, this didn't imply that he didn't want others to benefit from his groundbreaking invention.

Abram took a thoughtful approach. He said to Trevor, "You're a member of the Sanderson family, known for your generosity. I have faith that you won't exploit this invention solely for profit. Moreover, you saved my life, and I'd prefer to entrust it to you rather than anyone else. I believe that someone capable of standing up to Mobius can't be a villain. Trust is of utmost importance. I trust you!"

Trevor was taken aback by this unexpected proposition.

Observing Abram's earnest expression and thinking about his new construction company in Dreles, he replied, "Since you have such faith in me, I won't let you down. I can offer you eighty percent of the profits I make."

Abram, however, shook his head, and said firmly, "If money were my sole motivation, I would have partnered with someone else long ago. Please remember my previous request - don't recklessly disrupt the market."

Touched by Abram's principles, Trevor pledged, "Rest assured, I promise not to exploit the new materials for monetary gain. I also invite you to be the honorary director in our company, granting you the power to veto any market strategies."

Abram was elated upon seeing Trevor's commitment and said, "I knew I made the right choice! I hope you can develop my new materials and prevent any disruption to the market balance."

Trevor nodded earnestly and prepared to leave.

Abram stopped him. "Wait a minute. It appears that Kurt has a personal vendetta against you. I'll instruct the lawyer to draft charges against him promptly, in case he causes further trouble."

Trevor was surprised by Abram's concern, and casually said, "I don't pay much attention to people like him. He simply seeks to annoy me from time to time. But now that you want to assist me, you can also check whether the Larson family's villa has violated any laws."

Abram nodded in agreement and promptly ordered, "Come here! Gather a team and head to the Larson family immediately!"

On the other side, Kurt was in a state of anxiety upon returning home. He felt cornered and believed he would end up in jail.

In a state of panic, Kurt phoned Duran. "Mr. Wright, haven't you informed the director of the Construction Department? It seems like he..."

However, Duran didn't bother to explain himself to Kurt, and instead cursed, "You always come to me for help, regardless of the situation. Don't you realize I'm incredibly busy? Leave me alone! You're nothing but a loser."

After the call ended, Kurt seethed with anger but didn't dare to respond.

His primary concern at this moment was the accusation Abram might file against him at Trevor's request.

After much contemplation, he was certain that only Duran could save him.

He believed that he needed to demonstrate his worth to gain Duran's assistance.

Gritting his teeth, he reached out to one of the local gangs, the Chasing Gang, and instructed, "Go to the location I've specified. Confront the crew, use force if needed, and warn them not to initiate any actions! And be sure to bring back my excavator. When it's done, I'll reward you with two hundred thousand."
