

Chapter 1974 Crisis Caused By Rumor

Naturally, Trevor suspected that Henrik's test as the hotel manager would not go off without a hitch.

He had guessed that Duran would not sit idly by and that he would quickly send people to cause trouble.

So, Trevor reassured Henrik. "Don't worry, everything will be fine. I'll talk to you later!"

Trevor then hung up the phone and quickly rushed to the hotel.

Luisa had also arrived at the hotel at this time. When she saw Trevor walk over, she walked up to him and explained the situation.

"The hotel is less and less busy in recent days. The reason is that there is a rumor circulating in Dreles that the hotel's service leaves much to be desired," Luisa said with a frown.

Upon hearing that, Trevor's expression darkened and a deep frown appeared on his face. He had a guess and muttered, "Something tells me Duran must have something to do with this rumor."

He couldn't think of anyone else who would do such a thing. Duran was Henrik's only enemy as far as Trevor knew, and as such, he was the only person who would have any motive to spread such rumors.

Soon, Henrik arrived at the hotel, and the news he brought would confirm Trevor's guess.

Henrik's face was gloomy. He walked up to Trevor and said angrily, "I've found out that Duran's friends are the ones spreading that rumor. As with any rumor, people exaggerated it further when spreading it. This situation seriously damaged the reputation of the hotel and has led to the current situation.

I asked a friend of mine to help me circulate a debunking of this rumor, but I doubt it will be enough. As you know, people are more likely to believe negative information than explanations."

Henrik was visibly very dejected by this situation. He said weakly, "With the current situation, it would be impossible for the hotel to make any profit before a long time. I am really worried that we will lose this bet and that we will not be able to free my sister. Who knows if I'll have another opportunity to set her free soon. Alas! I'm so useless that I can't even help my own sister."

The atmosphere in the hotel lobby quickly became quite depressing.

Trevor didn't say anything for a long time. He was thinking about something and there was a deep frown on his forehead.

Luisa was also quiet, and she looked somewhat depressed.

While the three people were thinking about how to deal with the situation, someone they didn't expect at all showed up.

Duran walked into the hotel with an arrogant air. He looked at them with an smug smile.

Pretending to be nice, Duran said seriously, "Henrik, I have heard about the rumor and I don't believe it is true. But whether I believe it or not doesn't matter. You have to find out a way to deal with it. If you do not find a solution quickly, the hotel may be forced to close its doors. It's more than just about a test now."

Seeing Duran pretending to care about him made Henrik sick to the stomach. He sneered and asked coldly, "What are you doing here? You don't need to pretend to care about me. I don't need your fake pity. And rest assured, I will definitely solve the hotel's problem. Now, you get the hell out of here! Seeing you just irritates me!"

Henrik's words amused Duran deep down, but he pretended to be aggrieved and said hypocritically, "How can you be so rude with me? Have you forgotten that we are family? You don't need to vent your anger on me. If you were good at your job, people wouldn't be questioning the hotel's quality and this situation wouldn't be happening"

Duran was actually suggesting that Henrik should give up and let him run the hotel instead.

Luisa was in no mood to put up with Duran's hypocrisy. She looked him in the eyes and said dryly, "Cut the crap! You are the one behind the rumor, aren't you? And you even have the nerve to come right here to mock us!"

Trevor, on the other hand, cast a cold glance at Duran and said with a sneer, "We have already found out a way to deal with it. You don't need to worry about us!"

Hearing Trevor's words, a trace of mockery flashed across Duran's eyes. He said in a low voice, "Well, since the young master of the Sanderson family says so, everything must be fine indeed. But I'm afraid that refuting the rumor won't help you save the hotel. What a pity that you can't even complete the test."

Henrik was having a hard time containing his anger. He was so annoyed with Duran's arrogance that he almost lost his temper and fought Duran then and there.

However, he managed to control his anger and roared, "Get out of here! You are not welcome here!"
