

Chapter 1976 That Party Is Not A Hoax

Meanwhile, Duran was also busy on his side. He was determined not to give Henrik any chance of passing the test, so he began to urge his friends to spread the rumors further.

All of a sudden, his phone rang, signaling him he had just received a message. Duran clicked on the message and it turned out to be an invitation from the hotel of the Wright family.

It read, "You are invited to a grand ceremony organized by Mr. Walsh, which will mark the beginning of a new era in the construction industry. During this ceremony, we will reveal new construction materials that will change the industry forever. Come and witness a new page in history that is about to be written."

After reading through the message, Duran burst into laughter. He wasn't shocked at all. Instead, he found it really funny.

He thought that the message was definitely fake and couldn't stop laughing.

"Henrik must be truly desperate to resort to such a lousy tactic. If people actually come to this so-called event just to realize that it was a hoax, then the hotel's reputation will be permanently destroyed. No one will want to set foot there in the future. Henrik does not skimp on the means to pass this test. But whatever he is up to, I will not only stop him, but I will also embarrass him!" Duran said loudly.

His friends also burst out laughing.

However, one of them looked worried and said tentatively, "Mr. Wright, I heard that Mr. Sanderson has been helping Henrik a lot recently. Could it be that Mr. Sanderson helped him get a cooperation?"

At this moment, the smile on Duran's face froze at once. He suddenly realized something and said in a low voice, "It's really possible!"

The atmosphere suddenly became awkward.

Duran became silent and a determined look appeared on his face. He said firmly, "I will go to this event to see for myself if it is true or not! I strongly doubt that the young master of the Sanderson family could reach an agreement with Mr. Walsh on the production of the new construction materials!"

After saying that, Duran left for the Construction Department to find the director.

At this time, the office of the director of the construction department was crowded.

Seeing all the people there, Duran grew nervous.

He began to wonder if they were really going to put the new construction materials into production.

After several long minutes in line, it was finally Duran's turn to meet the director. As soon as he entered the office, he asked anxiously, "Mr. Walsh, is it true that your new construction materials are going to be put into production?"

Abram couldn't help but wear a strange look when he saw Duran. Trevor had expected Duran to come to him and had told him what to say to Duran beforehand.

Looking at the anxious man in front of him, Abram said calmly, "The new materials are indeed going to be put into production. It's about time we use them to help the people in Dreles."

The news came as a shock to Duran and he had a hard time digesting it. With his heart pounding hard in his chest, he asked tentatively, "Have you already found a company with whom you will collaborate to produce these materials?"

Duran's heart was beating faster as he was afraid to hear the answer.

"It's just a small company," Abram replied vaguely as Trevor had told him.

That wasn't a lie after all.

Trevor had just recently established his construction company and at the moment, it was indeed a small company.

Hearing what Abram said, Duran breathed a sigh of relief.

Since Abram said it was a small company, it meant he wasn't collaborating with the Sanderson family. Thinking of this, Duran was overjoyed. After all, the Sanderson family's construction company was a big company which was well-known all over the country.

Since Abram wasn't collaborating with the Sanderson family, Henrik would be greatly disappointed as this would have been a major accomplishment for him.

Thinking of this, Duran became excited.

Just like others, Duran had heard about the specialness of these new building materials and he knew very well that once launched on the market, these materials could bring a lot of money to the stakeholders.

By a happy coincidence, he had just recently taken over the Wright family's construction business.

The Wright family's construction company was one of the most renowned in the city. So, Duran saw this as a golden opportunity and quickly proposed a collaboration to Abram. "Mr. Walsh, the Wright family is also interested in working with you to produce these new building materials. I wonder if this could be possible."

Duran had a reputation of being a greedy businessman, and Abram knew well that as head of the Wright family's construction company, Duran would do anything to maximize his profits.

Although Abram had no intention to work with Duran, he didn't directly turn down the proposal. He remembered Trevor's advice and said calmly, "Well, your company is indeed quite famous in Dreles. But we will have to wait until tomorrow's party before we decide anything."

Duran was a little surprised when he heard Abram's words.

A party? Was it the same party that would be organized in Henrik's hotel?

Whether it was the same party or not didn't really matter to Duran at this time. All he cared about now was closing the cooperation deal.

He didn't care if an event at the hotel brought in customers and money for Henrik.

If he could secure the cooperation with Abram, then he would successfully prove his abilities and defeat Henrik.

Abram's answer made Duran even more confident.

He was so excited about working with Abram to produce new building materials that he left in a hurry. At the time, he was looking forward to tomorrow's party.

Duran returned to his friends and did not fail to brag to them. "That party is not a hoax. It is real! The new materials would really be put into production. I was at the office of the director of the Construction Department just now and we have reached an agreement on working together to produce these materials."

When Duran's friends heard the news, their faces darkened almost instantly. They sneered and said mockingly, "Really? Congratulations! Moments ago, you told us the party was fake, and now you are telling us you've reached a cooperation deal with the director of the Construction Department... Apparently, it's not others you're suspicious of, but us."