

Chapter 1977 The Party Began

His friends' comments were dripping with sarcasm. Duran gnashed his teeth and swore in his heart.

Damn it! It seemed that his friends were jealous of him.

Duran was a boastful and arrogant person by nature, so seeing that his friends were jealous of him actually pleased him. However, if he wanted them to continue spreading the negative rumors about the hotel, he had to coax them.

As a result, Duran swallowed his pride and said, "Come on, don't say that. We are friends. I promise you that once I formalize the cooperation by signing the contract at tomorrow's party, I will work with you all in a win-win partnership. We will all make money!"

As soon as he said these words, the dark expressions on his friends' faces instantly disappeared, giving way to happy smiles. They began to flatter him.

"Mr. Wright, you are truly awesome. Few people can boast of being able to guarantee cooperation with the Construction Department. As for Henrik, he is such a loser. It makes no doubt that you will be the heir of the Wright family."

The flattering words of his friends made Duran feel even more self-assured.

He thought proudly that even though Henrik could make some money from this party at the hotel, he on the other hand, could make much more money in the future.

Meanwhile, on the other side, Abram was not happy with the unwanted attention he was receiving since announcing the launch of the new construction materials. He took out his phone and dialed Trevor's number to complain about how things were going.

As soon as Trevor took the call, Abram's plaintive voice was immediately heard. "Because of your announcement of the party, so many people have come to the Construction Department that I can't even get to the bathroom. I didn't know things would be like this. It's too troublesome. By the way, Duran also came as you had foreseen. I did as you said and sent him away."

Trevor was not at all surprised by what Abram told him. He had expected that things would be like this, and he had especially expected Duran to rush to the Construction Department the moment the news was out. With a slight smile, he asked calmly, "What did you tell Duran?"

"Well, I didn't tell him anything except that I was working with a small company. That guy really thinks he has a chance to secure a cooperation deal with me. I guess he has begun to celebrate his 'accomplishment' at this time."

Trevor couldn't help laughing when he heard that. "That's really great! It seems that the party tomorrow would be very interesting. How about you..."

They discussed for a while before Trevor finally hung up the phone.

The next day, as announced, the Wright family's hotel hosted one of the most important business parties held in Dreles in recent years.

Trevor and Luisa respectively donned a tuxedo and an elegant suit for the occasion. The couple headed inside the hotel arm in arm when they chanced upon Duran at the entrance.

Duran looked at the couple complacently and said mockingly, "Mr. Sanderson? What a surprise to see you here. Do you also have interests in the construction industry? You know, all the guests at tonight's party would be people from the industry. It would be really boring for you if you don't understand anything about construction."

After saying that, Duran's gaze shifted to Luisa. A glimmer of lust shone in his eyes and he said in a whisper, "You can count on me to help Cecelia regain her freedom."

Trevor remained calm and said with a playful smile, "Well, I just came here to have a look. At least I am not as desperate as someone trying by all means to secure a cooperation with Mr. Walsh, even though it is clear he will never succeed."

Hearing that, Duran laughed wildly and turned to look at his friends. "Hey guys, someone please explain to Mr. Sanderson what's really going on here. It's like he thinks he can compete with us at this party."

Of course, Duran's friends backed him up and they all began to praise him. "Mr. Walsh had deep admiration for Mr. Wright. Nothing would stop them from cooperating on this project. The party is just a formality."

Looking at the people in front of him, Trevor wanted to burst out laughing

< Chapter 1977 The Party Began

+120 Points at most

What on earth made them so confident? They were really idiots.

At this time, Duran was already imagining the wonderful life he would have once the cooperation was made official.

He raised his chin high and said arrogantly, "I will sign the cooperation contract with Mr. Walsh today! Once I secure the deal, I wouldn't need the Wright family anymore because I would already be rich on my own. I would be one of the richest men in Dreles."

Henrik happened to come over at this time and he heard clearly what Duran had just said.

Henrik's eyes turned cold at once. "You want to leave the Wright family?" he asked Duran straightforwardly.

For you