

Chapter 1980 Cooperating With Trevor

Trevor was equally outraged by Duran's audacity. Before Abram could even say anything, Trevor stepped forward firmly and said coldly to Duran, "Dare to say it again!"

Trevor's imposing aura and penetrating gaze made Duran shudder and his face changed completely. He gritted his teeth and said nervously, "Trevor, you are a member of the Sanderson family. Dreles is the territory of the Wright family. You should mind your own business."

At this point, Henrik couldn't stand Duran's arrogance anymore.

His face was cold and gloomy. Without thinking twice, he poured the red wine in his hand directly on Duran's face. At the same time, he roared, "Will you shut the hell up? I can't believe you are this uneducated. Stop embarrassing the Wright family! Have you forgotten that you're just a collateral descendant of the Wright family? What right do you have to use the status and power of the Wright family to achieve your goals?"

Duran was shocked and embarrassed, and his face turned gloomy. He closed his eyes, as the wine flowed freely down his face.

The guests in the room approached Henrik and praised his action.

"This is how the direct descendant of the Wright family should act. To think that Duran tried to use the power of the Wright family to bully people. What a thug!"

Duran was irritated by what the people said and he gnashed his teeth in anger.

He took a close look at all the people criticizing him now, trying to remember their faces. He intended to get even with them in the future.

Trevor, on the other side, had been quiet for a long time, and he suddenly looked at Abram.

He thought the time was right now and decided to go through with his plan. He said in earnest, "Mr. Walsh, it just so happens that I have set up a construction company. It is still in its infancy, and is therefore only a small company. How about we work together? I must say that your new construction materials will be of great help to my company."

Duran's eyes flashed with anger upon hearing Trevor's words and he said with a sneer, "Why do you think Mr. Walsh will cooperate with your family when he has turned down a cooperation with the Wright family? You have no chance of convincing Mr. Walsh to work with you. You will just embarrass yourself."

Of course, Trevor didn't care about what Duran thought. He shook his head and said indifferently, "First of all, you are just a collateral member of the Wright family, so you can't represent the Wright family. Secondly, the construction company I just established belongs to me only. I will cooperate with Mr. Walsh in my own name and not rely on my family as you do."

What's more, even if Mr. Walsh isn't interested in cooperating with me, that has got nothing to do with you. Instead of venting your frustrations on me, you should be worried about yourself. Stop making a fool of yourself here."

Just as Trevor finished speaking Abram said calmly, "Alright. I'll ask my secretary to send you the cooperation contract. I hope we will have a pleasant cooperation!"

Abram's words left everyone present speechless. They couldn't believe that it took so little for Trevor to convince Abram to cooperate with him.

At that time, no one wanted to be left behind so they all rushed to Abram, pointing out that they also had small businesses and could make great partners.

Henrik was the only one who was happy for Trevor. He came close to Trevor and sincerely congratulated him. "Congratulations! Your cooperation with Mr. Walsh will help your construction company grow faster in Dreles."

Duran, on the other hand, was furious. He glared at Trevor and Henrik and said ferociously, "Don't rejoice too soon. Henrik, don't forget you and I have a bet going on."

Duran's words caused Henrik's mood to change at once.

He became very worried.

The thing was, Henrik was afraid he would lose the bet. After all, this party alone wasn't enough to save the reputation of the hotel.

On the other side, Abram was fed up with people pestering him, so he said loudly, "Listen everyone, I won't have time to discuss with each and every one of you. I leave it to Trevor to decide on potential partners for the production of new construction materials. Anyone who wants to cooperate with me should go to Trevor."

After saying that, Abram directly left the hotel. He didn't want to stay here a second longer or else these people would keep pestering him.

The guests were shocked.

However, Abram's words were very clear, so as soon as he left, the big shots all rushed up to Trevor and surrounded him. They were all begging him to consider them for cooperation.

"Mr. Sanderson! Mr. Sanderson! Please consider cooperating with my company!"

Trevor was amused by the situation and a faint smile played on his lips. He acted completely disinterested by their offers and said casually, "I'm sorry, but I'm not interested in money. Besides, I'm exhausted now, and I can't discuss business with you at the moment.

I could only discuss with one of you per day. How about this? I have been staying in this hotel for some time now, and I can prolong my stay to discuss with those who are interested in working with us. So those who want to cooperate with Mr. Walsh and I can just take a suite in the hotel and wait for their turn."

Hearing Trevor's words, Duran felt his blood boiling and he clenched his fists tightly. He was so angry that his face darkened and he muttered, "This party is a conspiracy. All he wants is to force people to stay in this hotel."
