

Chapter 1981 A Clever Tactic

People were initially taken aback. Afterward, they gathered around Henrik and pleaded, "Mr. Wright, please assist us with checking in right away! The closer we are to Mr. Sanderson's room, the better!"

Trevor had a daily limit of accepting just one visitor. The individual closest to him had the highest chance of securing cooperation.

In this situation, anyone who didn't book a hotel room would be making a foolish mistake.

Every room in the hotel was fully reserved.

If they could reach a cooperation agreement, even if they had to stay here for up to six months, it would be worth it.

Those who failed to secure a room were quite frustrated and hurried to a nearby hotel.

The Wright family's hotel profits were skyrocketing, astonishing both Henrik and Luisa.

It became evident that Trevor's approach was not just about profiting from a party.

As long as the cooperation on new construction materials remained undecided, the hotel would remain fully occupied.

This meant that Henrik could easily pass his test.

Duran also came to this realization and became infuriated. He pointed at Henrik and scolded, "You're relying on Trevor! These achievements can't be attributed to you!"

Trevor innocently extended his hands and said playfully, "I've been a long-time guest at this hotel. I can't prevent others interested in cooperation from staying here. Henrik is the one benefiting. So your words won't change anything."

Duran was exasperated, unable to retort Trevor and Henrik, so he turned and pushed his way into the crowd. He said loudly, "Ladies and gentlemen, please heed me. The service at this hotel is very poor. Even if we wish to talk to Mr. Sanderson, there are several hotels nearby where we can stay. Why should we endure the service here?"

Afterward, he subtly signaled his friends to help spread the rumors.

But it was evident that the current situation was unfavorable for Duran.

His friends were reluctant to make trouble in front of Henrik, not wanting to echo Duran's words.

Observing this, the surrounding guests sneered, "We're here for business not to be overly selective. If we can reach an agreement on new construction materials, the hotel's service quality won't be a problem."

At this time, Trevor sneered and asked Duran's friends, "Did the rumors about this hotel originate from you guys? This time, I won't cooperate with individuals who engage in such deceitful actions."

Suddenly, their expressions darkened. Without the cooperation, their construction companies might go bankrupt.

They betrayed Duran and said, "Mr. Sanderson, it was Duran's idea to spread rumors about the hotel. It has nothing to do with us. Please give us a chance to cooperate with you."

Duran's demeanor changed dramatically. He stared at his friends in disbelief and was on the verge of losing his temper.

Henrik shouted from behind "So, it was you who orchestrated all of this. Just wait and see! I will certainly report you to my uncle!"

Duran turned red and pleaded for forgiveness.

However, Henrik ignored him and instructed the security guards to escort him away.

Observing Duran's embarrassed departure, Trevor and Luisa exchanged smiles.

Saving Cecelia should now be achievable.

Nevertheless, Trevor failed to notice the concern in Luisa's eyes.
