

Chapter 1991 A Fire

Trevor made Kurt take him to his own villa.

Initially, Kurt thought that Trevor was just bluffing and didn't really intend to set fire to his house. However, it seemed that Trevor was very serious.

Kurt felt so helpless now. Holding the gas tank tightly, he begged Trevor for mercy, "I know I was wrong. Please, forgive me. I will never dare to offend you again!"

Of course, Kurt's words were not sincere. He deeply hated Trevor.

He was determined to get his revenge on Trevor one way or the other.

Trevor cast a disdainful look at Kurt and said with a sneer, "When you do something you have to accept the consequences. Well, if you don't want to burn your house down, I will sue you for attempted arson.

All the workers are witnesses and I have enough money to make sure you can't get bail! I caught you red-handed and the surveillance cameras filmed you coming into my house with a gasoline can. If I decide to sue you, you can be sure to spend several days in jail."

Kurt's hatred for Trevor grew even more at this moment. Not only could he not defeat Trevor, but now Trevor had enough to send him to languish in jail for years.

"Won't you burn it? Or do you really want me to sue you?" Trevor said with a sneer while slowly walking towards Kurt.

Kurt knew he was trapped now, so he decided to comply. He opened the gasoline tank and sprinkled the gasoline around his villa.

Before setting it on fire, he ran inside the house and took out all the money that was there. At least in this way he could reduce the losses.

Trevor didn't say anything and just let Kurt do whatever he wanted.

When Kurt had finished taking the money out of the villa, Trevor calmly said, "It's time!"

After saying that, he took Luisa aside.

Kurt knew he had no choice now. Enduring the pain in his heart, he took out the lighter and set fire to his own villa.

The next moment, the whole villa was ablaze.

Kurt's face paled as he watched his villa burn. The despair was too much for him to bear, and he collapsed to the ground.

Holding Luisa's hand, Trevor said to Kurt with a smile, "Do you see this? This is what happens when you do evil. It always backfires."

Upon hearing what Trevor said, Kurt's face turned pale.

The flames were getting so big that Kurt's rich neighbors became worried. They all came out of their villas and rushed to see what was happening.

Seeing that the flames kept getting bigger and bigger, Kurt feared that the fire would reach the neighboring villas. If that happened, he would have problems with his rich neighbors and would be in an even more delicate situation. He turned to look at Trevor and said in a low voice, "You had what you wanted. You've punished me. The fire..."

Trevor shrugged and said casually, "I let you start the fire, but I didn't say you can't put it out."

Hearing that, Kurt was so angry that blue veins popped on his forehead.

Luisa, on the other hand, found it funny and she couldn't help giggling.

Of course she didn't feel sorry for Kurt at all.

If Trevor hadn't caught Kurt just in time, by now the Sanderson family villa would have been burned to the ground.

Since Trevor didn't stop him from putting out the fire, Kurt quickly took out his phone and called the fire department.

The firefighters soon arrived at the scene. Given how serious the fire was, they had to put together a long isolation belt.

However, the fire team leader seemed in no hurry to put out the fire. Instead, he went to Kurt to discuss the price first.

These firefighters were a private organization, and therefore their goal was to make money.

Kurt did not want to bargain with the firefighters at such a crucial moment. He gritted his teeth and said anxiously, "I will give you as much money as you want. Just put out the fire rightaway and save as much of my property as you can."

The fire team leader was pleased with Kurt's reply. Since Kurt was willing to give them much money, he didn't delay any longer. He ordered his men to put out the fire at once.

While the firefighters worked to put out the fire, the leader stood aside and watched. He was a little intrigued by the cause of the fire, so he asked Kurt, "What happened here? What caused the fire?"

Of course, Kurt had no desire to answer such a question.

He stammered and explained awkwardly, "Maybe someone set the fire on purpose."

The fire team leader shared Kurt's thoughts and he nodded repeatedly. "No wonder the fire is so fierce," he muttered.

He looked at Kurt seriously and added, "Buddy, I am pretty sure someone deliberately set the fire. That is the only explanation as to why the fire is so fierce. We came here in a hurry, and unfortunately, we haven't brought all our equipment. We have to go back to get the equipment. But you must know that the equipment will cost a lot of money..."

Of course Kurt knew that the man was trying to extort him as much money as he could. However, there was nothing he could do since he really needed them to put out the fire.

if he refused the man's deal and decided to call 911 instead, before the firefighters of Dreles arrived at the scene, his villa would have been burned to ashes.

Therefore, he nodded reluctantly and said, "All I need from you is for you to put out the fire as soon as possible! I'll give you more money."

Then Kurt suddenly remembered something and his face turned pale.

He grabbed the hand of the fire team leader and screamed anxiously, "Put out the fire now! I have important documents in the villa. They can't be destroyed. If you manage to bring me those documents, I will give you an additional thirty thousand."
