

Chapter 1998 A Wonderful Night

Henrik and Cecelia left the hospital together.

Luisa was the only one left in the ward to take care of Trevor.

One positive thing that came from the shooter's attack was that she had finally regained her memory. Now the old Luisa was back.

With her eyes filled with tenderness, Luisa held Trevor's hand tightly and the two smiled heartily.

Later that day, Trevor's phone suddenly rang.

Trevor checked the caller ID and he immediately recognized the number. He answered the phone and listened patiently to what the man on the other end of the line had to say. When Trevor finally hung up, he looked at Luisa who seemed worried, and smiled.

"It was the construction team leader. He wanted to inform me that the repair of the Sanderson family villa was finally completed and that we could move in whenever we wanted!"

Luisa was overwhelmed with excitement when she heard the news. Her eyes widened in surprise and she asked eagerly, "Really?"

Seeing the excitement on her face, Trevor couldn't help but smile. He stroke her hair and said gently, "Of course. Have I ever lied to you? I need you to help me with the discharge formalities before it's dark. Let's go back to the villa tonight."

Luisa became more and more excited and she nodded happily. She quickly ran out of the ward to deal with the discharge formalities.

Soon, it was night.

Luisa finally came back to the ward.

Seeing her walked into the ward with a wheelchair, Trevor couldn't help laughing. "Honey, it's only my shoulder that is injured. I can still walk by myself!"

Luisa ignored Trevor's comment and she calmly pushed the wheelchair to the bedside. Then, regardless of Trevor's reluctance, she helped him sit on the wheelchair.

"Be a good boy!" Luisa said in a fake impatient tone.

It wasn't often that Trevor saw this side of Luisa, and he found her quite lovely at this time.

His heart was filled with a warm feeling.

This was the Luisa he had fallen in love with.

Luisa finally sat Trevor in the wheelchair and pushed him out of the hospital.

Outside, the night breeze was blowing delicately. At this time of the night the entire city was plunged into profound silence.

As Luisa pushed the wheelchair towards the parking lot, she couldn't take her eyes off Trevor.

She enjoyed this moment with him so much and wished that time could freeze right now.

She was still thinking about everything that had happened after she took that damn drug, and especially everything Trevor had done for her all that time. When she thought about this, she was so moved.

Luisa suddenly stopped and looked at Trevor sincerely. "Darling, when I think of what happened before, I am really scared. That damn drug almost made me forget you. I even thought that you and Cecelia had an affair. What hurts me the most is that I almost lost you today. You know what? The moment you took the bullet to protect me, my memory suddenly came back. I'm so lucky to have you!"

As Luisa spoke, tears welled up in her eyes.

Trevor's heart was heavy when he saw the tears in Luisa's eyes.

He held her hand tightly and pulled her in his arms to comfort her.

"Silly girl, stop crying. I am also really lucky to have you," he whispered softly.

The couple shared a deep emotional moment. Luisa felt suddenly so energetic that she pushed Trevor over a long distance without complaining of tiredness.

After a while, Trevor didn't feel comfortable to let her push him anymore and he insisted that they take a taxi. Luisa agreed and they took a taxi back to the villa of the Sanderson family.

The construction team had been working on repairing the villa for a long time, and after a lot of trouble and hassle, they were finally finished. The villa looked exactly as it did in Trevor and Luisa's memories.

Trevor was overwhelmed with nostalgia and he sighed heavily.

Inside the villa, everything had been set as per his requirements. Even the sofa and the bed were the exact replica of the ones which had been destroyed.

When they arrived at the master's bedroom, Luisa suddenly pushed Trevor inside and before he could react, she wrapped her arms around his neck and kissed him passionately.

Trevor was speechless. This was the first time Luisa took the initiative to kiss him.

The warmth and softness of his beloved's lips as well as her enthusiasm delighted Trevor who joked, "Luisa, you know I can't use my left arm."

He thought that by saying so, Luisa would feel shy and leave him. But to his surprise, she looked him straight in the eye with determination.

Although her face was red with shyness, Luisa still said firmly, "It doesn't matter. I can't wait any longer! Trevor, I want to give myself to you. You may be injured but I am not. Let me do it!"

Trevor was speechless. The next moment, Luisa pushed him onto the bed.

They had a wonderful night.

Trevor woke up early the next morning. He turned and looked at Luisa lying next to him. She had also just woken up and was completely naked. Looking at the lovely woman, he rubbed his nose and smiled.

"Luisa, I had planned for us to do it on our wedding night. I didn't expect it to happen so suddenly. I am so happy right now."

Trevor's words made Luisa feel shy and she blushed again. She pulled the quilt to cover her red face. Then, she said in a muffled voice, "I've already worn the ring you gave me! Doesn't it mean that we're married?"
