

Chapter 2006 Buying A Car

Henrik was utterly shocked by what Trevor said.

"Why do you think so?" he asked seriously.

Trevor sighed and explained calmly, "Before Duran died, he said that if you and Cecelia were killed, he would become the direct heir of the Wright family. But you and Cecelia are not the only members of the direct line of the Wright family. So, it is very likely that it is someone from the direct line who is operating all this in the shadows."

Henrik had to admit that Trevor's analysis made sense. At this time, Henrik was filled with resentment.

So it turned out that it was a member of the direct line who was after them!

"But there is a problem. The direct line of the Wright family has more than 20 descendants, and not all of them are in Dreles. It won't be easy to find who is behind all this," Henrik complained.

Hearing what Henrik said, Trevor gave him a reassuring smile and said confidently, "There is always a way. You just have to think about it carefully."

Henrik nodded, and he suddenly understood what Trevor was implying.

"My birthday will be in a few days. I had intended to throw a party and only invite you and Luisa. But ultimately, I think I will use this as a means to bring together all of my family's direct lineal descendants," Henrik said with a gloomy face.

Trevor guessed that Henrik was a little sad about sacrificing the birthday party he had planned. With a smile, he patted Henrik on the shoulder and said, "You can always have the party another time. For now, the most important thing is to find out the person who is targeting us. By the way, who are the direct line members of the Wright family in Dreles? We can already investigate some of them."

Henrik thought it over and explained, "Besides my uncle and grandfather, there is only one other direct descendant of the Wright family in Dreles. His name is Josue Wright and he runs a car shop on the car street."

Trevor kept in mind the two key information, Josue Wright and the car street.

He had made up his mind to investigate Josue alone. So, after chatting with Henrik for a few more minutes, Trevor said goodbye and left.

He had another reason to leave in a hurry since he wanted Luisa and him to prepare a birthday present for Henrik.

Shortly after, Trevor and Luisa were at the car street. As its name suggested, this street was full of car shops.

"How about buying Henrik a sports car? I think he likes them," Luisa suggested.

Trevor thought for a while and nodded.

Walking hand in hand, the two visited several automobile stores. Trevor was quite particular about the gifts he gave his friends, and the sports cars in these stores were far from pleasing him, so they continued to scour the stores.

While they were busy visiting the different car shops, a man at the corner of the street was talking loudly on the phone. "Do you really want me to provoke Trevor? I heard that he is very good at fighting. What if he kills me?"

A hoarse voice came from the other end of the line, "Just do it! I'll send you ten million dollars now. Once you complete the task, I'll send you an additional fifty million dollars, and the latest injection drug! Just follow my orders and you can be sure I will reward you handsomely.

As for your safety, don't worry. I will make sure nothing happens to you. All I need you to do is to make Trevor so angry that he won't have time to think about other things. If you can do this and delay him, then you will have accomplished your mission."

After hearing what the mysterious man said, Josue was relieved. A few moments later, he received a bank alert on his phone. Seeing that the mysterious man meant business, Josue finally agreed to take on the mission.

He didn't really do it for money though. What he wanted the most was the latest injection drug.

After ending the call, Josue turned around and headed back to his shop. He was pondering about how to provoke Trevor later when to his surprise he saw Trevor in his shop.

At this time, Trevor was inspecting a red sports car and commented, "Well... It looks good. It will be a good birthday gift."

Just as Trevor was about to pay for the sports car, Josue came in.

Josue had a clear goal in mind. He had to provoke Trevor as the mysterious man had ordered.

Josue pretended to be a customer and shouted as he came in, "Where is the salesman? I want this car! I don't care about the price, just swipe my card and give it to me."

In just a few seconds, Josue had already come up with a plan.

When he walked into the shop just now, he heard Trevor say he wanted to buy this sports car to give it as a gift to someone.

Josue judged that someone as rich as Trevor must be quite proud. If another person were to buy the car that had caught his eye right in front of him, Trevor would certainly buy an even more expensive car just to humiliate the person.

This was a good plan as it would help his shop make a handsome profit.

Once the deal was settled, he would then reveal that he was the owner of the car shop.

Josue was snickering inwardly at the thought of how angry Trevor would be at that time.