Chapter 2031 Extorting The Central Hospital

Trevor immediately thought of Patrice as his potential groomsman.

He chuckled, recalling the time they had searched for the Murray family's secret martial arts. Patrice had dressed up as a man then, completely fooling him. It was a memory that made him unsure whether to laugh or annoy.

But he quickly dismissed the idea. Patrice, after all, was a woman and currently on a mission in Glareder. It wouldn't be right to ask her.

He decided to consider someone else.

That was when Nasir came to his mind.

Meanwhile, Luisa and Zoie had reunited after a long time and had much to catch up on.

With nothingelse to do, Trevor headed to the Central Hospital alone.

He took a taxi and arrived at the hospital's entrance.

Upon arrival, he noticed a commotion. A man was loudly protesting, waving a banner and causing a scene.

Curiousonlookers gathered, watching the spectacle with interest.

Trevor, frowning, learned that the man was demanding compensation from the hospital.

The hospital's patients steered clear of the disturbance, and the nurses tried unsuccessfully to calm the man down.

As the crowd at the hospital's entrance grew, Trevor stepped forward to inquireabout the situation.

He asked, "What's happeninghere?"

In the midst of the crowd, the noisy man sat on the ground, yelling, "This hospital is terrible! I fell here yesterday and injuredmy left foot. But after beingtreated at Central Hospital, now I can't move either of my legs! The hospital must pay me compensation!"

Trevor recognized the troublesome man. He was the security guard from Ironmont Hospital, run by Kenny. It all clicked for Trevor.

The security guard spotted Trevor too. His eyes widened with a flicker of panic, and he shouted, "Ah! It's you! You're the one who hurt me! Just yesterday, my foot was acting up. I bet it's from the injury you caused! You owe me compensation, as does the hospital!"

Trevor just smirked. He hadn't laid a finger on the man that day. It was Henrik who did the beating.

"I never hit you," Trevor retorted. "If you're looking for compensation, go ask the Wright family. And the Central Hospital's too reputable to ignore any patient's issue."

Trevor had no patience for the security guard, who had left a sour taste in his mouth.

The nurse chimed in, "He was perfectly fine yesterday. He's faking an illness to extort money from us!"

The surrounding crowd perked up, murmuring and gossiping about the unfolding drama.

Trevor immediately understood what was happening

The security guard's face turned a deep shade of red, and he erupted into a tirade. "I've never heard of the Wright family. All I know is you hit me. You owe me compensation! The Central Hospital won't admit their mistakes and now they're blaming me! They're the bad guys here! They deserve to be punished"

His anger grew with each word. "If I'm really okay, why can't I stand up? If I were out to extort money, why wouldn't I target other hospitals? Nasir, you need to pay up! Or else, I'll make sure the Central Hospital is all over the news! Humph!"

The nurse, seeing things escalating, tried to calm him down, but the security guard was beyond listening. He even raised his fists, ready to strike her.

But Trevor was quick to intervene, grabbing the guard's wrist just in time.

Trevor, shocked that the guard would attempt to hit the nurse, wore a serious expression and instructed her, "Go get Nasir. I'll keep things under control here. Hurry!"
