Chapter 2034 A Suspicious Email

The security guard's face drained of color as he faced the crowd's scolding.

He opened his mouth to argue but was silenced by a flurry of water bottles thrown by the angry onlookers.

With everyone now seeing the real side of the security guard, Nasir seized this golden chance and quickly reprimanded him, "You should be ashamed! You are coming to the hospital just to shake people down for money! And look at you, moving around so easily. Doesn't seem like you're recovering from anything."

The guard, now red-faced, pleaded for mercy, "Please, I'm sorry. Ironmont Hospital fired me out of the blue, and I've been unable to find work since. I thought... the Central Hospital, with its good reputation..."

Nasir's anger flared at the explanation. "So, being a decent person means they deserve to be blackmailed? That's just pure evil!"

The guard, overwhelmed by the hostile crowd, knelt down, close to tears. "Mr. Blakely, please, I beg you to forgive me. I won't do it again. I admit I was wrong."

Nasir, visibly shaking with rage, couldn't contain his emotions.

Trevor, noticing this, tried to calm him with a smile. "Nasir, don't get upset."

The guard, mistaking Trevor's comment as a sign of forgiveness, brightened up and quickly expressed his gratitude. "Thank you, thank you so much..."

However, before he could finish, Trevor nonchalantly suggested, "Nasir, why don't you get a lawyer and sue this guy? It's not worth letting him ruin your day."

Nasir paused to consider Trevor's suggestion and soon realized he was right. His expression softened, and he gave a small nod in agreement.

The change in the situation sent a wave of panic through the security guard.

His face filled with despair at the thought of being sued.

"This is it. I'm finished," he muttered to himself, collapsing to the ground, filled with regret.

But it was already too late for him to recognize his error.

Nasir, with an impassive expression, summoned the hospital's security guards and had the man removed.

The crowd that had gathered lost interest and dispersed as the drama concluded.

Nasir, still processing the events, turned to Trevor in amazement. "Trevor, you're incredible. How did you manage to expose his true colors just by massaging him? I would've been clueless without your help in exposing his lies."

Trevor just smiled, offering no explanation.

He credited his ability to generate electric currents to the evolution medicine, although even he didn't fully understand its powers. He felt he had only begun to scratch the surface of its capabilities.

Remembering the original purpose of his visit to the Central Hospital, Trevor put his arm around Nasir's shoulder and grinned. "I'm about to marry Luisa, and we still need a best man. Nasir, would you do me the honor?"

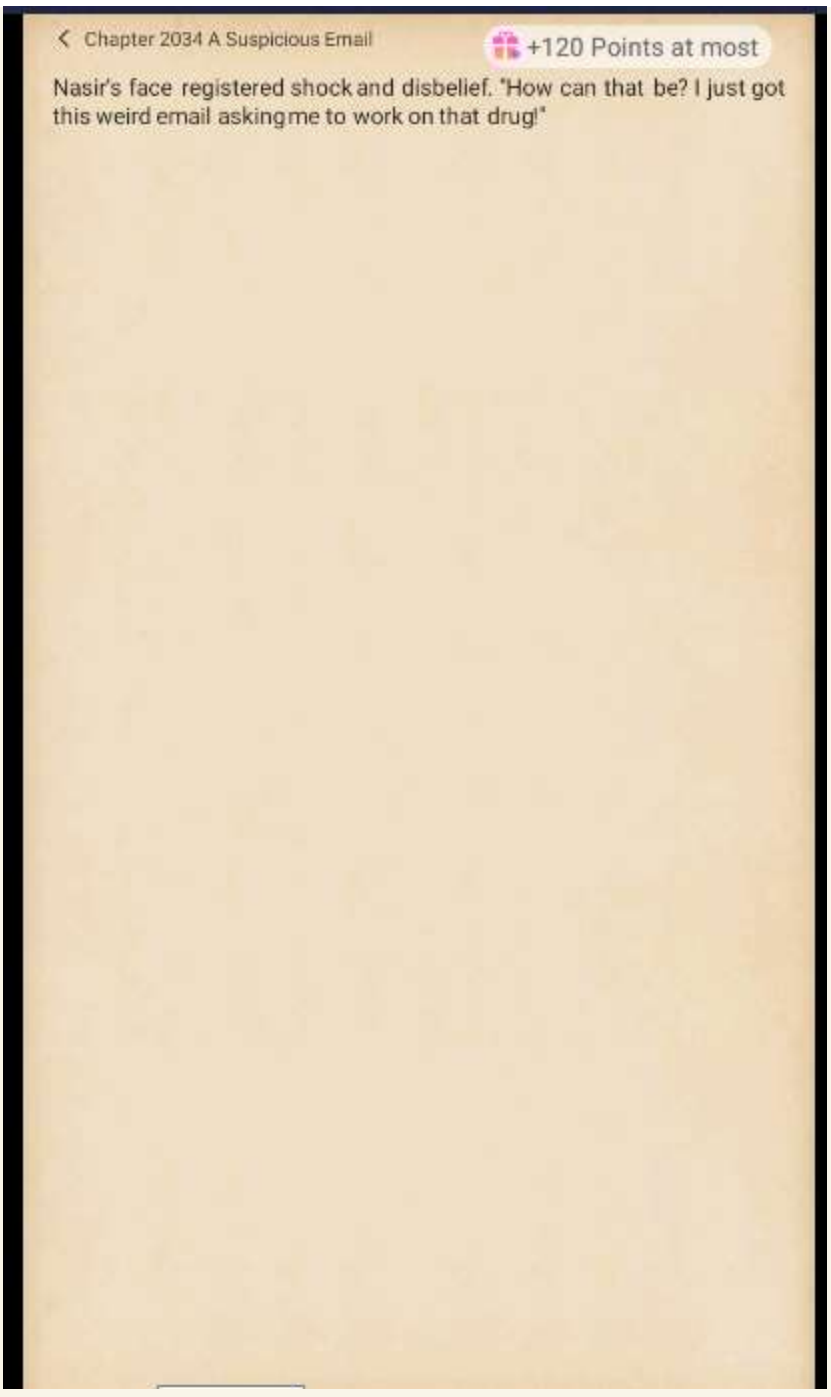

Hearing Trevor's revelation, Nasir's eyes widened in surprise. Being chosen as Trevor's best man was a clear sign of their deep friendship.

With a serious nod, Nasir responded, "Okay, I'm in!"

His expression lightened as he added, "You are going to get married soon. I guess I should start thinking about my own wedding plans with my girlfriend."

As Trevor turned to leave, Nasir called out to him, stopping him in his tracks, "Hey Trevor, some guy claiming to be from the Wright family approached me. He wanted to team up for some drug development project. I turned him down. Sounds fishy, doesn't it?"

Trevor, taken aback, replied, "That must've been Kenny Wright. But don't worry. Kenny is dead now. "

Nasir's face registered shock and disbelief. "How can that be? I just got this weird email asking me to work on that drug!"
