Chapter 2035 Return To The Sanderson Family's Ancestral...

Trevor's expression shifted dramatically , a mix of disbelief and urgency coloring his features. He urgently requested, "Nasir, I need to see that email immediately!"

Without hesitation, Nasir ushered Trevor into his office and pulled up the email.

Trevor scrutinized every word of the brief message, which requested Nasir's assistance in synthesizing a drug, and noticed an attached document containing a medicinal formula.

Nasir's voice was low and serious as he shared his observations. "I've examined this formula closely. The ingredients seem overly simplistic. It's as if this is only half of the actual recipe, needing another set of components to truly be effective."

Trevor, deep in thought, silently nodded. The notion that someone would so readily divulge a complete formula seemed implausible.

Despite racking his brain, no clear answers emerged. He decisively made a copy of the email and attached file, then advised, "Nasir, reject this individual's proposal. Involvement in this is far from benign and could bring you nothing but trouble."

Nasir, visibly relieved and earnest, agreed. That had been his primary concern. Following Trevor's counsel, he promptly deleted the email.

Leaving the Central Hospital, Trevor was engulfed in a whirlwind of thoughts. His priority was marrying Luisa, and he preferred to sideline this investigation for the moment.

He forwarded the copied email and formula file to Jasmine, instructing her to lead the Klein action team in probing the issue further.

Trevor sighed inwardly. Kenny was gone. Why was this drug issue still unresolved?

As he journeyed onward, a chilling thought struck Trevor.

Could Mobius be involved in this somehow?

Upon returning to the villa, Trevor managed to shake off his earlier despondency.

Whoever was orchestrating this, he was determined to uncover their identity in due time.

The following morning, Trevor and Luisa flew to Zayden, making their way back to the venerable Sanderson family house.

Upon their arrival, they were greeted by Trevor's father, Ronald.

With a firm resolve, Trevor announced, "Dad, I've decided to marry Luisa."

Ronald's initial surprise quickly gave way to a warm, approving smile as he regarded the bashful Luisa. He found himself increasingly pleased with her as his future daughter-in-law and expressed his joyous approval. "Excellent! The Sanderson family will finally welcome a new matriarch. Trevor, leave the wedding arrangements to me!"

Trevor responded with a grateful smile, then turned to Elwood. "Grandpa, there's something I need to understand about the medicine."

Ronald, admittedly unfamiliar with the details of the medicine, cast an inquisitive glance at Elwood upon hearing Trevor's inquiry.

Elwood, with a deep sigh, rose slowly and invited, "Trevor, let's discuss this in the study."

Upon hearing Elwood's words, Ronald also grasped that he intended to engage in a private conversation with Trevor.

Ronald nonchalantly reclined on the sofa to eat fruit. "Please, make yourself at home, Luisa. This is your home now too."

In the study, Elwood unraveled the mystery of the medicine to Trevor. "This medicine is the guarded secret of the top three clans, known only to their leaders. Among the Sanderson youth, you stand out, Trevor, and it's time you learned the truth. Remember our phone conversation about the medicine? How it's tailored for the direct descendants of these clans to enhance their compatibility?"

Trevor nodded in acknowledgment, vividly recalling their discussion.

Elwood pressed on, "Even for direct descendants, there's a significant risk of adverse reactions to the medicine. Our family's tradition of raising heirs in modesty until the age of nineteen is partly to mitigate these side effects."

A moment of clarity struck Trevor.

Elwood, looking at Trevor with a blend of admiration and pride, warmly expressed, "You've grown remarkably, Trevor. I am truly proud of you."

Basking in Elwood's praise, Trevor's thoughts drifted to Ruben, the traitor. In a casual tone, he inquired, "Grandpa, what became of Ruben in the end?"

At the mention of Ruben, Elwood's demeanor turned icy. "Ruben was charged with commercial crimes and handed over to the authorities."

Trevor's brow furrowed in contemplation.

The mention of Zayden's police station triggered feeling of unease.
