Chapter 2041 Mr. Sanderson

Serenity's cheeks turned red upon the impact of the slap. Shielding her face, she stood frozen, afraid to make a move.

Having struck Serenity, Chamberlain experienced a hint of unease.

In the end, this belonged to the domain of the Sanderson family. If the Sanderson family held him responsible, even being the son of Truman Construction Company's owner wouldn't provide him with an escape.

Trevor's countenance abruptly darkened. How audacious to strike someone employed by his family right before his eyes.

"Identity matters not. You must apologize for assaulting someone in this establishment!" Trevor huffed.

Observing his girlfriend's gaze, Chamberlain found solace. He scoffed. "Apologize? I've never offered apologies to anyone! You're merely a rustic seeking favor from the Sanderson family. How dare you have the store manager attend to you? You should wait for me to complete my shopping I hit the salesclerk simply because you prompted her to summon the manager! It's all your doing."

Trevor was infuriated by Chamberlain's nonsense. Just as he was about to teach this arrogant wastrel a lesson, a man in a suit and leather shoes emerged.

"What's goingon here?"

The man happened to be Guillermo Collins, the manager of the jewelry store. He emerged to investigate upon hearing the commotion within the store.

Glancing at Serenity, Guillermo furrowed his brow and inquired, "Serenity, what happened? Were you hit?"

He stood with a stern expression.

His gaze shifted between Trevor and Chamberlain.

Despite being a mere store manager, he harbored no fear of affluent young men, courtesy of his backing from the Sanderson family.

Guillermo, witnessing his employee's assault, seethed with anger.

Chamberlain was well aware of the source of Guillermo's confidence.

He aimed to implicate Trevor.

However, Trevor gestured towards the corner camera and derisively remarked, "The entire slapping incident is captured by the security camera. It's evident who is responsible."

Chamberlain knew he couldn't deny it, so he snorted and admitted unhappily, "I did hit her. Guillermo, for the sake of the Sanderson family, I will compensate the salesclerk by giving her the commission on all my expenditures today."

Guillermo's expression softened slightly as he approached Serenity, gently inquiring, "Serenity, do you find this apology acceptable?"

Serenity shielded her face with her hands, tears welling in her eyes. It was evident she sought nothing more than an apology from Chamberlain.

Trevor admonished sternly, "An apology is due today! Alternatively, we can escort you to the police station for their intervention!"

Chamberlain scoffed. "You rustic! How dare you interject? Silence yourself!"

Maintaining a serious demeanor, Trevor asserted, "The Sanderson family's establishment will never compromise an employee's dignity as a commodity. An apology is imperative!"

Chamberlain erupted in laughter. "Do you genuinely believe you represent the Sanderson family? Guillermo, can you escort this fool out?"

Wearing a stern expression, Trevor retrieved a long-held centurion card and presented it to Guillermo. He declared, "Guillermo, I'll submit one million as a deposit."

Both Chamberlain and Guillermo acknowledged the centurion card.

Chamberlain, especially, concealed his surprise but continued to taunt, "I never anticipated wealth from someone who appeared so unsophisticated. Yet this is Zayden. Money alone won't secure your standing here."

Trevor paid him no mind.

Guillermo accepted the card and swiped it, his countenance undergoing a sudden transformation. He regarded Trevor with respect and addressed him, "Mr. Sanderson!"

Upon swiping the card, the internal system confirmed it belonged to the Sanderson family's eldest son.

Finally, Chamberlain's arrogance faded. Confused, he inquired, "Mr. Sanderson? Wasn't this fellow a collateral member of the Sanderson family? Guillermo, did you confuse him with someone else?"

Reflecting on Chamberlain's audacity in provoking Trevor repeatedly, Guillermo's expression darkened abruptly, and he disregarded Chamberlain.

Trevor smiled and remarked, "Guillermo, revoke this individual's golden membership. Our Sanderson family's establishment has no use for such an arrogant customer."

Chamberlain's girlfriend, oblivious to the unfolding events, laughed heartily and quipped, "You rustic, do you genuinely believe you're important? I presume Guillermo referred to you as Mr. Sanderson due to your collateral lineage. Do you have any idea how much jewelry Chamberlain purchases from this store every year? We're esteemed patrons of this establishment!"
