

Chapter 15

Life sentence?

No need for a death penalty?

If William did that, it wouldn't be General Dorothy who died, but himself!

Nonetheless, no one in the Clark family had noticed William's gloomy face.

They all disagreed with Mrs. Clark's words.

"Mrs. Clark, we know that you are kind-hearted, but kindness should also be directed towards the right people, right? What if she switches from a life sentence to a fixed term? It'll be a disaster for the Clark family once she is released!"

"Mrs. Clark, hurry up and let Senior Colonel Sherman arrest and execute her. This kind of person will only be a scourge to the Clark family."

Everyone was defending Mrs. Clark. She was instantly in a good mood, and even the pain in her legs seemed to have been relieved.

She looked at William, her eyes brimming with tears. "Senior Colonel Sherman, as you can see, it's not that I'm cruel or heartless. It's just that this little b*tch has gone too far. She has lost all sense of basic humanity."

"The Clark family has already agreed to give her a death penalty. We request that you send her away and sentence her to death, Senior Colonel Sherman."

William frowned, and his face was livid. He sighed and thought to himself, "Old lady, if you want to die, go ahead. Why do you have to involve me in this..."

William felt that the situation was quite tricky to handle, and he was on the verge of breaking down.

In front of Dorothy, William was nothing!

Just as William was about to give up, Dorothy asked him with a smile, "William, did you hear what they said?"

What was going on?

How dare she talk to Senior Colonel Sherman in such a rebellious tone, even when she was about to die?

Everyone in the Clark family was stunned.

Did she know that there was already no escape for her, which was why she had long given up and become reckless?

“B*stared! How could you talk to Senior Colonel Sherman like that? You’re literally about to die! How dare you call him by his first name? Who are you to even address him like that?”

Mrs. Clark rebuked Dorothy and turned back to look at William.

“Senior Colonel Sherman, kindly take this rude b*stared away and sentence her to death immediately! The Clark family will not have any objection to that!”

However, William didn’t spare a glance at Mrs. Clark. Instead, he ordered the bodyguards of the Clark family, “Take them down!”

Everyone in the Clark family was overjoyed to hear his command.

They then looked at Dorothy with pity and gloating in their eyes.

Mrs. Clark’s expression was fierce as she snorted coldly.

That silly girl was too naïve to challenge her.

Mrs. Clark wasn’t able to get Dorothy killed before, but she would no longer spare Dorothy!

Dorothy would be sentenced to death immediately and have no chance of surviving!

If Dorothy wanted to blame someone for her predicament, she should blame her own stupidity!

When Elizabeth heard that William was going to take Dorothy away, her heart almost stopped.

No, that absolutely couldn’t happen!

“No no, you can’t do this. I beg you. please let Dorothy go. We will leave now, right now!” Elizabeth stepped forward and stood in front of Dorothy.

However, her frail and weak body couldn't handle the sudden movement, and she felt dizzy.

With quick reflexes, Dorothy caught Elizabeth and prevented her from falling down.

She helped Elizabeth sit in the car and comforted her in a soft voice, "Have a good rest first. I'll handle things here!"

Just as Dorothy was about to close the door, Margaret came to William with a flattering face and said coquettishly, "Senior Colonel Sherman, let's not let this little b*tch ruin our mood. Let's go in first..."
