

Chapter 17

Mrs. Clark's mind was buzzing after being slapped, and it took a couple of seconds for her eyes to gradually regain focus.

Her eyes were filled with fear when she looked at Dorothy again.

The current Dorothy was clearly no longer the cowardly Dorothy five years ago, who would be scolded or beaten up at no cost.

However, she couldn't allow Dorothy to humiliate the Clark family like that.

She stopped provoking Dorothy and turned her gaze to William.

She had to protect the Clark family!

"Senior Colonel Sherman, I don't know what Dorothy has done to you, but she's just someone the Clark family picked up from the streets. She's not worthy of you. There are so many other good girls in our family. Why don't you consider them?"

Mrs. Clark's speech was somewhat muddled, but she tried her best to articulate herself so that she was coherent.

Hearing that, Martha, who was being arrested, immediately picked up on the situation and said, "Senior Colonel Sherman, I like you! I fell in love with you once you appeared!"

When Martha finished her passionate confession, she immediately became shy and vulnerable. "Senior Colonel Sherman, even if you like my cousin, Dorothy, I don't mind. I won't compete with her for fame. As long as I have a tiny place in your heart, I will be satisfied."

Her pitiful look evoked sympathy and tenderness in others.

She had the same thought as Mrs. Clark. Dorothy must have used dirty tricks to get William's support.

Since William found Dorothy appealing, there was no reason for him to not find Martha attractive.

Martha reckoned that she was a hundred or even ten thousand times better than Dorothy.

On top of that, Margaret also took advantage of the situation and echoed, “Yes, Senior Colonel Sherman, Martha has admired the soldiers of the Ministry of Defense since she was a child. You are so excellent. Why not stay here tonight if you don’t mind? Martha will serve you well.”

On the other hand, William’s mind was buzzing.

What was going on?

Were they suspecting that General Dorothy had an improper relationship with him? Were they even accusing General Dorothy of seducing him?

The weirdest thing was, what was Martha doing? Why was she confessing her love to him in public?

Even Martha’s mother was questionable... was she inviting him to sleep with Martha?

How ridiculous!

What was wrong with the Clark family?

Just when William was rendered speechless, Dorothy opened her mouth in time.

She looked at Martha with disdain and said, “Do you think Senior Colonel Sherman is interested in someone like you?”

“I remember you saying it would be an honor for me to have Mrs. Clark marry me to Mr. Crawford. Don’t worry. You’ll obtain the same honor. I will arrange several old men for you!”

After saying that, Dorothy’s face darkened, and she ordered the bodyguards in a cold voice, “Take all the Clark family members to the Northon Prison with the offense of insulting high-rankings of the Ministry of Defense!”

“Yes!”

All the bodyguards answered in sync.

Seeing that the bodyguards were going to escort the Clark family away, Mrs. Clark hurriedly shouted, “Senior Colonel Sherman, we didn’t insult you. This b*tch is talking nonsense!”

“Senior Colonel Sherman, even if you are a senior member of the Ministry of Defense, you have to follow the rules! You can’t wrong an innocent person!”

An innocent person?

The corners of William’s mouth twitched when he heard that.

He no longer wanted to hear another word from them!

Those people were out of their minds!

How did they dare insult Dorothy as if they had a death wish? He could only address her as General Dorothy in public if it weren’t for her sensitive identity!

However, those idiots had absolutely no sense of awareness! They had no idea who they had just offended!

Mrs. Clark was completely panicked when she saw William’s lack of response.

If they were sentenced for insulting the Ministry of Defense, everyone in the Clark family would be imprisoned for at least ten years!

If so, wouldn’t the Clark family be destroyed?!

No!

In her desperation, Mrs. Clark had a sudden strike of inspiration.
