Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 101 THE LAST CHANCE

On the way back to the company... Winnie was immersed in her thoughts. Although she had known the reason, she couldn't think of a solution. That woman surely was important to Brian. Otherwise, Brian wouldn't have loved her to such an extent. Neither would he have explained to her in advance that there was no future for the two of them. What should she do? How should she communicate with Brian? She didn't care about how many women Brian had ever had. But she couldn't see Luke being ruined because of a woman. That evening, Brian didn't go to Winnie's place. Instead, he went back to his home. He had to talk to Penny. When he returned home, Brian felt that it didn't look like a home at all. He used to like this villa. However, at this time, he felt that it wasn't the same as Winnie's house on the 18th floor which made him rest-assured and peaceful. Penny was quite excited about Brian's sudden return. And she couldn't recall how long it had been since Brian had been here the last time. They finished dinner together, sat on the sofa in the living room, and watched the news on TV. Although there was no communication between them during dinner and there was a certain distance between the two of them while watching TV, Penny couldn't contain her happiness. Penny found a topic to break the silence, "Brian, do you want some coffee? I'll go prepare some for you." "No need." Brian's voice was unusually cold. Penny continued to show her goodwill, "How about a cup of tea?" Brian loudly refused, "I said no." After all, he didn't come back here to drink tea today. "Penny, I want to ask you something. Winnie received an email indicating that the sender's address was here. Can you explain it to me?" Brian's face was gloomy. And he stared straight at Penny gloomily. Then he saw that Penny's face suddenly changed and that she had a fluttered look in her eyes. A moment later... "I don't understand what you're talking about. What kind of email did she receive? And how could it be sent from us here?" Penny's voice trembled a little. And despite her efforts to conceal it, she exposed herself. Brian saw all Penny's reaction. And because of this, his black eyes were even more bitter. Brian roared loudly and angrily, "You don't understand. In that case, do you want me to check your computer?" And his eyes were dark and frightening. "I indeed..." "Don't get lucky. I can find it as well even if you delete it." Brian angrily interrupted Penny's words, leaving Penny speechless. And she dared not to look up at Brian. "Penny, I'm telling you, put your little tricks away. No matter what your reason for doing so is, you're affecting my private life." "Listen to me, I'm giving you one last chance. If you're making the same mistake, don't blame me for being unkind. Penny, you should understand that I never give others a chance easily." Brian got up and left with a big stride after his angry warning. If it weren't for his grandfather's acquisition plan, he wouldn't have tolerated Penny for a second. And he wouldn't have given her a chance twice, let alone warning her only. Penny, who was timid, felt relieved after Brian left. But then, a sinister look burst out of her eyes. How could she give it up? How could she watch Brian be snatched away by Winnie? The more Brian favored Winnie, the more aggressive she would become. She could get lost. But she could never be defeated by Winnie. Even if it was a fight to the death, she had to fight to the end. Brian drove away alone and naturally came to the downstairs of Winnie's house as if he had naturally gone back to his own home. After the car was parked, he was about to get out of the car. Then, Albert's call came. "President Bennet, Calvin, and Morgan are both off the plane. Should they see you now?" "No. Tell them to get ready to be on duty tomorrow." Brian originally wanted to see them.

But at this moment, he couldn't leave since he had already arrived at Winnie's house. And he had already made the decision, making the discussion no longer needed. By the time Brian came back, the child had fallen asleep. And Winnie was lying in bed, intending to rest. She was quite surprised to see Brian come back. Winnie asked in confusion, "Why did you come back?" Brian had said he was going home and wouldn't come back today. So what happened? "I couldn't sleep over there. So I came back." As Brian spoke, he came to the bed and sat down. He had unconsciously called his home "the place over there" without realizing it. "Have you eaten dinner?" Brian's answer made Winnie a little surprised. And at the same time, she felt a kind of inexplicable joy. "Yes." Brian took a deep breath and comfortably laid down next to Winnie. "Then rest. It's not early." Winnie moved to the side a little so that Brian could lie in bed more comfortably. Unexpectedly, Brian embraced her in his arms. "What are you doing again? We can't do anything when I have my period." Thinking that Brian was going to do something bad again, Winnie hurriedly opened her mouth to say she was inconvenienced. "I didn't want to do anything to you. Let's just sleep like this." Brian whispered. He found that he was in a situation when he couldn't sleep without Winnie by his side. Could he leave Winnie if this kind of situation going on? "Go to sleep." Winnie breathed a sigh of relief. After that, she thought of something and wanted to discuss it with Brian. "I have something to discuss with you before going to sleep." "Say it." Sensing that Brian's voice was still cold which indicated that he wasn't sleepy, Winnie continued to speak, "My sister is going to take the college entrance exam. And now that she is starting to do her review. I want her to come back here early to familiarize herself with the environment. She..." Brian interjected unexpectedly, "What does she coming back early have to do with me?" "You are naughty. Don't interrupt my words. The fact that I am talking to you means it has something to do with you." Winnie chided in a sweet voice, making the conversation sound more like a flirtation between lovers. However, his soft voice sounded somewhat petulant and cute in Brian's ears. Brian felt that he was touched at this moment. And he unconsciously hooked up the corner of his mouth, revealing a light smile. Then he unconsciously embraced Winnie more tightly. When Winnie works on usual days, she is the kind of shrewd, competent, and stable white-collar beauty. And today, Brian saw Winnie's mischievous and lovely side. he simply didn't want to believe that such a woman like her would be a liar. Winnie didn't realize what kind of impact her words had on Brian. Without hearing Brian's objection, she continued to speak, "My sister is coming back to live here. And it will be inconvenient for you to be here as well. Can you go back to your home and stay there during this time?" It was Winnie's ultimate goal. She didn't want her relationship with Brian to be known to her family. Sooner or later, they would have to be separated. Why did she have to make many people misunderstand them? "How come it is inconvenient? there are so many rooms. If the house is small, I'll change it to a bigger one for you." Brian had been looking forward to this opportunity. And he wanted to take advantage of this opportunity to get a new house for Winnie so that she could stay away from Leo. "The house is big enough. No need to change it. I mean I don't want my family to know about our relationship. My sister surely will tell my aunt if she knows. And my aunt will scold me to death after she finds out the truth." Winnie wanted to scold Brian, saying that he was stupid. When it came to such a simple thing, she shouldn't have needed to explicitly say it. Brian, who wasn't convinced, asked, "Why should I scold you? How am I not good enough?" Whoever would come here, he wouldn't leave. Winnie helplessly rolled her eyes at Brian. And she couldn't help but be speechless instantly/ "How come he has the nerve to ask so? It seems he indeed doesn't know how bad he is." "You are good in every aspect. It is not good for you to have a family. Aunt will say that I am a mistress. She hates the mistress. If Auntie finds out about this, she surely will kill me or get rid of me. Then you won't be able to see me from now on." Even if her aunt wouldn't do anything to her, with Brian's bad temper and his cold face he surely would affect Vanessa's study. Winnie didn't want such a thing to happen. After all, everyone could only take part in the college entrance examination once. After all, the college entrance examination would affect a person's life. Brian warned her with discontent, "Winnie, I am warning you once. You aren't a mistress. I am not married." He hated the word "mistress" more than Winnie's aunt did. "But everyone in B City knows that your wife is Penny. You can't deny this, can you?" Winnie's tone remained relaxed. Because she had been used to this matter. And this matter couldn't affect her mood anymore. "I don't deny it. But I can't do anything about these. Moreover, they can't represent the law." Brian never proclaimed that Penny was his wife. The reason why outsiders knew about this was that his grandpa and the Burns family were bragging about it everywhere. But soon, the situation will change. Soon, Winnie wouldn't think that she was a mistress. Winnie began to plead Brian, "Forget it. It makes no difference to me. You only have to promise me to move out and live outside for the time being, okay? After my sister finishes her entrance exam, you can come back." She knew this was against the verbal agreement between the two of them. But she had no choice. Because she had to safeguard Vanessa's study environment. Winnie's request made Brian feel pleased in his heart. But he still had something to say. "You said that both your sister and aunt will come back here, right? If yes, they will know about our relationship sooner or later. Do you think we need to keep hiding it from them?" Winnie was silent for a moment. And this time, she became depressed. "They probably will come back a few months later. And a few months later, the woman you love probably will come back." Winnie was now thinking every day about what she should do if that woman suddenly appeared and how she should deal with the situation then. Hearing Winnie's hypothesis, Brian tightened his eyebrows and embraced Winnie somewhat loosely. "I will go back to live at my home during this time." Brian's cold voice rang. He was no longer insistent. Winnie was right. If the woman he loved came back, their relationship would end immediately. So the fewer people knew about it, the better it would be. Brian completely let go of Winnie and turned his back to Winnie. "Go to sleep." Winnie once again felt sour in her heart. She didn't feel good at this time. But all she could do was bear it. She gently approached Brian and put her forehead against Brian's spacious back. "Thank you for your understanding." Her words indicated that she was quite sad and depressed. The next morning, in the lobby of the first floor at the Bennet Group's building... At this time, four people led by Brian walked into the lobby of the first floor at the Bennet Group's imposing building. He looked tall and straight. And his eyes were as profound as the torchlight. His face was cool and hard. A hand-made suit that looked fit and slim set off his uprightness and toughness, indicating that he was majestic and inviolable. And the three assistants behind him all wore dark formal suits as well. With a cold and hard look on their faces, they looked outstanding. Among these three assistants, except for Albert who showed up frequently, some newcomers simply didn't know the other two ones. And they were Calvin and Morgan who was urgently recalled by Brian. The reason why Brian brought the three of them here together was that he wanted to caution everyone that his trusted subordinates were back and that those who should be restrained should do their part. ☐

CHAPTER 102 BE READY FOR THE ACQUISITION

The four of them took two elevators and went straight to the 30th floor. Brian went directly into the office. While the three assistants stood neatly outside the door of the President's office. As for this kind of formation, Klara hadn't seen it for a long time. And she was surprised to see the three assistants at the same time. Usually, Brian wouldn't call Calvin and Morgan back without an emergency. Even if he would, he would ask her to inform them. But why didn't she know anything about the fact that they would come back? Before Klara had time to greet them, she saw them walk into the President's office. She could only put away her doubts, planning to voice her concern once there was a chance. It was silent in Brian's office. And the three assistants stood neatly, waiting for Brian's orders. Brian spoke with a cold and dash voice, "You will all be by my side from now on. And someone will take over your work. Start working for me today. The first task for you is to acquire the Burns Group." Brian gave an order without any emotion. This was his major decision last night. Whether his grandfather agreed or not, he couldn't delay it any longer. Continuing to delay this matter would only cause harm to Winnie. He couldn't give Winnie any promises. Neither could he give her a bright future. But he couldn't let her suffer unequal treatment or become someone else's prey. Brian's sudden decision took the three assistants by surprise. The three of them looked at each other. In the end, Albert spoke, "President Bennet, the Burns Group is still relatively solid now. It's not an easy thing for us to acquire it. And MT's acquisition has also reached a critical moment. It should be a new challenge for us to do both at the same time." Albert voiced his opinion, which wasn't against Brian's decision. However, as a special assistant, he had to remind Brian. "I am asking you guys to prepare everything and start working on it now. After all, you can't wait until there is a chance before you start working on it. Because everything will be too late. And as for this thing, you should personally get it done. Whoever leaks the secret is, don't blame me for not giving you a chance." Brian's tone sounded bitterly cold. And his eyes were dark. He knew that the Burns Group was only a petty problem for the time being. But he had to prepare well in advance. As long as Penny was working against Winnie, he had to give her a "surprise" and make her regret it for the rest of her life. "Don't worry, President Bennet, we won't reveal the secret." The three men replied in unison. Hearing Brian said so, they knew what to do. Brian continued to give orders, "Albert, hand over the matter of acquiring MT to Calvin. And the planning case of acquiring the Burns Group will be dominated by Morgan. Your main focus during this time is on Winnie and Penny. Make sure to find out the truth for me." "Okay, President Bennet, I will hand my work over in a moment. Albert understood Brian's words. Calvin and Morgan knew Penny, a big shot. However, as for who Winnie was, they didn't know about it. Calvin and Morgan were looking at Albert in confusion. Then someone knocked on the door. After that, Winnie pushed the door and walked in. Albert turned back and saw that it was Winnie. "Director Winnie." After a simple greeting, Albert gave an affirmative look to Calvin and Morgan. And the two of them instantly understood everything. Calvin and Morgan turned back to look at Winnie. Both of them, who were attracted by Winnie's beauty and temperament, couldn't move their eyes off her for a while. Before Winnie came in, she had asked Klara, thinking that no one was there. But two people were standing in front of her whom she didn't know. She felt a little embarrassed instantly. "President Bennet, you are busy. I'll come over later." Winnie said indifferently and turned around, only to be called by Brian. "Wait! They're going out." Brian looked at Albert. And Albert got his point. "Director Winnie, these two are Mr. Bennet's assistants, Calvin and Morgan." It was inevitable that they would have to be in frequent contact with Winnie in the future. So Albert's introduction was a must. He spoke while pointing to the two men beside him. Then he looked at Calvin and Morgan, indicating them to continue the introduction. "This is the new software development director in our company, Ms. Winnie." When Albert introduced Calvin and Morgan like this, Calvin and Morgan were even more sure of their suspicions that this woman surely was connected deeply with President Bennet. The two men greeted her together, "Hello, Director Winnie." "Hello! Guys, hello!" Winnie said modestly and casually with a bright smile naturally blooming on her face. After the greeting was done, Albert, Calvin, and Morgan went out together. As soon as the three of them walked out and closed the door to the President's office, they began to whisper to each other Calvin said somewhat excitedly, "Albert, I guessed it right. They surely are connected in that way." Morgan asked curiously, "I guess so. I always feel that President Bennet is not as cold as before, which is sure because of her. Albert, you should know everything, tell us." "Stop it. You two are so nosy. Be careful in case Director Winnie will hear your words." Albert stopped walking forward, only to be once again surrounded by Calvin and Morgan. "Let's find a secluded place and talk there for a few words." Calvin pulled Albert to the lounge. And Albert decisively refused. "I'll tell you guys in detail when I have time someday. It is fine that you guys just remember that you have to respect Director Winnie now. Otherwise, nobody can save you." "When will your gossip end? I have been standing here for a while. Can't you see me?" As soon as Albert finished his words, Klara interrupted their conversation. "Klara, long time no see." Calvin and Morgan greeted her somewhat awkwardly before they stopped being curious. They were usually quite calm and sophisticated. But the fact that there was a new woman beside Brian made them fail to calm themselves down. Calvin had been with Brian for five years. And Morgan had been with Brian for four years. They had never seen that Brian was attentive to any woman. But today, Brian asked Calvin and Morgan to investigate Winnie. The two of them could no longer calm down. The fact that Brian had a woman by his side was much more shocking to them than acquiring the Burns Group. Klara asked in confusion, "Long time no see. why are you guys back all of a sudden?" That was the reason why she had been waiting for them to come out. Calvin answered Klara's question naturally, "Our mission was completed ahead of schedule. And our work performance was excellent. So we came back early." President Bennet had just finished instructing them not to let anyone including Klara know why they came back for. "Is it so simple?" Klara still had doubts. "Of course. Otherwise, what do you think?" Calvin remained calm. And the look on his face didn't reveal any clues. But he could see that Klara's eyes weren't as distractions-free as before. Morgan opened his mouth and ended the brief conversation, "Well, the four of us should get together to talk again sometime tonight. See you tonight, Klara." In the President's office... Winnie put the documents on Brian's desk and asked curiously, "Are these two assistants your recruits?" Brian didn't immediately look through the documents. Instead, he got up, came to Winnie's side, and answered Winnie as he was extremely close to her, "One has been by my side for five years. And the other one for four years. Do you think they are recruits?" Winnie unconsciously took a step backward. After all, they were in the company. And someone would come in at any time, especially Klara. If she saw them so close, she would be against her in every way. But she forgot that it was the staircases behind her. Failing to stand firmly, she completely leaned backward. Fortunately, Brian took action quickly and easily put a hand around Winnie's waist to hold her, making Winnie free from physical injuries. Brian embraced Winnie in front of his chest and scolded her, "You are an adult. How come you are so indiscreet?" While Winnie seemed to haven't yet gotten over the shock. There was still a panicked look in her eyes. Winnie blamed him softly, "It's all your fault. If you hadn't suddenly approached me, how would I have stepped backward?" At that time, they agreed not to let anyone know about their relationship. If it was confirmed by the employees in the company, they would judge her. "No one else is here. What are you afraid of? Not everyone can just barge into my office.." Brian still tightly hugged Winnie without the intention of letting her go. "Let go. This is your office. You said we should separate our work from our private life." Winnie was eager to break free from his arms. She couldn't guarantee that Klara wouldn't come in. Brian helplessly let go of Winnie, his face clouded up a bit. Brian asked in a low voice, "When will your sister come over?" "It's not confirmed yet. But she surely will arrive within ten days." "When your sister is here, you have to be on call. And you can't make excuses to refuse me." Brian got serious. Last night, he had forgotten to say this After all, her sister would be here for more than a month. He surely had to contact Winnie from time to time. "Should I show up every time you call me? I sound like MYN to you. As long as you aren't excessive, I will be at your call." As Winnie said these words, she felt uncomfortable in her heart. Her current state was even worse than being an MYN. So far, she had made sacrifices without asking for a little return. The only thing that comforted her was that Luke was by her side. Brian's eyes darkened a few points. And he didn't continue to speak. Winnie continued to speak, "Go to my place tonight. I want to tell you something." It was time to solve Brian's icy attitude towards Luke. Although she hadn't yet come up with any solution, she couldn't delay it after Vanessa arrived here, which would only affect the recovery of Luke's illness. Brian said indifferently, "I know. But it's going to be later. I have a social engagement." The time he spent on Winnie was already beyond his budget. He thought that they could talk about it at night. After Winnie left, Brian started to concentrate on his work. But he would think of Winnie's slightly sad eyes when she spoke just now. He felt that the way he spoke to her probably wasn't appropriate. He didn't want to let her out of his sights for a long time. However, he told her that she should be at his call instead. His words made him look so domineering that he didn't care about her feelings. However, she was suffering all of these in silence. Was it because of Luke only? Luke wasn't connected biologically to her at all. Why did she have to suffer like this because of Luke? After getting off work, Winnie picked up the children and took them home. Seeing her carrying a lot of things in her hands, the two children wanted to help her, only to be refused by her. Walking from the parking lot towards the door of the unit, Winnie felt that her hands were strangled in pain. As she wanted to put down the things to rest for a while, a pair of large hands held all for her in time. Then a warm and somewhat magnetic voice rang, "Why did you buy so many things? I will help you take them." It was Leo who said heartily. Then he picked up all the things in Winnie's hands. "They are too heavy. Or I'll do it by myself." Seeing Leo carry so many things for her, Winnie felt somewhat embarrassed. She rushed to reach out to pick up the things. But Leo dodged her. "My strength seems to be greater than yours. Go quickly. Walk a little slowly. I can't carry them any longer either." As Leo jokingly said, he slightly hooked up his lips. And his eyes were warm. "Oh, then hurry up and go." As Winnie said dumbly, she hurried forward.

Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 103 SHOULD WE START ALL OVER AGAIN?

They went into the elevator together and put their things down to relax a little. "Why not go online shopping? They can be delivered home, which will be more convenient." Leo looked at Winnie as well as the two children. Carrying so many things made his palm in pain. Winnie said with a smile on her face, "I rarely shop online. After all, I am a woman with children. If there are always people at home, I will find it risky. Although I think too much about it, it is good to be careful." The look on her face didn't show the hardships she, a woman with children, had endured. Nor did she have any complaints. "Yes, it's good to be careful." Leo looked at Winnie who was strong and optimistic with infinite emotions inside. In his opinion, she deserved to be happy. She deserved a man who loved her. But fate, which was naughty, made her have such a life with many twists and turns. "Are you quite busy these days? How come I haven't seen you?" Winnie couldn't remember how many days she hadn't seen Leo. Ever since the day she saw him at the reunion, it seemed she had no memory of him anymore. "I just came back from a business trip." Leo directly came home from the airport. Without seeing Winnie for so many days, he somewhat missed her. "You just came back. And you surely are tired after a business trip, right? Don't cook tonight. Come to have dinner at my home." As soon as Winnie finished her words, the elevator arrived on the 18th floor. Leo sent Winnie's things to Winnie's house before he turned around and went back home. When it was time for dinner, Leo came over to eat in Winnie's house. He took a shower and changed into convenient home clothes, finally somewhat getting rid of the exhaustion. Looking at the sumptuous dishes on the table, Leo was in a good mood. He made a hypothesis, that was, if Winnie was his wife and that if the two children were his, how happy he should be. It was a pity that he had ruined the possibility to be happy by himself. Winnie put the last dish on the table and greeted Leo, "Sit down and enjoy the food. The dishes will be cold in a while." Leo jokingly said while sitting down, "They are so sumptuous and eye-catching. I can't even bear to eat them." "Eye candy can't fill the stomach. If you don't eat anything, your stomach will be grumpy. Eat some. My two babies, I have worked so hard on cooking. You should eat more as well." Winnie curled up the corner of her mouth, revealing a beautiful arc. A brilliant glow was reflected in her eyes. And her face was overflowing with satisfying pleasure. Ever since she knew that Luke was suffering from depression, she hadn't ever looked sad in front of the child. "Okay, Mommy." "Good, Auntie." "Good, Winnie." Leo joined in the fun, making everyone laugh. Every time Leo was here, the atmosphere inside Winnie's house was different from that when Brian was here. When Leo was here, the atmosphere was harmonious and energetic. While Brian was here, the atmosphere was gloomy and cold. Leo and Brian had completely different temperaments without one being warm-hearted and the other being cold. As usual, the two children finished eating first and went to play in the living room. Only Winnie and Leo were left at the table. Winnie instructed Leo, "You should eat a little more." Leo continued with a smile on his face, "Well, I do eat more. The dishes are so delicious I can't bear to put down my chopsticks again." "Winnie, when did you cook so well? In the past, your cooking skills were not as good as they are now." Winnie said somewhat subtly, "I all cooked in a daze in the past. Of course, my cooking skills back then weren't as good as they are now. Since we have Megan, her spleen and stomach make her fail to digest food properly. So I began to pay attention to the combination of food and meals. And I try my best to make Megan like my dishes. As the time goes by, my cooking skills naturally are better." In the past, she didn't need to cook, let alone think about cooking good meals. After losing her parents, she has become the head of the family, which meant that she had to be proficient in everything. Her aunt had asthma. And the fumes would make her uncomfortable. As long as Winnie was around, she never let her aunt walk into the kitchen. As she cooked for her aunt over the years, she got good cooking skills. Leo said unconsciously, "Mmm, they are delicious. They taste like the ones at home." Winnie raised her eyes to take a look at him and blandly withdrew her gazes. "Did dishes cooked by me taste like the ones at home? Where is my home?" From the moment she was abandoned by Leo, she had let go of the idea of having a home and also cut off her connections with being happy. Leo could sense Winnie's depression at this time. He knew how hard it was for her to raise two children on her own. At this moment, he had an impulse that although Winnie was with children, he wanted to guard her for his life, make her happy, and give her a warm home. Brian put down his chopsticks, feeling his heart was thumping. He didn't know whether he should say it or not. But now he couldn't control himself. Leo could only speak tentatively so as not to scare Winnie, "Winnie, can we start all over again?" Winnie said jokingly, "Are you kidding? How can we start all over again after our relationship is over? How come you are bribed by this meal of mine and want to get me out of a messy situation?" Because she didn't feel that Leo's words were serious. The current Leo was even better than he used to be. Even so, whoever he was, she couldn't afford to be connected to him. So Winnie could only take his words as a joke. "Winnie, I'm not joking. I'm serious." Leo suddenly got serious. Since he had said it, he should make his position clear. Otherwise, he would still regret it in the future. Winnie politely refused, "Then turn your serious words into a joke. I have no intention to find a boyfriend. And I have children. I will drag you down." Every word of Leo came so late that everything was destined to have no relationship with her anymore. "I don't mind that you have children. I can accept Megan and like her. She won't be a burden to me. I surely will treat her as if..." Before Leo could finish his words, he was interrupted by Winnie. "Leo, besides Megan, I have to take care of Luke. He can't live together with Penny. I don't want Penny to ruin the child's life." Winnie couldn't refuse Leo directly for fear of hurting him. So she could only find various reasons. However, Luke was indeed one of the reasons why she couldn't get married. "Winnie..." Leo still wanted to try to make an effort, only to hold himself back from saying anything in the end. As for Luke, he could accept him as well. But Brian surely wouldn't let Luke be with him. As for Winnie's excuse, he didn't know how to deal with it for the time being. And even if he said it, he would be likely to be refused as well. "Leo, we are friends. And we will always be friends. No matter who it is, I won't get married in this life." Winnie's words of refusal could only go so far. Leo, who was a smart person, surely understood her meaning. Winnie curled up the corner of her mouth and yet looked so helpless. Leo had become the past to her. The past was where memories lay. And memories proved that they could never go back to their old days. Leo couldn't help but continue to ask, "What if the one who would marry you was Brian?" Leo guessed in secret that the reason why Winnie was taking care of Luke so heartedly was that she hoped that she could always be by Brian's side. Hearing Leo's words, Winnie grinned almost immediately. "No way. Brian and I are in different worlds. The day when we get married will never come. I just said that I wouldn't marry anyone in this life, including Brian." "It is good for me to take care of the children, guard Aunt and my sister just like this for my life." Winnie took a deep breath and exhaled the inexplicable depression in her heart. Then she continued to speak, "It is probably because of the experience of family changes that I don't trust anyone now, especially men. I managed to come through all of these alone for so many years. But I succeeded. And I do not need anyone's help. To me, men..." "I'm sorry, Winnie, I caused all this. It's my fault." Hearing Winnie's words, Leo blamed himself even more. It was his fault that she had lost confidence in men. But it was too late for him to regret it now. Leo felt chaotic and painful in his heart. And he indeed wanted to turn back time and guard her against all odds. In that case, everything that had happened to her wouldn't have happened. And Winnie couldn't have met Brian. Winnie was silent for a moment. "Don't blame yourself. It's all decided by fate. To be honest I indeed hated you when I thought you abandoned me at first. But now, I don't blame you. You are one of the victims. In the future, don't think about these things. Pay attention to other women. You don't have any chances with me. Don't waste all your time on me." Although Winnie couldn't fully relate to Leo's feelings at this moment, she felt that it was right for her to be decisive. Just like what she had done in college, since there was no possibility between the two of them, she couldn't give Leo any hope. By the time Brian returned home, Winnie had washed up and gone to bed. He pushed open the bedroom door. And the smell of alcohol came with him. Before he could reach the bed, Winnie sensed his smell. Winnie spoke softly, "Did you drink?" "Yeah. Not much." Brian, who was exhausted, threw himself directly on the bed. "Do you still have the spirit to listen to my words? If you're too tired, wash up and go to sleep. We'll talk about it tomorrow." As Winnie spoke, she sat up and helped Brian undress. However, Brian held her hands, preventing her from moving. "Say it." Brian's words sounded pretty firm. He hadn't drunk much. It was because he was in a bad mood that he was tired. "Then I'll say it." "I have software for medical surgery that can greatly reduce the risk of surgery in my hands, which is a safeguard for patients. I want to ask if you are willing to acquire it. If you aren't willing to, I will sell it to Daenerys' company." Winnie didn't directly talk to Brian about Luke. Instead, she talked about the software. In the beginning, if she wanted to stand firm in the Bennet Group, she had to have formed and solid work. Now it seemed there was no need. No matter how much she had achieved and no matter how outstanding and amazing she was in her work, she would leave when the time came in the end. So she was thinking about selling this software so that she could pay back some of what she owed to Romeo. In that case, her pressure would be much less. "Sell it to the Bennet Group. It will be your performance. And the company will give you a bonus and give you a commission. It's more than what you will get out of selling it." When it came to things related to his company, Brian wouldn't be ambiguous. Although he didn't know how the actual application of this software would be yet, he didn't doubt Winnie's capability at work. "Then I will sell it to the Bennet Group." Winnie sighed and finally relaxed a bit. Brian opened his mouth and asked, "Are you in short of money?" Winnie looked at Brian's bright eyes for a moment and spoke in a low voice, "Yes, I need money." For the first time, she talked about her financial situation so seriously with Brian. Brian kept calling her a liar. So Winnie tried not to mention her financial situation as much as possible so as not to make him warier of her again. "Why didn't you say so earlier? How much do you need?" Brian tightened his eyebrows again. And his voice sounded much colder and lower.

Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 104 THANK YOU FOR MAKING ME HAVE MY WAY

Every time Winnie saw Brian like this, she felt her heart had been stabbed again. "Not much. After I sell the software to the Bennet Group, my sister still has a house that can be sold. It is enough." Winnie didn't say exactly how much she needed. If she did, Brian would think she was asking him for money. Brian suddenly sat up and loosened the hand that had been holding Winnie. His face was gloomy in this instant. And his voice was even colder and harder. "A piece of software could at least be sold at more than 600,000 dollars. A house that is at most 80 square feet will be sold at more than 3 million dollars in B City. How many external debts do you have now? Is this the reason why you cheat others' money everywhere?" Winnie, who was stunned, looked at Brian who had an angry look on his face, slowly revealing a bitter look. She knew Brian would think like that. Even though she answered carefully, she still provoked him and displeased him. "Well, you could say that." It was undeniable that she had a lot of external debts. But she had never lied to anyone. When would Brian stop treating her as a liar? "You..." Brian wanted to get angry. But when he saw Winnie's bitter expression, he couldn't bear to speak anything further. He took out a bank card from his pocket and threw it directly in front of Winnie. "Here is 10 million dollars. Use it to pay off the debt." Winnie looked at the bank card with a huge amount of money in front of her and couldn't say what kind of feeling she was feeling at this moment. She didn't feel any joy but humiliation after the success of getting money from Brian. This bank card mercilessly trampled on her self-esteem, making her feel ashamed in front of Brian. Winnie picked up the bank card and felt it burning her hands. Then she placed it in front of Brian, "Thank you, I don't need your money. I can take care of my external debts by myself. After the house is sold and the software is sold, there will be some money left. I will have a new loan to buy a house for my sister. The remaining money can suffice to be my down payment." "I don't want to be in debt to anyone. Even if I will be a little bitter and tired, at least, I can be more at ease in my heart." Winnie refused Brian's help. For her, she'd rather owe Sidney and Daenerys's rather than make Brian look down upon her as a liar. "Why do you have to cheat others if you have such guts? Why not appear in front of me openly and honestly right from the beginning?" Brian couldn't help but be angry. His cold voice was like a sharp dagger stuck in Winnie's heart. She wanted to pull out the dagger, only to fail. Winnie held back her aggression, using her greatest inhibitions in controlling herself not to be anxious or annoyed. Because she hadn't said more important things yet. "Stop talking. it doesn't matter if you have guts or not. This matter will pass. I still can solve it." "You..." "There is a second thing I want to tell you. If I don't say it, after my sister is here, there is no chance." Winnie decisively interrupted Brian's words, indicating that she didn't want to continue this topic. Brian still yelled loudly and angrily, "Say it." At this moment, his anger was even greater because Winnie had arrogantly refused his help. "Can you put your anger away for a moment? Can we talk calmly like others do?" Winnie simply couldn't stand Brian's irritable emotions. She had endured internal injuries so much that she couldn't bear them. Brian stared at Winnie. Looking at her expression indicating that she was about to be stubborn, he felt somewhat reluctant to go on talking. He, who tightened his eyebrows, slowly stopped furrowing his eyebrows. And the gloom on his face dispersed. He eased down his tone as well, "Say it." Winnie sighed, thinking that this should be the limit of Brian. "I want to talk to you about Luke. Your attitude towards him is too cold, which directly affects the child's physical and mental health." "This is the way I get along with Luke. This is the kind of attitude I have. He is used to it." Brian wasn't in a rage. But he retorted upon hearing what Winnie had said. "You're used to it. He'll never get used to it. None of the children likes to see his father's cold face. He relies on you. And he is proud of you. He sees you as a role model. But all you give him is negative things." Winnie knew that Brian wasn't good at changing. But she still had to try her best to convince him. Otherwise, Luke would never be happy for the rest of his life. Brian warned her without anger, "Stop getting involved in our business. Just do your own." He wanted to end this topic here. so he got out of bed, intending to wash up. Winnie called out to Brian, "Wait, this is something that I have to manage." Then she got out of bed and stood in front of Brian, blocking his way. "I don't care what your reason is for being distant and indifferent to Luke. It's not what a father should do. You are extremely irresponsible to Luke by doing this. If you have this attitude, you shouldn't have had Luke in the first place." Winnie looked slightly stubborn at him. And her tone was serious. No matter what, she wanted Brian to give her a satisfactory answer tonight. "Put yourself in your place. You are not qualified to get involved in my private life." Brian's face was grim. And his eyes were sulky. Then Winnie said, "I know I am not qualified. I am a woman who sleeps with you. But when it comes to Luke, I have to manage his matter. I don't ask you for too much. Even acting in front of the child is fine. You, as a father, should let him grow up physically and mentally healthy, which is your responsibility." Winnie's stubbornness reached a certain level. And she was unbeatable when she was stubborn. "Brian, if you don't like Luke, give him to me. I will take him away. Without you, the child won't suffer so much mental pressure." Brian refused decisively, "Impossible. Stop being delusional." He wouldn't let go of Luke. Temporarily, he couldn't leave Winnie and Megan. So he wouldn't let go of any one of them. Winnie said tenaciously, "Then be nice to him. Don't let your emotions affect his mood. Praise him, feel distressed for him, and spoil him in time so that his childhood won't be in the dark." No matter how angry Brian was, she wouldn't back down. "Impossible. Winnie, I'm warning you for the last time. You are nobody, you can't sway me. If you are presuming to change me, don't blame me for taking Luke away." Brian got completely angry as if he were an eruptive volcano that was surging and unrestrained. "Fine. Take him away now. Just take Luke away. Everything between us will be over. I'll choose my life again." Winnie had no choice but to be tit for tat for Brian to control her anger. She had no other way and could only gamble once. If it didn't work, she would try to find a way to soften Brian. In short, no matter what happened, she wouldn't give up easily. "Winnie, this is what you said. I can immediately take Luke out of here and never let you see him." Brian was surprised. In his opinion, Luke was where Winnie's weakness lay. As long as he said he would take Luke away, Winnie would surrender unconditionally. But what was wrong today was that he was acting as he cared so much about it. "I say, take Luke away just to make me whole. At dinner time just now, Leo confessed to me. He said he didn't mind me having a child and that he could start all over his life with me. I was still hesitating for Luke. If you take Luke away, I will immediately promise to get together with him. And we will get a marriage license tomorrow." At this time, Winnie used Leo to threaten Brian. But she wasn't quite sure. Because Brian just said she was a nobody. "Winnie..." This was what Brian hadn't expected. Leo confessed his love to Winnie, which he didn't know. Was it true or Winnie was talking about the pie-in-the-sky nonsense? "Good, go to Leo. Go marry him. For your wedding, I will surely give you a red envelope with a large amount of money in it." "Do you think you can threaten me? Who do you think you are? I'm telling you, Winnie, don't act like this. I don't care who you will marry. Even if you marry a fool on the roadside, I won't care." Brian was overwhelmed by anger. And his words sounded rough and thoughtless. He didn't even think about what the consequences would be. "Good, thank you for making me recognize myself. Thank you for allowing me to marry someone else. You also remember it, Brian, after I walk out of this door, everything between us will be over. Don't regret what you said. And don't appear in front of me from now on." Winnie was angry and irritated. She wanted to beat up Brian. At the same time, she also heard the sound indicating that her heart was breaking. Her heart was crushed by Brian's words. A gust of wind happened to carry away the broken pieces. Winnie turned around and started looking for something after her angry roar. She was insignificant in Brian's heart. No matter how hard or soft she was, it wouldn't solve the problem. Now she couldn't compromise. The only way was to leave. Winnie continued to speak as she rummaged for her identity documents. "This house is yours. It is me who should leave. The child is asleep. For the sake of us spending so much time together, don't disturb the child. I will pick her up tomorrow morning." After Winnie finished her words, she had found her identity card and account book. Then she held them in her hands and held them up in front of her. "Thank you for making me have my way." Winnie finished her words and gave Brian an indignant look, turning around to open the door. Seeing Winnie rummaging through her things, Brian was somewhat in a panic. Hearing her words that she thanked him for letting her have her way and staring at the determined look in her eyes, he was instantly in a mess in his heart. As Winnie turned around to leave, Brian forgot everything had happened just now and blocked Winnie's way quickly. "Where are you going?" "Go to Leo's house. Sleep with him, and register with him so that we can get married." Winnie's gaze was clear and cold. Her voice sounded hard. She looked like she wasn't attached to anything more. "Get out of the way." "You can't marry him." Brian blurted out without deliberation. Although he still had an angry look on his face and that the look in his eyes was still bitter, his heart was trembling violently, which was out of his control. She wanted to leave him. She wanted to marry someone else. Never would he allow her to do these things. "I have no right to meddle about your affairs. And you shouldn't interfere in my affairs either. We aren't connected at all. Even if I am marrying a fool on the roadside, you won't have any say." Winnie retorted to what Brian had said just now. And she didn't want to be swayed by Brian. Winnie angrily pushed away Brian and opened the door to leave. Unexpectedly, Brian's eager voice rang, "I promise you." Brian finally was defeated by Winnie's stubbornness. So he compromised. Winnie stopped. The tense expression on her face finally eased. She stopped feeling anxious and tense. It seemed that her stubbornness had once again prevailed. And it seemed that Leo could threaten Brian with ease. Winnie didn't turn around. Instead, she was waiting for more reassurance from Brian. "I will try to get along well with Luke. Don't go. Luke can't leave you."

CHAPTER 105 DAENERYS' CAREER

Brian suddenly thought of the reason why asked Winnie to stay, thinking that it surely was because Luke couldn't leave Winnie that he had to ask Winnie to stay for Luke's sake. Winnie turned around and walked back to the bedroom, casually closing the bedroom door. Winnie said seriously, "It won't work if you are trying. You should behave properly. Love the child heartedly as if you were a father." This time, if she didn't make a request, she wouldn't have any chance later. Neither could she restrain Brian. Brian replied helplessly, fearing that Winnie would turn around and leave, "I will do whatever you say." Winnie curled up the corner of her mouth, revealing a smug smile. Although she had been hurt by Brian's words, the problem was solved. She thought that it was worth it. The next day, in a private room of a cafe ... Penny looked thoughtfully at Daenerys who was sitting across from her, feeling somewhat apprehensive in her heart. She wondered if he could cooperate with her. Penny said in a soft voice with a flirtatious look in her eyes, "Mr. Daenerys. Is it presumptuous for me to call you out like this?" Daenerys greeted her with a smile, "No, no. I'm bored with nothing to do. It's nice to come out and talk with you, Mrs. Penny." Penny, who didn't beat around the bush, got down to the point as fast as she could, "The reason why I'm asking you to come out today is that I want to discuss something with you about something. I don't know if you are willing to cooperate with me." Daenerys said respectfully, "Let's not call it cooperation. As long as I can help you, I will do my best. I don't know what kind of matter you want to discuss with me, Mrs. Penny?" The only one that could give him hope now was Penny. Since she took the initiative to ask him out, he would never let go of the opportunity. "It is about Winnie. Don't you like Winnie? I have a way for you so that you can get her." Penny had a sinister look on her face. Using Winnie to tempt Daenerys was an idea she had figured out after a few days. Daenerys pondered on it for a moment, "Winnie?" "Good. Then let's talk." Daenerys was secretly happy. When it came to everything about Winnie, he wanted to participate in it. ... When Winnie came home from work, she saw Daenerys lying on the sofa in her living room with a lazy look on her face. The two children greeted Daenerys together, "Hello, Auntie Daenerys." "Hello, you guys. Babies, you are so well behaved." Daenerys sat up. Her face was full of affection. And she touched and kissed the two babies one after another, treating them as if they were her children. "Why are you here? Aren't you busy today?" Winnie walked over to her. While talking, she put down the bag. "I am unemployed. I won't be busy." When it came to working, Daenerys was immediately in a bad mood. Winnie widened her eyes in disbelief, "How come you are unemployed?" ... "Go into the room with me and let's talk there." As Winnie was just about to ask Daenerys the reason why she had been unemployed, she suddenly thought of Penny's threat the other day. In order not to let Luke hear Penny's name, Winnie hurriedly took Daenerys back to her bedroom. Winnie asked eagerly, "It's related to Penny, isn't it?" "Yes, the relative parties didn't cover it up at all. The higher-ups told me directly that I had offended Mrs. Penny in the Bennet Group and that if I didn't leave, my company would face a takeover." "So you righteously submitted your resignation. How handsome you are." Daenerys was in a quite low mood. However, fearing that Winnie would blame her, she could only forcefully pretend to be indifferent. Hearing Daenerys saying so, Winnie was emotionally depressed this time. It was all because of her that Penny had picked Daenerys' t. In that case, she surely had to blame herself. Winnie whispered in apology, "I'm sorry, Daenerys, I'm the one who got you into trouble." Daenerys said lightly, comforting Winnie in turn, "It's okay. I can find another job if I lose it. It's their loss to ask someone as good as me to quit. Winnie, it is time to turn back the clock and give me another chance. I will still stand up to help you. I am voluntary. You don't have to be sorry." Ever since the death of Winnie's parents, Winnie had changed a lot compared with who she used to be. She used to giggle carefreely. Now, although she would laugh as well, she would suddenly stop laughing and look dazed. In the past, when she encountered something aggravating, she would cry without fear. And after crying, the aggravation would flow away with the tears. Now she also cried. But each time, she tried her best effort to hold herself back. It wasn't until she could no longer bear the pain that she cried in pain. What did all this show? It showed that Winnie was used to keeping everything to herself and having amnesia as well as thinking about the issues all day. To prevent Winnie from taking her dereliction of duty to her heart, Daenerys could only tell her the truth so that they could generously face the issues together. Only in this way would Winnie feel better in her heart. Winnie surely understood Daenerys's thoughts. She, who was moved, hugged Daenerys. Winnie lamented, feeling secretly sad, "Daenerys, thank you, I'm happy to have your partiality. If you don't want to find a job, you don't have to. I'll support you." "I'm so young. How can I not find a job? I still want to earn more money to help you raise two children. Don't worry about such a little thing. I can still handle it." Daenerys was touched as well. Although she had been helping Winnie over the years, Winnie, who was kind, knew how to show her gratitude. Daenerys thought that it was worth it for her to make a little sacrifice for Winnie. After all, they were besties. And they, who were besties, should share the same blessings and difficulties. "Thank you, thank you for having me and my children on your mind." Winnie was touched again. The dinner Winnie made was more sumptuous. To comfort Daenerys, the two of them also drank wine. Daenerys asked Winnie, holding up a bottle of wine, "Another glass of wine?" Winnie refused, "No, I can't drink anymore. If I drink again, I can't go to work tomorrow." Although she didn't go so far as to be dizzy, she indeed wasn't capable of drinking. "Then don't drink. Let's chat for a while. By the way, is Brian coming here today? If not, I'll stay here." After all, Daenerys didn't have any work. She wanted to stay here for a few days. Winnie felt some discomfort in her head and rubbed her temples, answering, "It doesn't affect you to stay here even if he comes back." "How come it won't affect me? Do you have extra rooms here?" Daenerys knew that the rooms here are probably occupied. The two children got one each upstairs. Winnie and Brian got one each downstairs. While for the rest, it was either a study or a studio or a room for children. There was no extra room for her. "There are extra rooms. Let me clean up the room for the children upstairs. The children are big both grown up. They simply don't like those items in their childhood. Even if the room for children can't be vacated, there will always be a room for you. My bedroom is empty. You can live there whenever you want to live. It happens that you can help me with the children." Winnie surely had been drunk. The alcohol paralyzed her mind. and she had no idea what she had said. "What do you mean? Is your room empty? Then where do you live?" Daenerys was quite sober instead. Such a little wine didn't matter to her at all. She managed to sense the loophole in Winnie's words. "I sleep with Brian in the master bedroom. So my room is empty." Winnie was still speaking unconcernedly without noticing that she had said something she shouldn't have said. Daenerys asked in surprise, "Did you sleep with Brian? Oh my God. When did that happen? Didn't you say it was impossible for you two? Didn't you say he wasn't your type?" She, who seemed to have been stunned, instantly became sober. Only after that did Winnie come to her senses and knew she had said something wrong. She was embarrassed at first. Then, she rolled her eyes from time to time and fluttered her curly eyelashes up and down mischievously. Realizing that she had said the wrong thing was useless now. What to do? She thought that she would just admit it frankly. "You've set me up. I promised I couldn't say it. I didn't hold myself back in success." "What do you mean by that? I didn't say anything. You said it by yourself. Say it. What's going on?" Daenerys had to know the truth which should be in detail. "Yes, we are living together. I promised to be his woman..." Winnie told Daenerys about what had happened between the two of them briefly. But she could only tell her the happy ones. As for her inner pain, she couldn't reveal it. Daenerys asked incredulously, "Are you in love with him?" Her question poked Winnie's heart. She didn't know how to answer. Pouring another glass of wine to the full without being persuaded, she drank it down. Then she pretended to answer spontaneously, "No." Winnie found that as she revealed such an answer, she felt hurt in her heart. She felt that love was like cancer. As long as she suffered from cancer, there wouldn't be any cure. Daenerys continued to ask, "What about him? Does he love you?" Unexpectedly, the one who answered her wasn't Winnie but Brian. "No." Brian's gloomy tone rang without emotion. And his cold eyes clearly showed his anger. Winnie and Daenerys were stunned by the sudden appearance of Brian. They, who were dumbfounded, looked at him without the slightest reaction. "President Bennet, you are back. After you are busy all day, you should be quite tired. You guys should rest early. I'll go back first." Daenerys felt that there was going to be a storm coming, thinking that it would be wise for her to hurry up and leave. So she left her best girlfriend behind and fled from Brian who was ferocious. "This guy wimped out and ran before we can finish drinking the wine." Winnie finished her words. Without warning, she picked up a glass of wine and drank it again. She wanted to drink more wine so that she could get stoned and forget the merciless word which Brian had just said. "Stop drinking." Brian was a step late in grabbing the glass of wine that had been empty. Winnie said mischievously, "Keep your voice down. The child will be unhappy if he hears your voice. I'm not drinking anymore. I didn't drink much. I heard what you said quite clearly." Then she got up. However, she, who had been sitting for too long, her legs became somewhat numb. Losing her balance, she sat on the chair. She looked up and looked at Brian who looked gloomily in a daze, barely putting on a smile. "My legs are numb. I fell not because I drank much." "Give me a moment. A moment later, I will be fine." At this moment, Winnie didn't know how to describe her mood in words. She, who felt bitter, had to pretend to be unconcerned. She, who was aggrieved, had to pretend to be strong. She was so entangled now. And she thought that she deserved it because she failed to control her heart. Why did she have to have a crush on Brian as if she were a little girl? This time, well, she was heartbroken. Well, she couldn't make herself stop loving Brian, which she thought that she deserved. However painful she was, she should endure it by herself. Brian still had a gloomy look on his face. However, looking at Winnie's face indicating that she was pretending, he felt inexplicably distressed for her. He walked to Winnie's side, bent down, and directly picked her up horizontally. Then he turned around and walked towards the bedroom. Brian ordered in a cold voice, "Luke, open the bedroom door." Hearing his words, unexpectedly, Winnie began to protest, "Did you forget what you had said yesterday today? The way you talk to the child seems not to be appropriate."

CHAPTER 106 I LOVE YOU, DADDY

Winnie reminded while looking at Brian with stubborn eyes, as if saying that she would still marry Leo if he didn't fulfill his promise. After turning his head a little and looking at Winnie, Brian had no choice but to speak again in a lower and softer voice. "Luke..." "You shouldn't call him like that." "Then, what should I call him?" "Call him Son." There was an angry expression in Brian's deep eyes, but he could do nothing with Winnie who was in his arms. Therefore, he had to refrain his anger. "Son, open the door for daddy." Hearing Brian address him as Son, Luke immediately ran over with a bright smile, pushing open the door of bedroom. "Daddy, I love you. Take good care of Auntie." Later, Luke closed the door and went to the living room. However, Brian was touched when Luke told him that he loved him. He finally realized that such warm and loving words could be expressed in such a simple way. After Brian put Winnie on the bed, Winnie still put her arms around Brian's neck with a triumphant smile. Then, she pulled Brian closer with force. After that, she took the initiative to kiss Brian on his sexy lips. "This is a reward for your being willing to change for kids." Winnie said gently. She was very happy to see that Brian changed for kids. If he continued to act like that, Luke would definitely recover from depression in a short time. "I don't need your reward." After answering coldly, Brian stood up directly. Now, he was not in the mood to flirt with Winnie. He was still angry because of what he had just heard. Winnie didn't hesitate at all when she said that she didn't love him as if she were rejecting a stranger. What did he mean to her? A stranger? Her boyfriend? Or a man she wanted to be with? Brian went to the bathroom. When he came back, Winnie had fallen asleep in a strange sleeping posture. Looking at her, Brian frowned. However, he went to the bed, adjusted the pillow and made Winnie shift into a comfortable posture. Standing by the bed and looking at Winnie, Brian took a deep breath. However, when he was just about to turn around and leave, he heard Winnie talk in her sleep. "I'm very happy to meet you again." Brian's deep eyes became cold with doubts. Who did she want to tell these words? What did she dream about so that she would say something like that? Leo? Did she intend to tell Leo those words? Brian went out of the bedroom with cold eyes. He came to the living room where the two kids were still watching cartoons. Then he sat down with his face darkened. When he was about to say something in a cold voice, he thought of the warning from Winnie. Therefore, he asked in a softer voice. "Son, Megan. Uncle Leo came here last night, right?" "Yes, Uncle Leo had dinner with us." Megan answered his question while watching cartoon. "We met uncle in the parking lot. And uncle carried a lot of things for Auntie. Then, Auntie asked Uncle Leo to come here to have dinner." Luke answered him in detail. "Then, what did they talk about?" Brian frowned and continued to ask, but he didn't speak in a cold voice. "I heard Uncle Leo say that he loves mommy." Megan pre-empted Luke again. Luke became depressed at this moment. He came close to Brian and spoke in a low voice. "Daddy, I heard that, too. Daddy, I don't want Auntie to marry Uncle Leo. Daddy, help me. I want to be with Auntie forever." It made Brian's heart ache to see the worried expression on his face. For the first time, he took the initiative to hold Luke into his arms to comfort him. "Don't worry. Winnie won't marry anyone else and she'll be with you forever." Brian felt uneasy because he didn't know if he could fulfil his promise. Even if Winnie could be with him for the time being, she would leave after that woman came back. At that time, could she still take care of Luke like she did now? Would she stay here? Luke was so dependent on Winnie. If she left, could he bear it then? "Daddy, Uncle Leo is especially gentle to Auntie. Can you be nicer to Auntie in the future? As long as you treat her well, she won't leave us." Luke looked up at Brian with expectation. Now, Winnie was the least person he was willing to lose. If he lost her, he would still live a dark life. "Hmm, daddy will treat Auntie well." "Son, how did Auntie answer Uncle Leo?" Brian continued to ask. He wanted to know it most. "I don't know. We didn't hear what they said later." Hearing his answer, Brian was speechless. The kids didn't hear the most important part of the conversation for him! At this moment, Megan also came over and looked at Brian with expectation. "Uncle, can you embrace me like this?" Megan had envied Luke for a while. Although Winnie forbade her to be so close to Brian, she really couldn't restrain herself. Seeing that the door of Winnie's bedroom was closed, she came close to Brian and asked him to embrace her bravely. "Of course." As Brian spoke, he held Megan into his arms. With two kids in his arms, Brian suddenly felt very surefooted and happy and felt that he had the strength to work hard. "Daddy." Megan called Brian in a low voice after she lost control of herself. She just wanted to know how it felt to be loved by daddy. Although Brian wasn't her biological father, it was enough for her to have this sense of feeling surefooted. Hearing Megan call him daddy, Brian was touched again. He really felt that Megan was his biological child, just like Luke. However, it was just a temporary illusion.

He had no biological relationship with Megan. The next morning, Winnie had already prepared breakfast when Brian got up. Finding that the two kids hadn't went downstairs, Brian came close to Winnie and speak with a dark face. "Being able to get up and prepare breakfast after getting drunk the night before, it appears that you have a great recuperative power." After Winnie heard his sneer, she was stunned and dropped her eyes first. Then, she pretended as if she didn't know anything and then spoke. "Really? Did I get drunk? I didn't drink much." Winnie put on a faint smile. She didn't want to mention what happened last night because she was sad and that her self-esteem was hurt last night. In the presence of Daenerys, he said coldly that he didn't love her, showing no concern for her feelings. So what? She didn't want his love at all. "If you didn't get drunk, why did you stumble and fall asleep the moment you were put in bed?" Brian couldn't help questioning in a cold voice with anger in his eyes. Was she evading this issue deliberately? Or did she forget everything because she was drunk? "Oh, then I might have drunk too much. Anyway, I forget it." "By the way, can you do me a favor? Daenerys lost her job. Can you get her a job?" Winnie moved to another topic in time. She didn't want to continue such a topic that would make her sad. "She does well in work. Why did she lose her job?" Brian asked. He knew that Daenerys performed very well in the field of medical apparatus and instruments. How could a boss be so ignorant that he or she would dismiss such a talented person who had many clients?"Before, she defended me at the reunion, so she offended your wife. Penny came to her company in person and threatened her leader as Mrs. Bennet. So, Daenerys was fired. The reality is that people without power like us would always be sacrificed."Winnie didn't conceal the fact from Brian. She was sure that Brian didn't know that Penny had done so. Penny might have damaged Brian's reputation when she tyrannized over others as the wife of Brian. She was so ignorant that she didn't realize that she had ruined her image."Was it caused by Penny?"Brian asked in disbelief. In the past, in his opinion, Penny wasn't so ignorant. He didn't expect that she would be so hypocritical and arrogant now."If you don't believe it, you can carry out an investigation. Just tell me if you can help me or not. If you can't, I'll turn to Leo. He..."Leo, Leo. You always want to turn to Leo. If he's such a good man, why didn't you manage to keep him then?"This time, Winnie didn't intend to stimulate Brian by mentioning Leo. She really planned to turn to Leo. She was afraid that Brian would became unhappy after he knew that, so she asked for his help first. It never occurred to her that Brian became angry before she finished her words.What Winnie hated most was that Brian lost his temper without any reason as if he were the only ill-tempered person. In fact, she had a temper not better than that of Brian.Therefore, Winnie refuted loudly and angrily."Didn't you hear what happened at that time? When he was so heartless, how could I keep him?"Winnie glowered at Brian and didn't realize that there was something wrong with what she had said."What're you talking about? How could I know what had happened at that time?"Brian asked. He didn't know what Winnie was talking about. Who did she thought he was?Winnie suddenly realized what she had just said. She was so scared that she sweated. What was wrong with her recently? Why was she suddenly not calm and poised? Why did she always lose her temper easily? Why did she always say the wrong thing inadvertently?Winnie forced herself to calm down."I...I'm sorry. I thought that you were Daenerys. At that time, Daenerys was with me."JQW found an excuse to palter with him."Ask Daenerys to work in the hospital for the time being. Let her go to Kevin. The doctor in charge of equipment management is on sick leave recently. When the doctor comes back to work, I'll transfer her back to medical apparatus and instruments branch."It was impossible for Brian to give Winnie a chance to meet Leo. Besides, he could handle such a trivial matter."Thank you! I'll tell Daenerys later."Winnie was finally relieved. She kept telling herself in her mind that she must be careful and that she shouldn't talk much. If Brian knew it, it would be too bad.Winnie got 800000 dollar for selling the medical probe software system to the Bennet Group, which surprised Winnie. Having collected one million dollar, Winnie asked Uncle Romeo out again. In a Cafe. "Uncle, I'll give a million dollar back to you now. And I'll try to pay you back the rest a million dollar as soon as I possible." As Winnie spoke, she handed a bank card on which the password was written to Romeo. "Well, I'll take it." One million dollar was not a small amount of money for the present Romeo. It was the money he earned through the hard work of his whole life. He couldn't help feeling a little excited when he looked at the bank card. "Uncle, I'm sorry that I have kept you waiting for so many years." Winnie said with a guilty expression. He was her father's best friend at that time, but he was the last person who got his money back. "It doesn't matter. You've paid part of it back, right? You don't have to be in a hurry to pay me back the rest of the money. I believe you."

CHAPTER 107 DO YOU TREAT HER FAIRLY?

Romeo said in a gentle voice. Seeing Winnie work so hard now, he was deeply moved. In the past, her father passed away before he paid tens of millions dollars back to debtors. In the past five years, Winnie had paid off most of the debts. Ordinary men couldn't do as well as she did. Therefore, he was proud of Winnie. "You're the last debtor. I feel guilty for repaying others before you. Thank you! Thank you so much! If you weren't tolerant, I wouldn't be able to pay off most of the debt now." As Winnie spoke, she couldn't help feeling sad. Having been suffering from pain and fatigue for so many years, she had never mentioned it to anyone. Now, in the presence of someone who was like her father, she felt aggrieved. However, she restrained it and then forced herself to be strong. After coming out of the Cafe, Winnie was in a much better mood and felt more relaxed than before. As long as she gave Uncle Romeo a million dollars back and then paid a million dollars back to Daenerys, she would pay off all the debts. She planned to buy a bigger house after selling the one under the name of Vanessa. Then, her family would be able to really live in B City again. Penny hadn't made any trouble for Winnie recently, but it didn't mean that she had given up. Today she came to get the mobile phone Winnie lost before. She would like to see what was stored in Winnie's mobile phone. She was cautious. Afraid that it would be discovered, she asked the person she hired to put the phone in a safe and only came to get it after such a long time. She found the safe, entered the password and then saw the mobile phone Winnie lost. Finding that this mobile phone had run out of power, Penny found a place to charge it. However, after she turned it on, she found that she couldn't unlock it. Therefore, she found someone professional to unlock it. After returning home with this mobile phone, Penny went back to her bedroom, locked the door and then began to search for the video videoed on that day. However, a few seconds later, her face became pale. She widened her eyes in horror and in disbelief. After watching all the videos in Winnie's mobile phone, her heart palpitated in fear. "How is it possible? Why would Winnie have the video videoed when Luke was beaten? No wonder she hates me so much. She knows so much!" Penny talked to herself in shock, but suddenly thought of the camera. She ran out of her bedroom and rummaged around in the house. She was so anxious that she didn't even hear the servant greet her. After rummaging for a while, she was sure that there wasn't any camera in the house and then went to the storeroom. She rummaged around in the storeroom, but still didn't find the camera. She went back to her bedroom in astonishment, forced herself to calm down and watched the videos again. Judging from the video, the camera moved as Luke moved. Then, the camera should be carried by Luke. Penny began to recall what Luke had done when he was beaten. Finally, she thought of the teddy bear. She went to Luke's room in a hurry and saw that the teddy bear was placed on the bed. Penny tore the teddy bear as if she were crazy. Finally, she found a tiny camera in the eye of the toy. She stared at the camera as if she wanted to kill someone. Winnie should have begun to scheme against her a long time ago! She was so careless that she knew nothing about it. She must get Winnie's computer and deleted all the evidence. Besides, she must drive Winnie away from B City. Winnie's continuing to stay in B City was a recipe for endless trouble. After deleting all the videos from the phone, Penny smashed it and threw it into a dustbin outside. Albert finally made a progress in the investigation because of what Penny had done. Now, he was reporting in the President's office with the mobile phone Penny threw away. And at this moment, Brian's face was dark. "Mr. Bennet, I've made sure that this cell phone belongs to Winnie and that it's Mrs. Bennet who has thrown it away. Therefore, Mrs. Bennet must have asked the robber to rob Winnie of it." Albert went on reporting. "What about the investigation about the car accident Winnie met?" Brian asked angrily. "I still haven't found out the fact. The offending driver had never contacted Mrs. Bennet. Besides, he was well protected by the Chairman and we can't do anything." Albert answered seriously. He didn't expect that it would be so difficult to investigate this accident. "It seems that I should go to see grandpa." Brian said in a cold voice. Then he continued to order. "Get someone fix this phone and try to keep all the data in it." Brian would like to know what evidence there was in the mobile phone that was worth the trouble Penny took. On the weekend, when Brian was about to go to the Johnson's villa with Luke, he received a phone call from his grandpa who asked him to take Megan and Winnie to the Johnson's villa with him. Although Winnie felt puzzled and was unwilling to go to the Johnson's villa, she had to go with Brian in the end. After they came to the Johnson's villa, they found nothing special. Except that Felix was a little serious, nothing unusual happened. After lunch, Winnie went to have a rest with the kids. Only then did Brian have a chance to talk to Felix alone. In the pavilion in the garden, Felix was sitting while Brian was walking back and forth. "You get along well with Winnie. Is it that you and she are together again?" Felix asked in a deep voice. Brian paused and leaned against the back of the bench. "Yes, Luke can't bear leaving her or me." Brian finally decided to admit it. He knew that his grandpa wouldn't ask tentatively if he didn't know everything. It would be invidious for him to conceal it from grandpa. "In my opinion, it's you who can't bear leaving her." Felix hit the nail on the head, pointing out his weakness. Brian didn't refute it because what he said was true. "Brian, have you ever considered this? When you do so, Penny will be wary of you and will treat Winnie as her enemy. It's bad for everyone." Although Brian knew all these, Felix had to remind him in case that he would do the wrong thing and suffered a great loss. "Grandpa, I know that. I have taken these things into consideration when I decide to do so." Brian said in a determined voice. He believed that he could solve these problems and that he could prevent Winnie and kids from being harmed. "Having paid too much attention to Winnie, how dare you say that you've considered these problems? Brian, let me tell you, if your work is affected, I'll do something rude to Winnie." Felix warned him again. He loved Brian, so he wouldn't do anything to harm him. Therefore, he would sacrifice Winnie if necessary. "Grandpa, I won't let my work be affected. It has nothing to do with her. Don't harm her." Brian was no longer being indifferent, but spoke in a somewhat anxious voice. Felix looked at Brian with a sullen expression. He had never seen Brian become anxious because of someone. He even didn't act like this when he tried to protect Wendy in the past. "If you and she are together, what about Wendy? Don't you still want to be with her in the future?" Felix continued to remind him. Except Penny, there was another woman-- Wendy Yup. Wendy Yup was the woman whom Brian loved. Brian didn't care about Penny, but he care about Wendy. When Wendy was mentioned, Brian frowned with a grave expression in his eyes. "We've agreed that she'll leave after Wendy comes back." Brian said in a deep voice, but he found that his heart was trembling when he said these words. "It's so easy to get rid of her? Then why would she be with you and try her best to take care of Luke? Does she want money from you? Is she in short of money?" Felix didn't understand why Winnie did so. He could see that Winnie really treated Luke well. However, was it possible that people who are unrelated to each other could treat each other with genuine feelings? "I don't t the reason, either. By far, she hadn't used my money at all. I sent her a car, but she refused. She only agreed to drive it temporarily when I used Luke as an excuse. When I gave her money, she wouldn't even take it. It's obvious that she doesn't do so for money." As for why Winnie would be with him, Brian also felt puzzled. Maybe she did it purely to retaliate against Penny. "....."Felix was silent. Seeing that Brian care so much about Winnie, he felt uncertain.He had reminded Brian. If necessary, he wouldn't show mercy.It seemed that Winnie was quite a good woman. Unfortunately, she wasn't from a powerful family."Since you've been prepared, handle the relationship between you and Penny as soon as possible. You should know what I want."By these words, Felix ordered Brian to acquire the Burns Group.In Felix's view, it was not beneficial for Brian to get entangled with too many women. Therefore, he wanted to Brian to deal with the relationships with these women as soon as possible, otherwise Brian would be put into a very difficult position when Wendy came back. If that was the case, the Bennet Group would be affected.Now Winnie was very important for Luke. Therefore, it was only proper for Brian to handle the relationship with Penny."The reason why you protect Penny is that you want to prevent me from finding any evidence?"Brian finally found the chance to get to the point."Yes. After you acquire the Burns Group, I'll give you the evidence. Then, you can decide how to deal with it."Felix said in a cold and precise manner. He had wanted to acquire the Burns Group for many years and he would never give up."Grandpa, do you know that it's not fair for Winnie? She almost died."Brian wasn't being calm again. He disagreed with Felix. He could acquire the Burns Group even without Penny."Do you treat her fairly? If you do, why do you want her to leave after Wendy comes back?"Felix said with yellow looks."People's destiny depend on God and they're all of some use. Winnie is doomed to be used by you. Don't think too much. Just give her more compensation when you drive her away in the future.""Try your best to acquire the Burns Group. This is my last request for you. As long as you acquire the Burns Group successfully, I won't do anything to Wendy's father's s company and you'll be the Chairman of the Bennet Group."After Felix said these words coldly, he stood up and left directly.Brian frowned and was angry. His face darkened and he didn't know what to do.He didn't care about the last sentences grandpa said. What made him feel uncomfortable now was that he should be using Winnie.Felix liked Megan very much, so he forced them to stay for dinner.When they were eating, Felix paid all his attention to them four. The atmosphere seemed to be harmonious and happy. What mattered most was that Luke was very happy and Brian seemed to be obedient to Winnie.After dinner, they sat on the sofa in the living room and chatted happily. Suddenly, Felix stood up."Winnie, follow me to my study."Felix said in a peremptory way.

CHAPTER 108 A DIFFICULT TASK

Before Winnie could react to it, Brian pre-empted her. "Grandpa..." Felix interrupted him. "I won't harm her." Felix put on an authoritative expression. Then, Brian dared not say anything anymore for fear that his effort would be counterproductive. Looking at Winnie who was puzzled, he gestured to her that she didn't need to be afraid. Compared with Brian, Winnie was calmer. When they were on the way from home to here in the morning, she had been psychologically prepared. Felix wouldn't ask her to come here for no reason. It could be said that Felix had been kind enough to her by not talking to her about what he wanted for a day. "I'll be back soon. Take care of the kids." After saying that, Winnie followed Felix to his study. After Felix sat on the sofa, he asked Winnie to sit down, too. "It's late, so I'll come straight to the point." Felix spoke seriously. "Please, the Chairman." What he said was after her own fancy. Winnie also wanted to come straight to the point. "Are you and Brian together again?" Felix asked her the question that he had asked Brian. "Yes, I'm very sorry that I break my promise. But don't worry. I'll leave when I should." Winnie answered candidly. "Well, I believe you. But I have some requirements. You can't interfere with his work or his private life. Keep a low profile and don't publicize it." Who Felix trusted more was himself. If Winnie failed to do that, he would manage to make her leave. Felix went on. "For Luke's sake, I can forgive your breaking your promise this time. But you have to do me a favor." "Please tell me. I'll do it as long as I can." Feeling grateful, Winnie answered. She knew that it was wrong for her to break her promise. And Felix had made a concession. However, Winnie really felt surprised after hearing his request. "Well, Brian's father hasn't come back for many years and Brian never comes to see him. To tell you the truth, there is a barrier between them because there is a knot that can't be untied in Brian's mind. It appears that Brian would listen to you, so I want you to make them make up." Felix spoke in a much softer voice this time and was not as rigorous as he had just been. He had intended to ask Winnie to do this when he went to the hospital to visit Winnie last time. He just delayed it because he heard what Penny had done. He could tell that Winnie had the ability to affect and change Brian. Or it could be said that Brian was willing to listen to Winnie. He didn't want Winnie to interfere with Brian's work, but he wanted to use Winnie to affect Brian over private affairs. Winnie was surprised. She didn't expect that Felix would talk about family things with her. "He never mentioned anything about his family to me, and I don't know what conflict there is between them. The Chairman, I'm not sure if I can be of any help." Winnie said diplomatically. As a matter of fact, she felt that she couldn't be of any help at all. She might not know Brian well, but she knew that Brian resisted and was wary of her in every aspect. Even if they were together now, they didn't get to know each other better. For her, Brian was a puzzle. And she had never thought of solving it. If she tried to get to know more about him, Brian would dislike and ignore her. "Believe me. You can succeed. As long as you do it, I'll allow you to live with Luke for a long time. Don't ask for any specific reason. You just need to persuade him to be reconciled with his father." Felix was a shrew judge of character and situation. Few people could change Brian's mind since he was a child and Winnie could be said to be the first one who could change his mind. Therefore, Felix was sure that Winnie had the ability to do that. Winnie was embarrassed, but Felix didn't allow her to refuse this task. He said in such a peremptory voice. What could Winnie do to refuse it? "I'll have a try." Winnie had no choice but to reluctantly agree. She considered it to be a task more difficult than developing software. On the way home, Brian drove the car while Winnie sat in the passenger seat. The two kids were playing and chatting on the back seat of the car. Winnie was somewhat silent because of what Felix asked her to do. Now, she regretted having agreed to do that because she didn't know anything about it and therefore didn't know what to do. "What did grandpa talk with you?" Brian asked in a sullen voice with serious eyes. Winnie had not been in a good mood since she came out of Felix's study. It could be seen that she was pretending to be happy when she communicated with the children. Brian had been worrying about that Felix had embarrassed her, but he didn't ask it because of the presence of the children. Looking at Winnie's depressed expression, Brian became more worried and couldn't help asking this question. Winnie finally turned and looked at Brian, being in two minds. "Nothing. Just something about us." Winnie didn't mention the task Felix gave her. She decided that she should get to know about that little by little instead of asking directly. Looking at his handsome profile, Winnie went on to say. "He knew that I and you are together, and said that I had broken my promise." "Did he threaten you?" Hearing this, Brian became anxious. He was certain that Felix would talk about these issue, so he just wanted to know whether Felix had embarrassed Winnie or not. "No. He forgave me for Luke's sake. He just prohibited me from interfering with your work and your family. He also demanded that I keep a low profile and do not show off." "I assure him that he didn't need to worry and that I would do as he required." Winnie repeated what Felix had said. What Felix asked her to do was exactly the same as what Brian had asked her to do. Besides, Felix's requirements was the same as her own principles. Even if Felix didn't say anything, she knew what she could do and what she couldn't do. "That's all?" Brian asked in doubt. "Yes, that's all." That was not all, but she couldn't tell him everything directly. "Didn't grandpa threaten you?" Brian still didn't believe that Felix would let her off so easily. "No. Why, you hope that he had threatened me?" Winnie said jokingly, but she clearly knew that she would have been threatened if Felix didn't need her help. But why was Felix so sure that she could accomplish this task? "I'm just worried that he would threaten you." Brian answered in louder voice. After hearing that she wasn't threatened, he finally felt relieved. "You care about me, right?" "I care about you? Why should I care about you? You're flattering yourself." Brian somewhat overreacted to it, after which he himself felt it strange for him to react like that. Did he care about her? He wasn't sure. He only knew that he had been feeling uneasy from the moment she followed Felix into the study. "Well, you can say so." "By the way, Daenerys will go to work in the hospital tomorrow. She asked me to express her gratitude to you." Winnie moved to another topic. If they talked too much about a topic, they would definitely quarrel. Finally, the kids who were sitting on the back seat would be affected emotionally. "Don't mention it." Brian didn't care about Daenerys at this moment. He was still wondering why Felix would accept the relationship between him and Winnie so easily. He believed that Felix wouldn't make a concession so easily even if for Luke's sake. Back in home, Winnie was with the kids doing their homework while Brian worked in the studio. Winnie didn't went to his studio with a glass of water until the child fell asleep. "When will you finish your work?" Winnie asked as she put the water on Brian's desk. "I've already finished my work. I'm just putting away the documents. What's the matter?" Brian looked up at her and asked. "Nothing. I'm tired. If you need to continue to work, I'll go to bed first." At this moment, Winnie was in a dilemma. In fact, she originally want to come here to ask him something about his family tentatively, but she refrained herself from asking in the end. She was afraid that Brian would tell her to mind her own business. Hearing what she said, the expression in Brian's eyes became much softer. He stood up, came close to Winnie and held Winnie into his arms tightly with his arms around her waist. "What about employing a housemaid? It'll be too tiring for you to work, take care of the kids and clean the house all by yourself." Brian didn't speak in a warm and cheerful voice, but Winnie's heart melted at this moment. Brian had been so indifferent. Why would he care about her? Winnie looked at Brian in a daze, feeling as if she were dreaming. A moment later. "I don't want to hire a housemaid. I'm not used to having a stranger at home. Besides, I'm willing to do all these. In this way, both you and kids will feel more at ease." Winnie refused his proposal. She was indeed very tired from having to get up early every morning to clean such a large house in fear that she would be late for work. However, to make the kids feel at ease at home, she still decided to do it herself. After saying that, Winnie unconsciously put her head on Brian's shoulder. Finding that Brian was being considerate, she was contented. "Hire an hourly worker and let her do the housework." Brian insisted because he didn't want Winnie to be tired every day. "I..." "That's settled then. I'll ask Albert employ one tomorrow." Winnie still wanted to oppose it, but Brian interrupted her in a peremptory manner. "Don't treat me so well. What if I fall in love with you?" It was the first time that Winnie liked his being peremptory. She wanted him to treat her in this way. Winnie said these words unconsciously, but Brian became intense after hearing them. Would she fall in love with me? What should he do if she fell in love with me? "I don't care. That's your own business. I won't fall in love with you." Brian didn't speak in a cold voice, but still shattered her illusion. Right. Brian didn't love her. It's just that she had a secret crush on him. What else could she expect? "That's great. It'll make it a lot easier for me to leave when I should." With her head put on Brian's shoulder, she dared not raise her head because she was afraid that Brian would see her bitter eyes. "Aren't you tired? Go to sleep." Brian said in a colder voice as if he were unhappy to hear the last few words she said. "Oh, I'll go to sleep soon." Hearing his cold voice, Winnie was disillusioned and had to leave the arms of Brian who could never be her lover. When she was about to leave, Brian carried her in his arms unexpectedly. "Since you're tired, I'll carry you back to bedroom." Brian said in a deep voice, ignored her willingness and left the studio directly with Winnie in his arms.

Hey, My Twins Babies

CHAPTER 109 TALKING ABOUT FAMILY THINGS

Winnie looked at Brian who was carrying her in his arms in a daze. She couldn't figure out what his attitude was like. Sometimes he was so indifferent to her that she shivered all over; sometimes he was so warm that she would let her imagination run wild. When faced with such a person, how could Winnie keep a distance from him and do not fall in love with him? Winnie was put on the bed. Before she could even turn over, Brian put himself on her body. "I know that you're tired. Just lie there and leave the rest to me." Brian spoke half-jokingly and flirtatiously with desire in his eyes. Although Winnie was not in the mood to make love with him, she didn't refuse. Brian was very gentle and warm every time he made love with her, so she couldn't bear to refuse. Winnie didn't speak, looked at him shyly, put her arms around his neck and took the initiative to kiss him. She felt that she was happiest at this moment, although it was a little humble for her to feel so. She wanted to have this gorgeous moment even though it was undignified for her to do so. The moment Winnie kissed Brian's lips, he lost control of his desire and took the initiative to do what he wanted to do crazily. He had slept with Winnie several times, but now he still lost control of himself as soon as he touched her body as if he were a young man who had just never slept with a woman before. After that, there was a romantic atmosphere in the room. Winnie was still embraced by Brian tightly in his arms. Brian's heavy breathing behind her ears became even suddenly. Then he spoke in a magnetic voice. "You must be exhausted. Have some sleep." His voice was gentle and hoarse. Winnie could feel his breath around her ears. "I'm not sleepy now. Let's have a chat." Brian was calm now, so Winnie wanted to take the opportunity to talk about his family in a tentative way. "Hmm." Brian answered in a low voice. Then, Winnie turned over. They hugged each other face to face. "What about telling me something about your family?" Winnie said gently. Worried that Brian would dislike this topic, she put on a smile. "My family?" Brian said in a different voice and frowned. "Yes. For example, you can tell me something about the members of your family. So far, I don't know any of your family members except Penny and the Chairman." Winnie ignored the changes of his expression and voice. Now that she had started the conversation, she would try to get to know something about his family, no matter what means she needed to use. "Why do you want to know that?" Brian asked in doubt. Why? Why? He always doubted her. Couldn't he trust her unconditionally once? Winnie was a little angry, but she refrained it. "For no reason. I'm just curious about that." After saying that in a gentle voice, Winnie put her arms around Brian's neck with expectation. "I also don't know any of your family members. How about your telling me that first?" Brian didn't answer, but asked. "My family?" Winnie didn't expect that Brian would ask her this question, but seemed that she wouldn't be able to continue to talk about this topic unless she talked about her family. Winnie no longer spoke in a soft voice, but said in a low and sad voice. "There're few members in my family. My parents had passed away. After I got divorced, I lived with my aunt and younger sister. It could be said that we depend on each other." It was the first time for Winnie to mention her parents in the presence of Brian. Worried that she would lose the control of her emotions, she didn't talk much about her parents. "Does your aunt have no family?" Brian felt somewhat puzzled. "No, she has never been married." Winnie replied in a simple way. Her family members all had complicated experience. If she needed to explain it in detail, it would probably take her several days and nights. "What about other relatives? Don't you have any other relative?" Brian continued to ask. "No." Winnie felt even sadder when her other relatives were mentioned. It was not that she didn't have other relatives. The fact was that her other relatives became estranged from her family after her parents passed away. Until now, she hadn't seen any of them. "I have only these family members and don't have much to talk about. What about talking about your family?" Winnie stared at Brian with expectation again with bitter eyes. Instead of continuing to ask, Brian unexpectedly began to talk about his family. "There're many members in my family. Four years ago, we lived together. After I became the President of the Bennet Group, Uncle Zak and his family went abroad. My older sister lived abroad after she got married and hasn't come back for a long time. You know the rest of my family members." Brian said in a low and cold voice. It seemed that there were members of his family who upset him. However, Winnie didn't try to get to know what he had just mentioned. She also had no interest in what happened to his many family members. She only wanted to get to know something about his father. "What about your parents? Why don't you talk about your parents?" Winnie looked up at Brian. However, Brian's face was dark at this moment. His eyes were cold. "Why do you ask that?" Judging from his voice, he became wary of Winnie again. "For no reason. I'm just being curious." Winnie found that there was something wrong with Brian and felt that she had poked the bear. It seemed that the task given by Felix was more difficult than she had imagined. Seeing Winnie's innocent expression, Brian refrained himself from venting his anger. "My mother had passed away. My father doesn't live with us." Brian spoke quickly because depression and hatred would flood over him every time his mother was mentioned. "Then where does he live..." "Stop. I'm sleepy and want to have some sleep." Before Winnie finished her words, Brian suddenly interrupted her coldly, turned his back to her and no longer spoke. Winnie looked at his back, feeling puzzled. Instead of becoming angry, she felt sad. Could it be that he also had unknown bitter memories? The next day, Daenerys was formally on duty. Winnie had asked her to go to a surgeon named Kevin Burns who would help her. Daenerys had heard of this doctor when Winnie was in hospital, but she had never met him. She still found it a little inappropriate to come to find him suddenly today. She stood outside Kevin's office, checked her appearance and then knocked on the door. Then a man spoke with a magnetic voice. "Come in, please." Daenerys pushed open the door and went in with a smile. After she closed the door and saw Kevin, there was a panic in her eyes. "I'm sorry. I'm in the wrong place." Then, she turned around quickly and wanted to flee. "Wait. You're not in the wrong place. I'm Kevin." Kevin was handsome and looked incongruous with a meaningful smile. When Daenerys entered and their eyes met, Kevin also dared not believe what he saw and there was panic in his eyes. However, he knew that he was right when he saw the reaction of Daenerys. Then, he calmed down. Kevin stood up and left the desk. He looked sedate in a white gown, but he wouldn't look that sedate if his expression was taken into consideration. "Daenerys Lewis, right?" Kevin asked in a cheerful voice. "Oh, yes, I'm Daenerys Lewis." Daenerys had no choice but to force herself to turn around with an embarrassed smile. "Doctor Burns, right? Then, I'm not in the wrong place." Daenerys pretended to be calm and greeted him. She was the only one who knew what a panic she was in. How could it be him? How could it be so coincidental? How could they meet each other in this province? Most importantly, he should be a friend of Brian and that they would be colleagues in the future. Thinking of this, Daenerys had an impulse to give up the job and flee. However, if she fled, she would not only expose her heart, but she would also put Winnie into a difficult position. It would be better for her to pretend to have forgotten something she shouldn't have remembered. After being prepared psychologically, Daenerys was no longer that uneasy and was a little relieved. "Hello, Doctor Burns." "Hello." Kevin said politely with a strange tone and doubts in his eyes, but he didn't say anything else. "Doctor Burns, I'm afraid that I'll work here in the future. I hope that we can get along well with each other." Daenerys said with a smile, but felt puzzled. "Didn't he recognize her?" "I hope so. Come on, I'll show you around where you work." Kevin acted in a seemingly neutral manner with a standard smile, but there was an expression that was difficult to understand in his eyes. Daenerys felt uneasy, but she slowly calmed down after seeing that Kevin acted as if he had forgotten her. After Daenerys became familiar with the place she worked, Kevin left. Daenerys formally began to work. At the airport, Winnie was waiting anxiously at the arrival hall and looked at the time from time to time. Vanessa was finally back. She was both delighted and worried. She was worried that Vanessa would be stimulated and therefore in a bad mood. "Sister." When Winnie was worried, she heard a familiar voice. "Vanessa." Winnie called her younger sister excitedly while Vanessa quickened her pace and hugged Winnie. "Sister. I missed you so much!" Vanessa was a little excited, so she embraced Winnie with her greatest strength. "I miss you, too. How are you recently?" Winnie asked with concern. "I'm fine!" "What about Aunt Isobel?" "Now, Aunt Isobel was alone, so Winnie was worried about her. "Aunt Isobel's fine, too. She asked you not to worry about her." Vanessa finally let go of Winnie. She had a young and beautiful face, but she was still a little childish. "Well, that's great. Come on, let's go home." After saying that, Winnie stretched out her hand to carry Vanessa's suitcase, but Vanessa stopped her. "Let me do it. I'm not tired from flying." Vanessa said thoughtfully, carried her suitcase and walked out of the arrival hall. On the way home, Winnie had been trying to distract Vanessa when she drove for fear that Vanessa would be nervous when they passed by the spot where the accident happened. They were getting closer to the place where their father passed away little by little. Winnie seemed to be more nervous than Vanessa. At this moment, Vanessa had stopped saying anything. "Vanessa..." When they were about to arrive at the spot where the accident happened, Winnie said hurriedly. However, Vanessa interrupted her. "Sister, I want to pay respect to dad and mom first." As she spoke, Vanessa lost control of herself and there were tears in her eyes. She thought that she could deal with something about the accident calmly, but she was still nervous when they arrived at the spot of the accident. However, her tension soon changed into sadness which was caused by her missing her parents.

CHAPTER 110 PRETENDED TO MEET BY CHANCE

It made Winnie's heart ache to hear what Vanessa said. Her younger sister should have had the greatest regret because she wasn't there when a funeral was held for their parents. "Are you okay?" Winnie asked with uncertainty. Although they had already passed the spot where the accident happened before they talked, she could tell that Vanessa was nervous. If they went to pay respect to their parents now, Winnie was really worried that Vanessa would have a breakdown. "It's ok. I miss them." Vanessa wouldn't be able to finish her words if she didn't try hard to restrain her emotions. Winnie drove directly to the graveyard with Vanessa. The moment Vanessa saw the tombs of their parents, Winnie couldn't say a word, directly knelt down and cried loudly. "Dad...Mom...I'm back. I finally get up the courage to come back to see you now. I'm m sorry...I'm sorry...I even didn't attend your funeral. Dad. Mom...I'm sorry." Vanessa cried in an extremely sad way and said broken words to apologize. Feeling guilty and missing her parents, she finally came back. Five years ago, she witnessed her father passed away. She was so frightened by the tragedy that she didn't shed a tear. When her mother passed away, to prevent her from being frightened, Winnie prohibited her from attending the funeral. Finally, it caused a lifelong regret for her. After having lived with this regret for five years, how could she not be so sad when she saw the tombs of her parents? "Dad. Mom... I'm sorry...I miss you. Why did you leave me?" Vanessa cried extremely sadly with her face being stained with tears. Winnie stood beside her and wept. Then she crouched down, held her younger sister into her arms and comforted her. "It's ok. Seeing you. Dad and mom would rest in peace. Don't cry anymore. They'll be sad if they see you being so sad." "I feel really sorry. I'm not a good daughter." Vanessa had an emotional breakdown and couldn't stop crying at all. "You're a good daughter. Your studying hard and living a happy life in the future will be the best reward for dad and mom. Don't cry, Winnie. I know that you're the strongest." Winnie knew that Vanessa had been feeling guilty these years, so she wanted her to cry and vent her emotion. However, worried that she would suffer a relapse, Winnie had to comfort her. After crying for a long time, Vanessa finally calmed down a little. And they didn't leave the graveyard until it was almost time to pick up the children. "Sister, don't worry about me. I'm fine. I can overcome the psychological obstacle." Finding that Winnie was worried about her, Vanessa comforted Winnie. "That's great. I feel much relieved now. Drink some water and change your mood. When you see Megan later, don't cry." Winnie took a deep breath. Seeing that Vanessa wasn't in a bad state, she was somewhat relieved. "Hmm. I won't cry in the presence of Megan, otherwise she will laugh at me." Speaking of Megan, Vanessa was finally in a better mood. When they arrived at the gate of the kindergarten, the kids happened to come out of the kindergarten in line. Megan saw Winnie, but didn't see Vanessa. Not knowing that Vanessa came here today, Megan didn't notice that Vanessa was standing beside Winnie. When Megan came closer, she suddenly saw Vanessa and bounced excitedly to Vanessa the next second. "Auntie..." "Megan, my sweetheart. I miss you so much." Vanessa was very happy, picked Megan up and kissed her with force as if she were saying that she missed Megan very much in this way. "I miss you, too..." Megan failed to restrain her emotions and danced for joy even if she was held in Vanessa's arms. Luke came close to Winnie and took her hand. Although he didn't know who Vanessa was, he was also happy because Megan was happy. "Auntie, who is this elder sister?" Luke asked curiously. "You should call her Auntie. She's my younger sister and Megan's Auntie. Therefore, you should also call her Auntie." Winnie felt sad while explaining to him. He should be loved by Vanessa like Megan. Poor boy. How could she compensate him for the love he missed? "Well, Megan, leave Vanessa's arms and stand on the ground. Auntie had just taken a plane, so she's tired." As Winnie said, she held Megan into her arms and put her on the ground. It was not until then did Winnie notice that there was a handsome little boy standing beside Winnie with whom he seemed to have a good relationship. "Sister, who is this child?" Vanessa asked in doubt, but there was a surprised expression in her eyes, Why did she feel surprised? Because this kid shared a lot of similarities with Megan and also had some similarities with Winnie. "He is Megan's classmate. Something came up at his home, so he lives in our house for the time being." There were too many people, so Winnie could only put it simply. Then, she took Luke's hand and said. "Luke, greet Auntie." "Hello, Auntie. My name is Luke. You can call me Luke." Luke greeted her politely. "Hello, you're so handsome. I'm going to fall in love with you." Vanessa crouched down and hugged Luke. "I like Auntie, too." Finding that Vanessa was kind to him, Luke soon liked her. In his opinion, members of Winnie's family were very loving and easy to get along with. "Well, let's go home first." After Winnie said that, they all got on the car and went home. Vanessa was surprised the moment she just opened the door. Looking at the luxurious decoration and finding that it was a duplex apartment, Vanessa couldn't believe what she had saw. "Sister, your new company is so generous, offering such a luxurious house to employees. I'll study hard and work in your company in the future, too." Vanessa said enviously with surprise in her eyes. "Hmm, the company I work in offers excellent benefits." Winnie could only answer in this way. Anyway, she couldn't say that she was the only one in the company who lived in such a big house offered by the company. "Follow me. I'll take you to your room." As Winnie said, she carried Vanessa's suitcase and walked towards the stairs. Soon, Vanessa took the suitcase from her. "Let me carry it. I can do it myself." Vanessa followed Winnie excitedly with two kids behind her. After coming to the room she would live in for the time being, Vanessa was surprised again because the design of this room was after her heart. "Sister, you know me so well and you know what I like. You must have prepared this room for me yourself." She was both delighted and touched. "Yes, I designed this room and I applied the warm colors you like." Winnie said with a smile. Vanessa's liking this room was a reward for her. This bedroom was originally a children's bedroom. It was very large and spacious, so it was big enough even if Vanessa rest and studied here. There was a private cloakroom and private bathroom in this bedroom, so it was very convenient for Vanessa to live in this room. The wallpaper, curtains, bed sheets and even the dolls on the bed were pink, which were prepared by Winnie specially. One reason why Winnie decorated the room like this was that Vanessa liked the pink color. The other reason was that items of warm colors could comfort Vanessa mentally and made her feel warm and safe. "I like it. I love it very much! I feel as if I had suddenly become a Princess. Thank you!" "You're welcome. But we just live here for the time being. Later, I'll buy a house for you." Winnie was serious. No matter what, she had to give Vanessa a home as long as she wanted to live in B City. "It's good enough!" Vanessa was very excited. Winnie always claimed that she lived a wealthy life in B City, but Vanessa had never expected that Winnie could live such a wealthy life. It was really great. "Have a rest now. Unpack your belongings at night. Later, we'll go out for a western food." Since Vanessa loved western food most, Winnie would of course take her have some. "We're going to have western food tonight!" It was Megan who was happy because she also liked western food. However, Winnie was too busy and couldn't take her out often. Today, her Auntie came back and she could have a good time, too. They arrived at the western restaurant in which they had booked a table in advance. It was a high-end restaurant with elegant environment. It was the first time that Vanessa had come to such a high-end western restaurant. After sitting down, Winnie asked for their opinions and then ordered. Then, they waited for the waiter and waitress to serve them the food. "Sister, Luke has a good relationship with you. Won't he miss his parents when he lives in your house?" Vanessa asked in a low voice. "Luke's the son of the President of the company I work for. Besides, it's also the company that make it possible for Megan to attend that kindergarten. Therefore, the kids get along with each other very well." Since Vanessa is very curious, Winnie had to explain roughly to her. Otherwise, Vanessa would be suspicious if she heard something from the kids. Winnie continued to say. "Luke's mother was sick and couldn't take care of him for the time being. Therefore, I took the initiative to take him home and take care of him for a while." It wasn't that Winnie wanted to take the opportunity to curse Penny. She just couldn't think of any other excuse. She could only convince Vanessa with this excuse. "Oh, my God. This little boy has such a powerful family! It appears that he is super rich." Vanessa felt surprised again and therefore ignored that Luke's mommy was sick. "Yes, he has family that is more powerful than that of any other people." But he was poor and lived a terrible life. Winnie could tell no one but herself these words. "Winnie, what a coincidence!" Just after Winnie finished her words, she heard a familiar voice. Winnie raised her head and became a little panicky. "Why are you here?" It seemed that Winnie was scared by these men. She looked at them in a daze. "Daddy, do you come here for western food, too?" "Hello, uncle." Luke and Megan greeted Brian at the same time. They were very happy to see Brian and thought that Brian and Winnie had agreed to have western food together here in advance. Vanessa looked at the four handsome straight men, feeling puzzled. In her opinion, it was the man who was the leader that was the most eye-catching. He was tall, domineering and awe-inspiring. Although he wore a cold expression, he happened to be just like the hero in the novels. But who was this man? Winnie knew him; Megan knew him; and Luke called her daddy... Was he the President Winnie mentioned and the rich daddy of Luke? Yes, he must be. "Winnie, Mr. Bennet treats us to western food today. What a surprise to meet you here." It was the first time for Albert not to talk in a serious manner. In fact, he was not good at telling such a lie. However, he had no choice but to tell this lie because Brian was beside him. Hearing what Albert said, Winnie understood what was going on. Then she looked at Brian. Their eyes met. Winnie dropped him a hint, asking him not to make trouble. However... "Since we happen to meet, just eat together." After saying that, Brian sat down beside Winnie. Then, Albert, Calvin and Morgan all sat down.
