Chapter 6

Julia noticed Gareth's sullen expression and scolded, "What is that look? Why? Are you angry because I asked you to bring your wife here to have dinner?" Gareth controlled his expression and turned to Julia. "I wouldn't dare." "Hmph! Is there anything you don't dare to do? You are not that young anymore! When are you going to give me a grandchild? Don't you know it is your duty to pass down the family line?" Elisa rushed to support Julia when she stood up. Gareth frowned and glanced at Elisa. Meanwhile, the servants noticed Gareth had returned and soon finished setting up the table for dinner. Thus, Julia pulled Elisa toward the dining table. "Come! Let's have dinner! If he doesn't like the food here, he can scam and never come back!" Gareth's expression darkened further. He did not speak but took a seat before them. Julia generously served a heap of food on Elisa's plate. It seemed like Elisa was her biological granddaughter, and Gareth was the grandson-in-law. Elisa ate freely and chatted with Julia. "Do you know how long you have not visited me here?" Julia glanced at Gareth and became even more furious when she saw Gareth not caring about her. "Is it so difficult to spend time with me? Your grandpa frequently travels for business and leaves me here alone. How can you ask this kind of question?" Gareth had nothing to say. He continued to eat his food and did not say anything. On the other hand, Julia grew even more agitated and slammed her hand on the table. "No matter what, Elisa is your wife, and you should cherish her. Why do you keep going to the hospital to spend time with that cunning woman? Have you not embarrassed the Wickam family enough?" Gareth's expression turned sullen. "Grandma, Linda saved my life." "She saved your life? Anyone can see she is deceiving you!" Gareth frowned and glared at Elisa. Elisa looked at him and smiled mockingly. She knew he thought she had tattled on him. Previously, I would worry that Gareth would misunderstand, but now... Hah! Who cares that he misunderstand? Would I lose anything? "Stop glaring at her! Elisa did not say anything to me! Do you think I won't notice? You went to the hospital every day and did not bother to go home!" Gareth pursed his lips and remained silent. The dinner consisted mostly of Julia scolding Gareth. Julia did not mince her words or show him
