Chapter 60 The Truth

Chapter 60 The Truth

Waylon Gray nodded at Bill Clay, and then he withdrew his gaze and turned to look at Alena Wright as if he had missed her face so much.

Alena Wright looked at Bill Clay's retreating back and then she looked at Waylon Gray and asked quietly, "Didn't you say before that Assistant Clay had returned to City A? Why is he still showing up here?"

Waylon Gray's eyes widened as he remembered the lie that he told Alena Wright to coax her to live with him.

He coughed slightly, and explained, "After what happened to you in the pool, I called him from City A."

Alena Wright didn't believe him at all. She pointed to the clock beside her, and relentlessly broke through his lie, "It's early morning, and it's only four hours since I fell into the water. The plane from City A to City B would take at least two and a half hours, not to mention that it's midnight and he cannot buy any ticket. Do you think I will believe what you say?"

There was another reason why she suspected that Bill Clay had not left City B at all. As she looked at Bill Clay earlier, he did not even look like he had rushed over to City B. If it was true, then he should at least look a little bit dusty.

Waylon Gray knew that he couldn't hide anything from her, so he no longer tried to hide the truth, and he directly admitted, "You're right. Bill Clay had been in City B and he never left."

Alena Wright snorted when she heard Waylon Gray's words. Waylon Gray had just saved her life, so she didn't get that much angry because of his deception. In fact, she couldn't help but feel a bit funny. The president of the dignified Monarch International Group actually learned to lie just for her.

Suddenly, the thought of her deceiving Waylon Gray suddenly made her uncomfortable.

She bit her lip as she looked at Waylon Gray cautiously before she said, "Waylon Gray..."

Waylon Gray glanced at her suspiciously, and asked, "What's the matter? Is there something wrong?"

Alena Wright shook her head. She swallowed her words then she lowered her eyes to hide her emotions before she pretended to ask calmly, "You once said that if someone cheated on you, then you would pull out their teeth and tongue, right? But what if that person is me? What will you do?"

She wondered if Waylon Gray would make an exception for her.

If he could make an exception for her, then maybe her plans could change.

Alena Wright held her breath as she quietly waited for Waylon Gray's answer.

Waylon Gray was silent for a moment, then he looked at her with a bit of coldness in his eyes, then he said, "If you are the one who deceived me, then I will break your legs."

Alena Wright couldn't help but hold the sheet in her hands tightly.

She should be thankful that Waylon Gray would only break her leg?

Instead of pulling her teeth, and cutting her tongue, he would only break her limbs. Was that even a good thing?

"Alena, I hate it when people deceive me, especially the people whom I care about. I care about you, so you'd better not deceive me. Otherwise, I don't know what I will do to you," Waylon Gray said in an indifferent tone.

Alena Wright was very nervous as she heard Waylon Gray's words.

Since then, she did not dare to let Waylon Gray know that she was Amanda Quinston.

At that moment, she made up her mind that she would hide her identity from her by all means.

Waylon Gray looked at Alena Wright and his eyes narrowed slightly, "Alena, why are you asking me this? Could it be that ---?"

Alena Wright didn't wait for him to finish speaking as she quickly shook her head and said, "I just asked casually, because you lied to me. I was angry and I wanted to punish you, so I am messing with you instead."

After speaking, she quietly raised her eyes to look at Waylon Gray as she was wondering if he would believe her very lame excuse.

Waylon Gray looked at her quietly for a while, then he suddenly smiled before he bent over and slowly got close to her cheek. He then said meaningfully, "Alena, do you want to punish me?"

The words from his mouth felt a little more ambiguous, and she couldn't help but think about some silly things.

Alena Wright's thoughts were instantly invaded by him, and her face couldn't help but flushed red. She imagined whipping Waylon Gray who was kneeling on the ground and begging for her mercy.

As she thought of that her cheeks flushed red, and a rush of heat rushed from the soles of her feet to the top of her head.

Waylon Gray looked at her charming cheeks, and a trace of curiosity flashed across his eyes, "Alena, what are you thinking? Why are your cheeks so red?"

As Alena Wright heard that, she erased the scene in her mind, and she shook her head vigorously. After that, she spoke in a nonchalant tone, "Nothing, it is just too warm in here."

"Really?" Waylon Gray asked suspiciously.

Alena Wright nodded and she was afraid to look at Waylon Gray in the eyes, for fear that she would again have nasty thoughts.

She didn't know why she suddenly thought of that scene.

"Alena, didn't you just say that you want to punish me? How do you want to punish me?" Waylon Gray asked with anticipation.

Suddenly, she saw the food on the side of her bed, then she clutched her belly as she looked at Waylon Gray pitifully, "I'm hungry!"

Waylon Gray knew that she was changing the subject, but as he saw her face, he sighed before he softly squeezed her cheeks, and said, "Do you want me to help you with this?"

She pretended to be silly and smiled. She was relieved to see that Waylon Gray did not ask her any more questions.

Alena Wright rested for another night. She had regained her strength again, and she didn't want to stay in the hospital anymore as she was clamoring to be discharged.

Because of that, Waylon Gray had no choice but to discharge her from the hospital with the doctor's permission.

She stood at the entrance of the hospital as she was looking up to enjoy the sunshine. She then sighed and said, "It's freeing to be outside."

Waylon Gray suddenly smiled as he watched her joyful face.

In the next second, the smile on his face disappeared completely, and a chilling aura suddenly surrounded him.

The change in Waylon Gray's face instantly caught Alena Wright's attention. She looked back at Waylon Gray and asked curiously, "What's wrong with you?"

He held Alena Wright's left hand and asked in a faint tone, "Alena, who pushed you into the water?"

Alena Wright froze for a moment.

When she was about to say that it was Mimi Winston, she suddenly remembered what Waylon Gray said about punishing people, and she suddenly became a little hesitant.

She intended to report to the police secretly because, for her, Waylon Gray's method of punishing people was illegal.
