

Omega's Rebirth

What News (Ch.16)

3-4 minutes

Neveah awoken the next morning to loud knocking on her door, she groaned in annoyance as she pulled her pillow over her ears and turned over on her bed, facing her back to the door.

The knocking continued, growing louder and more persistent the longer Neveah ignored it and it was also accompanied by a voice.

"Princess! Princess!" The voice kept on calling and Neveah growled beneath her breath as she sat up on her bed, cursing her pathetic fate.

"Can't I get even a moment of peace?!" Neveah huffed in annoyance as she got off her bed and headed to the door, unlatching the lock and fixing the young she wolf at the other side a blank stare.

Neveah found herself even more irritated when the lips of the young she wolf stretched into an overly bright smile and Neveah wondered what exactly could make anyone so excited in the morning hours.

"Who the hell are you?" Neveah asked in a blank tone.

"Morning greetings princess, I am Laila, to fill in for your Governess till she is restored to health. I will take care of all your domestic affairs and otherwise from henceforth." The young she wolf announced with a bow.

Neveah sighed, she should have known her step mother would never let her go unmonitored for even a single moment.

Fate had just taken away the infuriating Governess and here came another to watch her every move and report back to their queen.

"Whatever." Neveah murmured as she moved away from the door and headed back to her bed, laying down and pulling the covers over her head.

"I apologise for waking you up so early, Your Grace. I did hear the Princess is usually cranky in the morning, I was just eager to get started and hurried over here as soon as I was assigned, I hope you can forgive my oversight." Laila apologized.

Neveah sighed as she turned away from her new attendant who seemed rather chatty for a spy.

"Oh right! Did your grace hear of the events that happened in the Eclipse Palace last night?! The news is everywhere!" Laila exclaimed as she went around, tidying up Neveah's room dutifully.

Neveah perked up at this, frowning slightly as she watched Laila actually put her things in order, which was surprising as Neveah's Governess never actually did anything other than yell at Neveah.

Neveah was always the one to take care of the cleaning and laundry and all other things related to herself, although Neveah did not awfully mind it.

It gave her something to do when she was not being paraded around like a commodity by her father.

"What news?" Neveah asked as she pulled her pillow off from over her head and sat up, wincing slightly at the searing pain that shot through her side.

"Your Grace doesn't know?! The Dragon King was here!" Laila exclaimed, excited to have Neveah's interest.

Neveah's eyes widened in horror as she slumped back on her bed.

'Dragon King?! What Dragon King?! The actual supreme lord of the supernatural realm?! That Dragon King?!' Neveah thought in panic.

Unwelcome Suggestion (Ch.17)

4-4 minutes

---

As the day progressed, news of the appearance of the dragon shifters was buzzing everywhere, just like Neveah knew it would.

Neveah was certain not just the Eclipse Palace but the news had spread all around the Eclipse Domain in merely a single night.

And the center of importance of this buzzing news was the mysterious Alpha wolf who had appeared in the Eclipse Palace and battled the black dragon.

"Who do you think it could be? It would not be one of the Eclipse Alphas right? If it was, the Eclipse warriors would recognize the wolf immediately." Laila continued for the hundredth time, her eyes wide with curiosity.

"They say it is an Alpha wolf they have never seen before and carrying a strange scent!" Laila exclaimed, completely enthralled by the news.

Neveah heaved a sigh as she watched her newly assigned attendants prance all about her room, going on and on about the events that had happened last night.

It had only been a little over thirty minutes Neveah's new attendant had arrived after rudely awakening Neveah with loud and persistent knocking on her door.

Neveah was already completely fed up and even began considering how much quieter it would have been if it was her Governess who had come instead.

At least her Governess would be more concerned with talking down Neveah which was something Neveah was used to, unlike this extremely chatty and chirpy attendant whom Neveah was not sure how to react to.

Neveah wondered when the attendant would tire of the gossip she had been buzzing about for over a half hour, Neveah herself was already tired of it and wished her peace and quiet could return so she could go back to bed.

"I wonder what King Lothaire will do about it, perhaps he might declare a hunt for the trespasser, with all the Eclipse Alphas gathered here, it should not take too long before he is apprehended." Laila reasoned aloud.

"Hunted over what?!" Neveah snapped in annoyance, not liking the suggestions coming out of her attendants mouth.

A suggestion she dearly hoped would not cross her father's mind.

A hunt would mean the very best trackers would be gathered, in which case, just how was Neveah to escape unscathed?

Neveah may have been able to mislead the Eclipse warriors that once, but if they continued investigating, she would definitely be caught.

Other than the two dragons, Neveah was infact the only strange person who was in the forest when she was not supposed to be.

In reality, it was actually quite easy to figure out Neveah had been the strange Alpha wolf, it was only that everyone believed Neveah to be an omega and thus underestimated her.

This was precisely why Neveah was pretty certain they would never trace things back to her...but if a hunt was called, gathering all the best trackers and hunters across the Eclipse Domain,

Then Neveah knew it was completely over for her... the prejudice the Eclipse Fang warriors had against her was not shared by the other Eclipse packs.

If trackers from the other Eclipse packs looked into it, they would not brush off Neveah's presence in the forest casually like the Eclipse Fang warriors would.

What Is His Crime? (Ch.18)

4-5 minutes

All along, Neveah knew the only reason she had been able to protect her secret was not because she was overly smart and cautious, it was simply because she was not taken seriously by the Eclipse Fang.

They all saw her as the runt of the pack, the wannabe princess, a shame and a stain on their Alpha King's otherwise spotless image.

She was someone every wolf of Eclipse Fang detested, even more so because they still had to bow to her and accord her the respect of a princess due to the constant presence of foreign wolves from the other Eclipse packs.

They thought Neveah to be weak and useless, save for her facial looks and figure, everything else about her was pathetic.

And all this while, the shadow of their prejudice had blinded their eyes from seeing the truth even when Neveah slipped up.

Like when Alpha Queen Vilma had thrown a knife at her and the stab wound had healed the very moment she had pulled out the knife from her shoulder.

This had clearly been evidence of Neveah's accelerated regenerative abilities, but of course, it suited their prejudice more to decide Neveah had the gift of healing.

As pathetic as it was, Neveah knew this was the only reason she could keep her identity and her life safe for so long and Neveah planned for it to remain that way till she was ready to leave the Eclipse Fang Pack herself.

"Huh?" Laila asked, not understanding Neveah's sudden outburst.

Realizing she had overreacted, Neveah cleared her throat and spoke in a much calmer voice.

"I mean, from all you have told me, this Alpha wolf only battled the Black Dragon and saved one of our pups. Should he still be hunted? What is his crime?" Neveah adjusted carefully.

"What is his crime?! Oh Princess, you must not know it since you were born wolf-less , but we are extremely territorial beings and trespassing is considered a grave crime."

"And trespassing of another Alpha wolf is an act of disdain to the Alpha overseeing that territory."

"The Dragon shifters have done it and King Lothaire is unable to stand against them, his authority was undermined repeatedly in one night, he will never let that Alpha wolf go." Laila whispered, glancing around as though to ensure no one could hear her gossiping about the Alpha King.

Neveah quirked a brow, although it was not her first time being mocked for her lack of knowledge as an omega, however when others said it, they said it with contempt and detestation.

They said it with the intent to hurt Neveah believing she was still susceptible to harsh words and insults.

However for some reason, Laila's wording sounded different... it sounded indifferent and straightforward as though she was just pointing out the truth without much thought attached to it.

Neveah sighed at Laila's words, wondering why she had found herself in such a situation.

Neveah knew her father well enough, he was a very proud man and to have himself in a situation where he had to bow his head to the Dragon Shifters even when they trespassed his territory could only mean his wrath had been triggered.

And the victim of his wrath would have to be the only other person who had undermined his authority and the one he did not need to bow to... a certain, unlucky Alpha wolf.

Someone At The Door (Ch.19)

4-4 minutes

---

The moment Laila took her leave, Neveah breathed a deep sigh of relief.

She had not realized how valued her peace and quiet was till she had had her morning completely disrupted by the talkative she wolf.

However Neveah comforted herself in the fact that though Laila was most likely also sent by the Alpha Queen Vilma to spy on her, the talkative she wolf was still quite useful,

Not only had she kept Neveah updated on the present status on the search for the mystery Alpha wolf, she had also tidied up Neveah's room and prepared Neveah's bath water.

Now, she had gone off to fetch Neveah's breakfast from the kitchen and Neveah swore she found the attentive care of her new attendant unsettling.

"Well, enjoy it while it lasts." Neveah told herself as she got off her bed with a quiet groan of pain and headed into her washroom.

Neveah pushed the door shut and locked it before she headed over to her mirror, standing before it, she stared at her expression, noticing she looked rather pale and Neveah guessed it was due to blood loss.

Neveah sighed, her injury had stopped bleeding sometime within the night and she had had to change her blood stained sheets and bandages before going back to bed.

Neveah then pulled off her night robes and unwrapped the bandages, examining the wound through the mirror.

Every other lighter injury had already healed and even this showed signs of closing up and Neveah guessed it would be completely healed by the next day.

The spikes on the black dragon's tail had pierced in too deep and Neveah was even impressed to see she was healing so well without receiving proper medical attention.

Neveah was grateful she had considerable medical knowledge, the wound would not get infected and would heal just fine.

Neveah sighed quietly, stepping into her bath pool, she slowly washed herself, careful to avoid her wounds as she basked in the warmth provided by the water.

Just as Neveah was contemplating relaxing for a short while, there was a knock on her door and Neveah released a quiet groan.

Neveah got out of her bath pool and dried herself before pulling on a robe and heading to her door, unlocking it and pulling it open.

While Neveah had expected to see Laila who she guessed had returned with her breakfast, Neveah's heart dropped when she came face to face with Alpha King Lothaire.

"F... father..." Neveah stuttered out, as bone chilling terror gripped her, her mind reeling with various thoughts.

'What was he doing here? Why had he come? Did he know something? Was this how it would end for her?' Many thoughts flashed across Neveah's mind in a split second as she stood frozen in place.

"Move." Alpha King Lothaire demanded in a low tone that jolted Neveah back to reality as she hurriedly moved aside to let her father in.

"Morning greetings, father." Neveah quickly greeted with a low bow.

"Hmm.... I was beginning to wonder if you needed another lesson on proper etiquette." Alpha King Lothaire said in that low, terrifying tone.

Someone At The Door (Ch.20)

---

Neveah winced slightly at her father's implications but did not dare speak further.

She merely stood there, her head bowed, not daring to meet her father's gaze as his eyes scanned her quarters before settling on her again.

"Why were you out in the forest last night?" Alpha King Lothaire asked.

'He knows! By the creator he knows!' Neveah thought in horror,

Neveah's heart stopped beating for a moment, her hands trembling in terror as she clenched them into fists, trying unsuccessfully to calm herself.

"I... I..." Neveah stammered, unable to form a coherent word.

"Sulking about what your mother and brother said to you?" Alpha King Lothaire interrupted in a tone of distaste.

"I...No father, I wouldn't dare." Neveah muttered in a low tone barely above a whisper.

"Of course you would, do not act like some scared little rabbit Neveah. You might fool Alessio by your submissive pretenses but not your father."

"Lift your head and be still, stop trembling...is this the demeanor of a Princess? I believe I raised you better." Alpha King Lothaire said.

Neveah eyes fluttered closed as she gathered every ounce of courage she had to compose herself and slowly lifted her head to meet her father's stern gaze.

"I have told you time and again to be careful of the woods, so imagine my surprise to see you out there last night...it seems you forget you are the only human amongst us, you are the most vulnerable, the weak link." Alpha King Lothaire continued in distaste,

Neveah clenched her fists tightly at her father's words, words she had heard much too often to even feel hurt about, yet only stirred the deep urge to challenge her father's authority.

Neveah recognized her wolf's interference in her emotions for what it was and gritted her teeth against those urges that would ultimately get her killed.

"I acted without thought, I apologise." Neveah replied quietly.

"Do not do things you will have to apologize for Neveah, your father is not a patient man...you know this too." Alpha King Lothaire reminded.

"I... I understand." Neveah replied.

"Of course you do, now I have instructed your attendant to deliver your clothing, the young Alpha of Eclipse Claw has sought permission to take you out to town for the day,"

"The Eclipse Alphas shall depart soon, use the time left to get as much intel as you can, I have high expectations. Afterwards, pay Luna Colleen a visit in her quarters... Dane keeps asking." Alpha King Lothaire instructed.

Neveah's heart eased slightly as she understood the reason her father had come had nothing to do with the mysterious Alpha wolf.

Which meant Neveah's secret was still safe, as was her life...at least for now.

"As father wishes." Neveah said with a bow.

Alpha King Lothaire hummed in response as he headed for the door but paused halfway.

"Oh..and henceforth, you are not allowed to venture into the woods for any reason whatsoever."

"Go take a look at your Governess's condition and see for yourself that your father only has your best interest at heart." Alpha King Lothaire added.

"I understand father, I am grateful for father's care." Neveah forced out through gritted teeth, remaining in a bow till her father was gone.
