

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 154 Is She Really Pregnant?

Although Bob had repeatedly told Johnny that he needed a good rest and that he would help him find Ceres, how could Johnny be obedient?

Johnny knew that Ceres was a smart woman. If she had already decided to escape, she would definitely be able to avoid his informers and escape.

It was only at that time that he realized how terrifying a woman was to be smart.

Even though Johnny had already sent people to seal off all exits to leave the Imperial City, he still didn't find Ceres.

Even Bob found it strange. Did she still stay in the Imperial City and wait for Johnny to find her?

"Johnny, will Ceres still be in the Imperial City? Is she playing with you?"

Johnny frowned. When he sent out the order of blockade, it was just less than an hour before Ceres left. And it would take at least an hour and a half to go from their home to any exit out of the Imperial City. Besides, at that time, there was still a traffic jam. So, it was estimated that it would take her at least two hours to arrive.

In other words, as long as Ceres was ready to leave the Imperial City, she would definitely be stopped by his informers.

But after a few hours, there was still no sign of her!

Johnny couldn't help but suspect that there might be other possibilities!

"She might be kidnapped."

"Kidnapping? Are you kidding me? Could it be that the person who kidnapped her helped her write the divorce agreement to create the illusion of leaving?" Bob could not understand and felt that this was simply nonsense.

Johnny had no time to explain. He guessed that either Ceres was kidnapped when she was about to leave, or Ceres was very smart and knew that Johnny would not let her go, so she temporarily hid herself and waited for the opportunity to leave again.

Johnny forced his way out of the hospital again. Seeing his terrible expression, the driver hurriedly asked, "Mr. Jack Johnny, where are we going?"

"Let's go home."

Johnny needed to go home to check the situation, because maybe he had missed some clues. Just as the car was about to enter the community, he suddenly shouted, "Stop!"

The driver hurriedly stepped on the brake in fright. And Johnny did not wait for the car to stop before opening the door and getting off.

In the nearby bushes, he found chicken feathers with blood!

Walking along with the chicken feathers, he found that rooster!

However, the rooster was already on its last breath. It lay on the ground, gasping for breath, with its fur messy and many bloodstains on it. It seemed to have fought with someone.

Johnny picked up the rooster and asked the driver to send it to the pet hospital for treatment.

He immediately gathered with Bob.

Bob was puzzled by Johnny's guess, "Come on, Johnny, does Ceres make you lose your ability to judge? How could she be kidnapped? With just a rooster? Maybe that the rooster ran out and fought with a stray dog!"

"She must have been kidnapped," Johnny's tone remained firm.

"There should at least be some clues to the kidnapping, right?"

"The rooster is just a clue. Now, let's start a citywide manhunt."

Johnny's decision caused Bob to have a mental breakdown once again. How could he start a citywide manhunt just by a guess?

How much manpower and resources was needed to have a citywide manhunt?

Was it worth it for a woman who might just be runaway?

However, Bob did not ask, because he knew that Johnny would never change his decision.

Ceres was released, but the windows and doors in the room were blocked. Also, there were people watching downstairs, so she could not escape.

She was curled up on the bed, and someone had already come over to draw her blood for a test.

Ceres knew clearly that it seemed that she had not had her period for a long time. In addition to her father's death, she had long forgotten when her menstruation had come last time.

How could she get pregnant again?

It had only been three months since the last miscarriage, which just reached the time limit of three months when the doctor said that she could not get pregnant.

How could she conceive Johnny's child?

He was her enemy!

How could she conceive a child of her enemy!

Ceres felt desperately gloomy. Why did God want to joke with her like that?

In the meantime, Jack was sitting on the sofa in the Winsors, leisurely sipping tea.

Originally, he had not planned to kidnap Ceres because George was already dead, and Ceres had already concluded that Johnny was the murderer of her father, and they two had already turned hostile.

However, currently, Johnny was becoming more and more uncontrollable. So, he had to keep a backup plan and kidnapped Ceres first.

With a test report in his hand, Colin walked in cautiously, "Mr. Jack, Ceres's test report is out. She... She is indeed pregnant."

"What? Is she really pregnant? Didn't she just have a miscarriage a while ago?"

Jack hurriedly took the test report over, on which the result was clear!

He angrily threw the report aside.

This son of his was really capable. Not long after her miscarriage, he actually got her pregnant again!

Colin also saw Jack's anxiety, "Mr. Jack, since Ceres is caught by us, whether this child can be kept or not is also up to you."

Colin naturally understood Jack, who would never allow a woman like Ceres to bear a child for the Winsors.

Jack was lost in thought.

Colin hurriedly said, "In addition, there is one more thing, Mr. Jack. Mrs. Mary is pregnant too."

Jack frowned and thought that the two women were pregnant at the same time!

It seemed that the Winsors was really going to increase the population.

However, he was not very satisfied with either of the two children. Although Henry was also his son, he was born by Zara. So his genetic bloodline was incomparable to Johnny.

Johnny's genes were good, but his wife was not satisfactory at all.

"Keep the child of Mrs. Mary."

No matter what, Mary was officially married to the son of the Winsors. Although there was an accident at the wedding, she was still the second mistress of the Winsors.

"Yes," Colin nodded.

"The Morris Group is about to go bankrupt. Go and inform them to help the Morris Group, for the sake of Mrs. Mary," Jack said again.

Jack originally didn't want to care about the Morris Group facing bankruptcy, but at this time, Mary was pregnant. For the sake of the child, and for the sake of restraining Johnny, he had to make this decision.

"Okay, I'll do it immediately. Then... What about the child of Ceres? Do you want to keep it?"

Jack, however, was once again in trouble.

Should he keep the baby?

He frowned and kept thinking.

Colin could only stand at his side and wait silently.

"Mr. Jack, if Master Johnny knows that Ceres is pregnant, then no matter what, Master Johnny will be with her. After all, Master Johnny likes Ceres..."
