

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 268 My World Finally Has Light

The entire president's office was in a mess.

Kirs was pushed and shoved in the beginning, but then it directly became a group fight. His face was all-around black and blue. Even his lips were injured and stained with blood.

Everything was thrown to the ground.

Kneeling on the ground, Kirs was like a person waiting for redemption.

Everything he had suffered today. He would definitely get revenge!

Definitely!

In the Villa Amio.

It was a rare opportunity for them to get together for a meal. Ceres had lost her sense of taste, and the food she made was unsavory. Therefore, their meals were all made by the servants.

For the past few days, Swedum had gone to the Winsor's several times. Johny was very happy because no one would steal his wife at night.

"Swedum, are you used to living in the Winsor's?" Ceres added a piece of meat into Swedum's bowl.

"Not bad. Grandpa treats me very well." Swedum narrowed his eyes and looked at Ceres.

In the past, he only had Mommy. Now that he had Daddy and Grandpa, his life was very fulfilling and satisfied.

"Why did he keep asking you to go there recently?" Johny pretended to ask casually.

"Who is he?" Swedum was a little confused.

"Grandpa," Ceres said hastily.

"Oh, it was because Dahlia needed someone to talk to. In fact, she can talk. She just doesn't dare to do so. She likes to talk to me and had said that she wanted me to be her elder brother since she didn't want a younger one. But Grandpa said that she was older than me. By the way, Mommy, will you and Daddy abandon me when there is a younger brother or sister?"

"How could that be? No matter how many younger brothers or sisters there are, you are our treasure!" Ceres almost choked.

Johny was expressionless.

The result of his investigation also pointed to the child called Dahlia, the daughter of Henry and Mary.

However, he vaguely felt that something was wrong.

"I said so! While Dahlia didn't believe it. She even said that all the parents were like this. When they have younger children, they forget about the elder ones. The elder children could only be beaten and bullied!"

Swedum looked at Ceres and Johny with satisfaction. "I don't think my daddy and mommy will be like this!"

"Yeah, we won't be like this."

"Mommy, visit Dahlia with Daddy and me some other day! I want to tell her that my daddy and mommy will not abandon me."

Ceres dared not to agree immediately. She subconsciously turned to Johny.

Johny's facial expression hadn't changed a bit.

Although Ceres had lost all her memories of Johny, Johny had never mentioned anything about the Winsors in front of her. She knew that Johny must have a bad relationship with his family.

"Daddy is a little busy recently. Maybe later."

"What? Daddy isn't filial at all. Grandpa vomited blood again today. But you never visited him!" Swedum was unhappy.

"Shut up!" Johny threw his chopsticks on the table.

Swedum was startled.

This was the first time that Johny had been so rude to him.

Ceres was also frightened. She knew that the Winsors was Johny's taboo, but she did not expect that Johny cared so much.

Johny also realized that he might have gone too far. He stood up and left the restaurant.

"Swedum, Daddy is not in a good mood today. Don't take it seriously." Ceres hurriedly comforted Swedum.

"Oh, I shouldn't have been so disrespectful, right?" Swedum also realized that he might have said something wrong.

"It's not that Daddy doesn't care about Grandpa. It's complicated. A kid like you might not be able to understand right now, and you see that?"

"Alright." Swedum lowered his head in frustration.

After the meal, Ceres had stayed in Swedum's room until Swedum had fallen asleep. Until then, she went to Johny.

Johny was smoking on the balcony of the second floor.

The fire on the end of the cigarette kept glimmering, contrasting against Johny's iceberg-like face.

Ceres walked over.

Sensing Ceres's footsteps, Johny put out the rest half of the cigarette on the balcony.

"It doesn't matter. You can smoke if you want."

Johny turned around and looked up at the moon. Ceres stood beside him.

"Don't you want to ask something?" Johny's voice was a little husky.

"Yes, but it's fine if you don't want to say it."

Johny's gaze landed on Ceres's calm face.

"The heirs of the Winsor family have to accept the commercial marriage. It can make both the family and the heir more powerful. Therefore, the ones who are going to get married with the Winsors must be girls with noble birth as well as outstanding looks and knowledge."

Ceres felt her heart skip a beat.

She seemed not to meet with the standards of the head wife of the Winsor family at all. Would it be the reason why Johny broke off with the family?

"In the Winsor family, only benefit matters. The family's interests are above everything. I am just the outcome of a commercial marriage."

Johny stared at the moon. His broken voice carried some faint sadness.

"What my father said the most was that I had inherited his excellent genes. The reason why he would marry my mother is that she has a huge family. She is beautiful, smart, and knowledgeable. She is a rare noble lady."

"He has no feelings for my mother. I think even if she dies, he will probably not shed a single tear."

Ceres hugged Johny gently.

"He doesn't love me either. In his eyes, I am a robot he copied. I have to learn everything according to his rules. Since I was little, every course and skill I learned was chosen by him. I never had the right to choose."

"Even if I was sick, even if I was in a bad mood, I must complete the course he set before I could rest. I was just no other than a robot."

Johny sighed deeply, "I seldom laughed. That was because I barely felt happy in my childhood. Is a robot qualified to laugh?"

Ceres hugged Johny with a distressed expression.

"I remember once when I had a high fever of forty degrees. When he came back, he wanted to check my financial course. I did not answer him. He had slapped me in the face so hard that I instantly had tinnitus. I could never forget how he insulted me."

"Then I had fainted and was hospitalized. I thought he would come to see me, but he didn't. He asked the servant to bring me a lot of textbooks and let me learn in the ward. The first thing he did when I was discharged was to check the results of my studies during my hospitalization."

Johny lowered his head and smiled bitterly.

"Ceres, do you know? Before I met you, my life was dark. I thought I would live in this dark world for the rest of my life. I thought I would marry the girl he appointed, do what he told me to, and carry the Winsor Group forward as he wished. But you appeared, and my world finally had light."
