

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 269 Sending the Invitation

Johnny hugged Ceres tightly.

Ceres let him know that there was love in the world.

That was why he was willing to go through fire and water for her.

"I have known that I can be happy every day since I met you." Johnny lowered his head and smiled. "Thank you, Ceres."

Ceres's heart ached.

She had already forgotten what Johnny had done for her and why she loved Johnny so deeply.

It was the first time that she had felt how bad it was to lose her memory.

Ceres thought that they had experienced a lot when they were together, and Johnny had brought light to her world as well.

But she had forgotten everything.

"Tell me what happened to us in the past, okay? I promise I won't let my imagination run wild." Ceres looked at Johnny in panic.

Johnny realized that his confession might have hurt her.

"Didn't we agree not to think about that?"

"But I want to remember it now."

Ceres drooped her head like a child who had done something wrong.

Johnny lifted her chin and kissed her affectionately.

Under the moonlight, they had a passionate kiss.

But not long after, Ceres felt that Johnny breathed hard.

Ceres pushed him away, but Johnny did not let her go and said, "Go back to your room."

Could Ceres refuse him?

Of course not!

They had sex tonight.

Johnny had already gone to the company before Ceres woke up in the morning. She stretched and felt herself fall to pieces.

She would fall apart sooner or later because Johnny was good at making love!

Last night, Johnny's sudden kiss interrupted her thoughts. She thought that Johnny would not tell her about the past, and he would warn others not to tell her.

If she wanted to recall the past, she could only leave it to fate.

But she wanted to do something for Johnny.

Ceres got up hurriedly and wore decent clothes from the closet. Then she got into the car and went to the Winsor's.

Jack was surprised to hear that Ceres had come.

Jack got sick these two days and vomited blood yesterday. He was still recuperating at home.

Colin saw Jack's pale face and hurriedly said, "Mr. Jack, I will tell Miss Ceres that you are not feeling well."

"No need. Tell her to wait for me in the study."

Jack sat up with difficulty.

Ceres was led into Jack's study. This study was decorated in an antiquated style with a dazzling array of books on the bookshelves.

Thinking that Johnny had once studied here, Ceres had the intimacy towards this place.

Jack was in a decent and noble suit. His gray hair had also been neatly combed. He held a crutch and hobbled in. However, Jack refused to be helped.

He walked straight to the desk and sat down with a cold face.

Ceres did not have much of an impression of Jack. She just felt that Johnny looked similar to him when putting on a stern face.

"Hello." Ceres bowed slightly.

"Why do you come here?"

"I heard from Swedum that you have been in poor health recently. Johnny misses you very much, but he is busy with work. So, I come to visit you on his behalf." Ceres smiled.

Jack snorted.

"You want to come here, right? Johnny won't come back, and he won't miss me."

Jack knew his son well. When Johnny went against him, Jack could only see indifference and cold-bloodedness in his eyes.

Ceres did not expect that the grudge between them had been rooted deeply.

"I'll tell you the truth. Johnny heard from Swedum that you vomited blood and were in a bad mood. Johnny smoked a lot of cigarettes and told me a lot about his childhood. He said that you raised him like a robot."

Ceres continued, "But I know that he still misses you."

Ceres could only confess.

Jack was stunned.

A Robot.

Jack had heard this word from Johnny too.

Jack thought, 'Is this reason why he likes playing with robots?'

"I know that no parent doesn't love their children. You may have used the wrong way of expressing your love. So, I want to invite you to our wedding."

As she spoke, Ceres took out an invitation from her bag and placed it respectfully on his table.

Ceres had called Ben and knew that he had not sent an invitation to the Winsors.

Johnny had never intended to invite anyone from the Winsors when he decided to leave the Winsor's.

"It's my son's wedding. You come to send me an invitation. How ridiculous!"

Jack glanced at the invitation and sneered.

"I have already sent you the invitation. As for whether you will come to our wedding or not, it depends on you. Sorry to bother you."

Ceres nodded and left the study.

A servant sent Ceres away.

Jack stared at the invitation on the desk.

Zara knocked on the door and came in, "I heard someone comes. I would like to see what kind of distinguished guest it is. Mr. Jack even disregards his health."

Zara saw the red invitation as soon as she entered.

"Who will get married?" Zara picked it up.

Seeing the name on it, Zara put on a cold face. She put the invitation back.

"Mr. Jack, is Johnny back?"

"It's that girl," Jack replied.

Ceres came personally to deliver the invitation. Zara wondered what her intention was.

Could it be that Ceres wanted Johnny to reconcile with Jack? If it came true, the Winsor's would fall into Johnny's hands.

It seemed that Ceres was ambitious.

"Mr. Jack, you're going to attend the wedding, right? That's good. Johnny hasn't been back for a long time. I heard that his wedding was prepared well. We can go and enjoy the liveliness."

Jack's face darkened.

"Johnny asked a girl to send me an invitation. Why should I show respect to him? I won't go!"

After saying that, Jack hobbled out of the study.

The smile on Zara's face disappeared. Zara decided to be wary of Ceres.