

One Night Stand With The Uninvited Wolf President

Chapter 362 Legal Marriage

Since Johnny told Ceres what was on his mind, she felt extremely carefree. She only needed to deal with Caleb. After that, she could reunite with her family.

Since she had nothing to do, Ceres came to see Johnny, who tried to have a baby with her again.

Ceres suddenly regretted that she always came to see him. She thought, 'You lucky dog!'

"I have something to discuss with you. Johnny, Caleb said that as long as I divorce you, he would take the examination and treatment. What do you think?"

Ceres asked tentatively.

"No!" Johnny refused directly without hesitation.

"Why not? It's just a fake divorce, not a real divorce."

"Do you think a fake divorce is enough?" Johnny shot Ceres a glance.

Ceres stuck out her tongue. "The divorce certificate must be real, but our relationship is as solid as gold. We shouldn't worry about that, right?"

After all, even Ceres didn't mind. She didn't think a man should worry about it.

"I do care about it!" Johnny knocked on Ceres's head gently. "Do not say it again. Or I will punish you!"

Ceres did not dare to make him angry, so she could only compromise.

However, Johnny kept asking, "Caleb only said that you and I should get divorced? Is that all?"

"Yeah..." Ceres immediately got nervous.

"Answer me!"

"You see me through all the time. Well ... He wanted me to be with ... Roy. But!" Ceres was terrified.

After saying that, Ceres immediately raised her hand and made an oath. "I rejected his request without hesitation. I didn't hesitate at all! I even lost my temper!"

Johnny, however, was not interested in it. "You talked to me last time. It was Roy who asked you to do that, right?"

Ceres blinked a few times. She didn't expect Johnny to know that.

She had thought that Roy knew her well. It seemed that it was Johnny who had sharp eyes and could read her mind!

"Not really..."

"You're very close to him." Johnny stared at Ceres with a gloomy gaze, which made Ceres hold her breath nervously.

"No! We just live in the same house, so we come across each other sometimes. I just can't avoid him."

Johnny's eyes turned cold.

"Please help me. Let's fake a divorce so that I can fix this. At that time, I won't have to live there anymore. We can be together with our son!" Ceres hugged him.

"No way!" Johnny's dignity was not to be defied.

Just as Ceres was about to say something, Ben knocked on the door. "Mr. Johnny, Caleb is here. He said that he was here to pick up Ms. Ceres."

"Didn't he go to the company today? Why did he come here?" Ceres sat up in shock.

She quickly picked up her clothes and started to put on her clothes.

Johnny was very unhappy. They were married. But Ceres behaved as if they were secret lovers!

If they got divorced, it would be worse!

"What are you afraid of? There will be ways out." Johnny was wearing clothes calmly.

"You're not afraid, but I'm scared! Caleb is sick. Last time, he was sent to the hospital because he fainted in anger. Is there a back door here?" Ceres muttered. She had put on her clothes and prepared to escape.

"Are you trying to escape?"

"Of course! I can't just go out like this. You go downstairs to deal with him. Just say that I have never been here. And I will sneak out of the back door."

Johnny fastened the buttons on his clothes, walked over, and grabbed Ceres's wrist. "You are my wife. He has no reason to stop us from meeting each other."

"No, no, no. You got me wrong. Johnny, you ... you..."

Johnny directly pulled Ceres downstairs.

Caleb sat on the sofa with a serious face. When he saw Johnny pull Ceres down, his face darkened even more.

"Ceres, come home with me." He stood up.

"Why are you here?" Ceres asked with an awkward smile.

As she spoke, she walked towards Caleb, but Johnny held her wrist tightly. Caleb saw this and became angry. "Johnny, let her go!"

"Mr. Caleb, Ceres is my wife. It is natural for us to meet. Mr. Caleb, you have no reason to stop us, right?"

Ceres felt anxious.

"Reason? She is my daughter. I won't let my daughter marry you!" Caleb pointed at Johnny as he spoke, his fingers almost touching Johnny's face.

"But we are married."

"Then get divorced! Go through the divorce procedures now! Ceres doesn't need anything from you!"

Johnny smiled faintly, "Mr. Caleb, you have never raised Ceres and have never done what a father should do for her. Even if you had raised her, you are not in a position to interfere with her marriage. It's the modern age. We have freedom of marriage. Don't you understand?"

"Stop it. Stop!" Ceres pulled Johnny's sleeve and whispered.

"You ... you brat! Ceres, go home with me!" Caleb didn't know how to retort, so he immediately stomped his feet.

Ceres wanted to leave with Caleb. Given the current situation, she had to leave even if she didn't want to. After all, he was her biological father, who didn't have much time left.

Johnny still did not let go of her.

"Caleb, we love each other. We already have a son. Why do you have to break us up? What kind of father would ask his daughter to get divorced for no reason? Do you think I will be happy after that?"

Ceres had no choice but to defend Johnny.

"Go home with me!" Caleb stomped his foot and felt a little dizzy. He immediately closed his eyes and held his head with his hand.

"Calm down..." Ceres hurried forward, and Johnny could only let go of her hand. "Are you okay? You stubborn old man! You should go to the hospital to have a checkup as soon as possible. You just won't listen!"

"Let's go!" Caleb pulled Ceres by the wrist and walked out.

Ceres turned her head to look at Johnny and winked at him.

She was in plight now. Johnny was her husband. But Caleb was her father.

On the way back, Caleb stopped talking. Ceres glanced at him. "Are you okay? Do you want to go to the hospital?"

"No! You are a girl! How could you do this?"

"I did nothing wrong! He is my husband. Our marriage is legal."

"From today on, you are not allowed to leave the manor!"

Caleb ordered.