Candice waited as the window rolled slowly down.

However, she soon regretted her rash decision and decided she wasn't ready to see the man who slept with her that night.

She pressed abruptly on the window when it opened a gap.

She knew that there was a sensor in such high-end cars that would stop the window when someone touched it.

Sure enough, the window stopped moving.

The gap was not wide enough to glance into. However, Candice could see a hint of the man's clothing against the faint light in the car. He was sitting by the window.
