

Paragon 721

Chapter 721 - 721: Making of the Seven-Star Paragon Force (21)

"Can you go back out there again?" Klaus asked the two ladies who had shown remarkable teamwork by defeating a Level 9 Redwing Diamond Body Tyrant Ant, which was at the 10th Tier.

A true beast on the same level as Overlord Dharma of the Earth-Moon Alliance.

Sofia and Amelia nodded, looking rather happy that Klaus was finally speaking to them without seeming distant.

Before coming to the forbidden zone, Klaus hadn't been very easygoing with them, so they had appeared more distant.

But now, he was much friendlier. Of course, they knew it was because of the role they had played in him and the conflict with the Legacies.

However, in truth, Klaus just wanted to see if they were truly committed to this training and a possible friendship.

He wasn't that petty to isolate them from the rest of the team. Of course, gaining his recognition is something else entirely.

But he knew some people tended to get disappointed if they didn't receive the recognition they desired.

That was actually to be expected, considering that the others in the team were receiving the necessary recognition while they weren't.

But now, Klaus could finally see that they met the standards he could call friends.

Sofia and Amelia nodded in response to his question.

"Then go back and help your teammates." They nodded again and flew toward the battlefield. He watched them go, and a smile appeared on his face.

He saw their potential and knew with the right training, they would soar through the dragon gate like the carp and finally become the dragons and phoenix they were meant to be.

"Sofia, you and Amelia should go help Mark and Kathy," Lucy ordered the moment the two fire ladies reappeared on the battlefield.

They nodded.

However, just before the two ladies could move, Mark spoke.

"That won't be necessary."

Mark and Kathy were handling four Tier 10 Redwing Diamond Body Tyrant Ants—odds that the two weren't equipped to handle them.

Kathy was using her warrior form, which only lasted for two hours each day. However, it wasn't doing much, and she was even considering the next best option—taking her beast form.

So, for Mark, who hadn't been able to do anything from the start to stop two helpers from coming to their aid, something had to be amiss.

"Mark, what are you doing?" Lucy asked. She could clearly see that Kathy wasn't maintaining much control over the situation, and Mark was completely useless, so she had to ask.

In response, Mark gave Kathy an order that held no hesitation.

"Big Sister Kathy, take your beast form and move back."

Kathy looked at him hesitantly, but recalling what Klaus had said about trusting one's teammates, she obeyed. A large golden bird appeared, filling the battlefield with her magnificence.

Then she flew back, distancing herself from the four Tier 10 Ants. Again, she was really against whatever Mark was thinking, but she had to trust him.

The moment she was far away enough, Mark lifted his spear and held it in the middle. He then spins it quickly.

Just as he did that, Klaus, who was in tune with reality, felt everything slow down significantly. It was like being struck by a time bomb.

"This can't be it, right?" he muttered, but as if he had expected it, the four ants lunging at Mark started to slow down until their movements became a slow-motion blur.

Klaus blinked once or twice, but he clearly saw what was happening. Perhaps he didn't want to accept it, but it was right before his eyes.

Time had slowed down for the four ants.

Kathy, who needed no explanation to understand what this meant, activated a skill that further hardened her already metallic wings, making her feathers several times more piercing.

She took a nose dive, and when she was three meters away, she flapped her wings, sending several metallic feathers that instantly decimated the ranks of the four Tier 10 ants.

They fell slowly, and just a few meters before hitting the ground, time restored itself, making them slam into the earth with full force.

Amelia waved her hand, engulfing them in flames just for precaution's sake.

Mark, who held a smile on his face, fell from the air, but before he could hit the ground, Klaus moved toward him and encased him in ice.

Lucy looked at Klaus, and when she saw his smile, she felt he would punish her after the battle.

Just now, she had questioned Mark's decision, and had she acted against it; they wouldn't have been able to kill four Tier 10 ants in exchange for the life of one of their own.

Danny had killed six and was now out of the battle, and Mark had taken down four and was also off. But that didn't weaken their team.

It strengthens them, for the odds are finally moving toward their corner.

When Kathy finished off the four ants, she immediately moved toward Hanna and Lulu, who were still battling the berserk ant.

It became a three-against-one battle.

Lucy quickly gave Sofia a new order.

Sofia went to help Daniel and Miguel, while Amelia went to aid Vida now that her teammate Danny was out of commission.

The battle quickly took shape. Soon, it returned to a sense of normalcy, even as more shocking events continued to unfold.

However, the immediate dangers were being swiftly dealt with by Kathy, who was now at full strength, having assumed her true beast form.

Meanwhile, Klaus was observing Kilian's body with interest, while the senior couldn't believe his eyes.

[I know this world is not normal just because you are in it. But to think someone with control over time would be among you... Just what is this world?]

Klaus smiled.

The temporal energy surrounding Mark's body was something he could see. It was similar to Danny's chaotic energy.

This meant that just as Danny was destined to become a Titan one day, Mark was fated to gain control over time.

"I guess good things happen to good people."

Klaus didn't know what else to say, so he simply spoke his mind as he watched the frozen body of his friend, who was now undergoing healing.

[You really have some friends, brat. First, it was a Titan, and now a Chronomancer. I have to say, for someone who has a thing for speed, having control over time too will come in handy.]

Klaus smiled again and poured his Star Qi into the two frozen figures, speeding up their healing processes. He would examine them more thoroughly when the battle was over, but for now, they should rest.

The rest of their teammates were already handling the fight well.

That was especially true for Kilian, who did not miss a beat in his attacks. Jason also was doing the same, wielding light energy in conjunction with sword Qi to unleash powerful sword techniques.

However, while calm was beginning to settle over most of the battlefield, one part was still raging with fire and lightning.

The ants were being swallowed into a hurricane of flames and electricity.

At the center stood Matt and Linda, actively bending the elements to kill as they pleased.

One could even say a certain bald-headed teenager with an arrow lining through his head would look very jealous of these two.

Chapter 722 - 722: Making of the Seven-Star Paragon Force (22)

The battle became manageable after Danny and Mark created magic by eliminating ten of their most dangerous and harrowing foes.

Even Kay's plan to kill two more Tier 10s was halted by his two friends, who had significantly changed the shape of the battle.

Kathy aided Hanna and Lulu in killing the Tier 10 they were fighting. Afterward, they went after the Tier 9 monsters, which was easy for them, considering they had just survived the Tier 10s.

This gave their friends, who were dealing with the Tier 8s and 9s, some breathing space.

The battle went on for another hour until the last ant was brought to its knees.

It was a daunting battle, but thanks to the two, who were now comatose, they managed to pull through. However, it wasn't as simple and easy as they made it look in the last minutes of the battle.

Most of them were hurt in more than one place, with only a few, like Lucy, Anna, and Yasmin, still looking clean and okay despite the battle lasting close to four hours.

Matt and Linda did most of the killing, using elemental bending techniques to harness lightning and fire.

Aside from them, Asha also did a remarkable job, using her overpowered ants against her opponents.

The ant queen and her two subordinates, who saw this, could tell that she indeed wasn't using the two ant queens as breeding machines.

Every last ant that fought under her command was a soldier in its own right. Klaus planned on individually upgrading them.

This was to ensure that if they evolved, they would do so individually, gaining unique strengths. He didn't want to limit them by making them inherit their evolution from their queen.

Aside from them, there was also Nadia, who, after Danny killed all six Tier 9s she was battling, had to prove once again to everyone that puppeteers were indeed powerful.

She also managed to gather enough souls for her first summoning ritual.

Klaus wasted no effort in encasing them in his immortal ice while the devouring ice consumed the ants and transferred the energy back to them.

After an hour, their flesh wounds had healed, and they were now seated in ice chairs made from the same ice.

Klaus was giving them the best treatment, considering they were his team, and he wouldn't deny them that.

"So, how was the battle?" Klaus asked, hovering before them.

"It was dangerous," Lily said. "I came this close to dying if not for Mason coming to my rescue in time."

"We would have missed you if he hadn't made it in time. But since you're in one piece, we can only thank our lucky stars." Klaus smiled, making Lily shoot him a piercing gaze.

He just smiled. "But what she said was indeed true. Most of you came this close to dying, but you didn't, and it was thanks to your teamwork."

Now, before you get cocky despite defeating Overlord-level threats, know that if the true army of over sixty Tier 10s had faced you, none of you would be alive right now.

I made it easy for you today as a starter for the dangers you will be facing soon." His smile remained, making Lily move with the wind, trying to land a punch on his handsome face.

"You call that easy..." She punched, but Klaus deftly caught her hand, and before she could wiggle her way out of his grip, his other hand wrapped around her waist and pulled her closer to him.

"No need to be a crybaby, Lily. The worst is yet to come, and despite you being my woman, I won't have pity on you." He kissed her cheek, making her sisters look at her with envious gazes.

She instantly melted in his arms, placing her head on his shoulder.

"You once asked me to train you, to turn you into monsters capable of going against the odds. I am doing that now. So yes, this is cheap, for the worst is yet to come.

But just as you survived this, you will survive that, too. Of course, you will come close to death's door, and some of you will actually die but don't worry, I will bring you back."

He smiled, but his friends and women weren't smiling.

Why?

Because whenever Klaus was being serious, he would smile. And right now, despite making it sound like he wasn't serious, they knew he meant every last word.

[Brat, you have yet to enter purgatory and awaken your death energy, so stop playing with their lives,] the senior said, also sensing that the Paragon meant every word he said.

Klaus indeed wasn't joking, which begged the question— 'what awaited them in Monsterland?'

They all broke into cold chills, looking back at the brat who was still smiling at them.

"Okay..." Klaus sighed. "I take back the death part. But the next set of battles will bring you close to death's door, with some of you actually reaching the half-dead stage."

"That doesn't make it any better, Klaus," Miriam said, already plotting with her sister on how best to handle him in the bedroom.

"You all should relax. Death is not as scary as it sounds. You will understand after tasting it at least once."

After spending a few minutes scaring the shit out of his friends and women, he sent them away to rest for the next few days.

The last ant was killed, leaving only the Ant Queen, Linx, Jinx, and her seven cocoons. This made them alert, for their last line of resistance was destroyed, leaving them vulnerable.

Though Klaus had said he wouldn't come against them because they had become allies, she knew things wouldn't be calm until everything was finalized, and that involved signing a contract of mutual benefits.

Three days after the battle, Klaus took Asha to meet the queen to get things done.

Naturally, this was the stage where, if any betrayal was involved, they wouldn't sign and would instead handle their deaths by taking a few of Klaus's friends with them.

Linx wasn't in the meeting, but Klaus knew where she was hiding. He even sent a clone to give her a bottle of water while he and Asha met with the queen and Jinx.

Chapter 723 - 723: Ant Queen Remy

The forbidden zone Klaus's team had just cleared wasn't always known as the Ant Kingdom. It was a different zone many years ago.

About 30 years ago, it was known by a different name, for it contained different breeds of monsters.

However, one day, out of nowhere, an Ant Queen who had just entered the Sovereign stage appeared with her and soldiers. For two days, they hunted down and killed every last resident there, claiming the entire zone for themselves.

This Ant Queen then went ahead and, for years, continued to fortify her zone against unwanted guests.

Dozens of humans fell trying to hunt there.

However, everything changed when Klaus and his team appeared.

It was as if, the moment Klaus and his team arrived, the Queen knew it was over for her and her soldiers.

However, strangely, Klaus didn't attack her personally. Instead, he came to see her and even went out of his way to offer her an alliance.

This, of course, was an unexpected offer.

But the fact that she was a True Beast came into play here. If she were still an unreasonable beast, perhaps she wouldn't be seated face-to-face with the human she would soon be signing a contract with.

Asha and Klaus were now looking at the Ant Queen, who was also looking back at them, with Jinx by her side, ready to intervene.

"Well, I said I would bring her so you could ask her anything you want. Here she is, you can go ahead and ask her anything you want to" Klaus said.

"First, I want to know your plans for my seven soldiers currently in the cocoon," she asked.

Klaus turned to Asha with a smile.

He clearly wanted her to answer that since when Asha found out about the seven cocoons, a part of her wanted to experiment with them.

It was as if she wanted to engineer them to become the best version of themselves. Of course, she would be awakening the Insect Forge very soon.

But even outside that, she was very happy to hear there were cocoons containing such powerful yet-to-be-born soldiers.

She had already gathered the materials and would be performing the ritual to awaken the forge right after this meeting, so she wanted to see how best to use it to help her.

Naturally, Klaus's blood would play a huge role in this, but with the forge, she and the Queen could better work on these seven cocoons and bring out powerful warriors.

"Before I answer your question, I would like you to answer mine first," Asha smiled.

"Say you had a way to change some things about yourself, add new things, upgrade them, keep improving on them, and even create new ones.

Say you had a way to actively improve the seven soldiers you're creating. Say you had a way to make the perfect, most dangerous soldiers.

In essence, this thing would allow you to bring all your ideas to life. It will let you create the best version of any Ant Soldier, and even go as far as helping you create new breeds of ants.

Would you accept that or let it slide?"

"Of course, I would accept it." The Queen didn't hesitate in her answer. "Having a way to bring all my ideas into being is something I would never pass up on."

"Then, to answer your question—my plan for your seven soldiers in the making was to use this method to bring them to perfection. And yes, I have a way to bring all your ideas to life.

I have a way for you to create the perfect soldiers, to even improve upon yourself, and to keep evolving until you are satisfied.

I have a way for you to create the ultimate soldiers."

Asha's words caused Jinx and her Queen to look at Klaus with doubtful gazes.

"She is telling the truth. She has a thing for your kind, so she won't lie to you." Naturally, they started to trust Klaus more, so when he said she could be trusted, they also began to trust Asha.

"Are you being serious? For years, I have searched for what you are talking about but couldn't find it. So, are you telling the truth?" She couldn't help but ask twice.

"Of course, I am. I do have what I am talking about, and the moment you become my contracted companion, you will have access to it.

The only question left is whether this is something you truly want."

One had to say, the offer Asha placed on the table could not be ignored easily. She had brought a deal so tempting that even Jinx was considering starting her own army if this was indeed true.

Klaus, who knew Asha had only revealed the tip of the iceberg, was smiling in his head.

In truth, the Insect Forge inside her domain was much more special than she had described. It was something that he will start learning more about in the years to come.

In addition to designing the insects to be created, one could describe them in such detail that, once the modifications were complete, the envisioned creation would become a reality.

This also meant that similar to Klaus's Paragon Forge, she would have to create insect soldiers from nothing. The ones already in existence could also be enhanced and refined.

Seven pillars, each connected to seven different categories of insects, surrounded the forge. Over time, she would be able to use these to create powerful insect soldiers.

But that wasn't even the best part—now that Klaus's blood came into play. After ensuring the soldier's perfect version was captured, his blood would further enhance them to the stage even the heavens will cry blood.

This meant that what they considered a perfect soldier—one that could no longer be improved—would, with Klaus's blood, become something even more monstrous.

There was no denying it—it was one of the most badass things one could ask for. And the Queen, who had been searching for something similar for decades, now found herself at a crossroads.

"I will accept your offer," she said, and Asha smiled. This was the best decision considering the outcome of her decision today is a lifetime of happiness for what she had been looking for all these years had been found and it's free to use.

"Then let's form the contract." Klaus smiled and looked at Asha, who used her finger to slash an opening on her forehead, drawing a drop of blood.

She then formed a seal, and the blood shuddered before moving forward and entering the Queen's forehead. A few seconds later, a smile appeared on the Queen's lips.

"Your bottleneck has weakened. Do you want to break through now or wait?" Asha asked. The moment the contract was formed, she sensed it.

The Queen nodded. "I will wait until my seven soldiers are at the stage they won't need my attention anymore."

"Very well. Dear, kindly seal her cultivation."

Klaus followed her instruction and sealed her cultivation.

"In that case, Ant Queen Remy, why don't we move your seven soldiers to a more secure place... In other words, why don't I take you to your new home?"

The door to her insect domain appeared, making her smile bloom.

Chapter 724 - 724: Awakening the Ancient Insect Forge (1)

When the queen and her two subordinates were relocated to their new home, Klaus and Asha left and returned to the others.

Her domain was also safe as it can be to the new residence.

In fact, the moment they appeared there, Klaus could tell the Queen and her two subordinates were happy to have chosen to form the contract with Asha.

Their plan to kill his friends including Asha was making them feel guilty now. That was especially true for Linx.

Of course, Linx returned from her hideout with a shocked expression, since before the meeting, she had been tasked with getting close to Klaus's team and waiting for orders in case things didn't go as planned.

Her job was to kill at least one of Klaus's friends.

However, Linx had a rather nasty move in mind.

Since she knew she would die anyway, her plan was to detonate her core and wipe out as many as she could. It was a vicious and ruthless move, showing just how dangerous yet dedicated she was.

However, while she was hiding, Klaus appeared with a bottle of water, shocking her senses. This caused her to step back to see if something had happened to her queen.

But when she returned, the queen had just formed a contract with Asha, and they were moving to their new home. She hesitated, but knowing that their queen was under Asha's care, she listened and entered the domain.

Now, she is happy to be inside a place where no harm can come to them as long as they stay there. But now that everything has settled, Klaus returns with Asha to the real world, where she begins preparing for her ritual.

Meanwhile, Nari and Queenie made their presence known to the ladies, causing them to complain about how harshly Klaus had treated them.

Naturally, the two Void Stage ladies promised to get revenge for them. This filled them with joy, so they started healing all their inner wounds.

Of course, though they were complaining, they knew that what he did was indeed best for all of them. They had grown much stronger, and their fear of facing stronger foes had significantly diminished.

Right now, aside from Kathy or Miriam, none of them could kill a Tier 10. However, if they were to face one, they wouldn't cower in fear. They would stand their ground and perhaps hold it back for as long as they could.

So, they knew his training was effective and would only continue to improve their strength as the days passed.

Danny and Mark were still comatose, showing no signs of waking up anytime soon.

A few hours after Asha signed the contract with the Ant Queen, she and Klaus entered the insect domain again. This time, it was to awaken her Insect Forge.

"This is going to be a good one," Klaus said, already eager to see what would become of her Forge.

Of course, he knew his Paragon Forge was one of a kind, but he was certainly curious to see what hers would be like.

"Just don't get jealous if I become more monstrous than you," Asha giggled. Trying to tease Klaus every chance she gets is something she never passes up on.

"You can never be more monstrous than me. Do you want to know why?" Klaus smiled slyly.

Asha shrugged, but she was indeed curious.

"It's because you don't have the strength to fight your battles if your insects were to be killed. Basically, even my mom could slap you silly, and she's a chef."

Klaus's teasing smile caused Asha to puff her cheeks. She started behaving like the spoiled child she was. The sect had spoiled her over the years so she tends to act spoiled whenever she is with Klaus.

"But don't worry, I will bless you with a specialized class that will help you become a combat warrior, too." This calmed her down a bit.

However, both she and Nadia were at risk whenever they entered battle. Of course, Nadia would fix that by adding demon spirits to her puppets, making controlling them as easy as blinking.

This meant she could control more, allowing her to have many bodyguards instead of relying on her teammates for protection.

But again, combat training would go a long way. Since Klaus was proficient with every weapon, he would ensure they mastered at least one that they could depend on in the future.

Perhaps having dual classes like Nari would help them overcome their limits and make them better versions of themselves.

"Place your blood here," Klaus instructed, pointing at a stone-like tablet while placing the body of a Tier 10 Redwing Diamond Body Tyrant Ant onto the open forge.

He walked around the forge until he stood before a tablet inscribed with the writings of an ancient runic tongue.

Naturally, he could read them. They are some form of incantation or perhaps a poem.

But regardless of the nature of the writings, he knew he had to read or chant, so he began to chant:

"With the blood of the Queen, the Insect Divine, the marker of the Arachnid...

From carapace strong and venom deep,

Through webs of fate where shadows creep.

With supremacy over the insects,

The Queen that commands all.

The creator of the insect.

Crown, the Queen of all insects."

Klaus paused for a second before reading the final words.

"Let the Forge awaken."

The moment those words were spoken, the body of the Ant inside the Forge was swallowed. The seven pillars around the Forge lit up, and a profound energy burst from them.

The aura coming from them was one that Klaus knew wasn't simple.

Asha, who was standing outside the Forge, was lifted into the air and brought to the center of the forge.

Then, an ancient runic mark appeared from the first pillar and entered her forehead. The second pillar did the same, and soon, all seven released a runic mark.

When the last mark was absorbed, the Forge lit up and began to transform. The colossal shape shifted into a majestic purple building, crafted from the rarest metal.

It has multiple rooms just like Klaus's Paragon Forge, but his is much more powerful and majestic than Asha's.

Klaus was momentarily stunned, but when he looked up and saw Asha gazing down at him with a smile, he knew she had awakened something truly powerful.

"Are you going to tell me, or should I access it myself?" Klaus asked.

Asha just smirked.

"It's not on my system page, so you won't be able to read it." She wanted to tease him, but the moment she said that Klaus spoke into her mind through their connection.

"But I can read your mind, you know. So why don't we sit down, and you tell me everything?"

Asha just shrugged, but she wanted to tell him—after all, she had awakened something worth sharing with her man.

Chapter 725 - 725: Awakening the Ancient Insect Forge (2)

During the Primordial Era, when powerhouses were rising and falling, there was a queen said to hold so much power that one could not comprehend it.

She was a being of great command.

They called her the "Supreme Hive Queen," for she was the queen of the hive. Her insect army numbered in the billions, and her bees were even more numerous.

She held that much power.

Legend has it that during the fall of the Primordial Era, beings like her stood and faced the creatures of the beyond, meeting their fate with dignity.

But legends also say that she didn't die, for the hive never dies. They claim her spirit transcended and became something else.

Some claim she was captured by the creatures from beyond. But up until today, nobody truly knows what happened.

"The name of this forge is the 'Heart of the Hive Queen,'" Asha said to Klaus, making the paragon raise an eyebrow as if he was supposed to remember something, yet it seemed to escape him.

He could swear the name "Hive Queen" sounded very familiar, almost like they had known each other for years, yet he could not place his finger on it.

"Next..." Klaus chose not to dwell on it and instead wanted to hear more about it.

"Apparently, the Hive Queen was an ancient entity fascinated with insects and loved them. I think she was the first person to have harnessed the power of insects.

Many see insects as weaklings, yet she saw potential and harnessed their power. So when she died, her heart was converted into a forge.

That is all the backstory I got from the forge. The rest are bits and pieces, like a fractured memory that I must put together before it will make sense.

But for now, that is about it."

She smiled as she started the next phase of her teasing narrative. "As for what it can do, first, I can use it to create insects from scratch by designing them there."

Klaus turned and saw something akin to a crystal tablet, yet looking at it, he could tell it was much more profound than a simple tablet.

"I can put together the type of insects I want, and using the bodies of random monsters, I can create new ones. However, this requires me to know more about ancient runes, which I don't know yet.

But I'm sure you can help me, considering you can read them fluently." She leaned in and kissed his cheek, making Klaus push her head away before she could seduce him.

"Don't be jealous, Klaus. Sometimes, let your wives help you where you are lacking." She smiled teasingly.

"Fine, I will teach you, but I don't think creation is the only thing it can do," Klaus said, and Asha nodded.

"Indeed. Aside from creation, that room is a different kind of forge that requires an ant queen to start the process of creating a soldier. Then, at the cocoon stage, I can begin modifying it until it is born.

But even after birth, the next room can be used to put them back into the cocoon and make even more modifications. At this stage, I can even implement a hybrid nature for them.

Your blood can even be used at this stage.

As for the last three rooms, they are locked for now and will only open when my bloodline is awakened."

Klaus nodded thoughtfully. All the reveals are just too monstrous for a mere forge. This means Asha is about to become as monstrous as Nadia who has dozens of powerful puppets still locked up.

"These are all some powerful abilities you have, Asha. I am proud of you," Klaus said, making the insect queen smile.

"This means you will immediately start the modifications with your inside queens. Do you need my blood now?" Klaus asked.

Asha shook her head. "I currently have four queens, and they each have demands, so I scheduled a meeting with them and will spend the next few weeks with them.

We will determine the best way to modify the ants before needing your blood. However, Linx and Jinx are a different story, so I will need two drops of your blood for them."

The two are at the peak of their respective stages so using the blood on them will turn them into Void stage beings.

However, the process wouldn't be as simple as with the Puppet Ant Klaus left behind many years ago and had just woken up.

Klaus nodded and turned into his elf form. He took two drops of his blood, froze them in ice, and gave them to her.

"Just let me know if you need anything."

Asha nodded. "However, how would I open this place so you can come out after we leave the Forbidden Zone?"

Since her current anchor was in the Forbidden Zone, if she wanted to leave, she would appear inside the Forbidden Zone again.

And since she would be spending weeks with her ants, the moment Klaus and the others leave the zone, she will appear there alone.

So there should be a way for him to let her out in the new location they are going to.

In response to his question, she pressed her hand against his forehead and muttered something. "You now have full access to my domain, so I will let you know when I am ready to come out."

"Okay then." He kissed her and then left, allowing her to start her work.

The moment he left, Asha frowned as she stood there quietly for a few minutes before walking into a room. Once inside, she sat down and closed her eyes.

A few minutes into her silent retreat, she spoke.

"Speak."

It was just a casual command, but the weight behind it was undeniable. It wasn't something to be taken lightly.

In response to her command, light formed from the wall, and a few seconds later, a ghostly figure of profound beauty appeared. Despite her stunning appearance, she looked no older than ten years.

"You finally chose to awaken me, huh, Master?" the small figure spoke.

"Who are you?" Asha asked.

"I am nothing special, just the spirit of the Heart of the Hive Queen. I oversee the operations of the forge—something akin to your personal assistant," the figure said, and Asha narrowed her eyes.

"No need to look at me like that, Master. We have a lot to do, so get comfortable having me around, because with me here, you will soon realize the true power of the insects."

***

The moment Klaus walked out of the domain, he took a deep sigh and turned toward the door that closed behind him.

"An item spirit from the Primordial Era, huh? I need to ask Paragon or the others more about them. If she's here to hurt her, I'll be sure to get to her before she does."

After a moment of calm, he left to start rewarding his team for their bravery in completing the first phase of their training.

Chapter 726 - 726: The Mysterious Man

It has already been a week since the last battle in the Ant Kingdom Forbidden Zone.

Klaus and his team are still inside the forbidden zone, waiting to hear from the others who are currently undergoing their training.

They are currently clearing the Tier 7 forbidden zone he had selected for them. Each team was assigned to clear one.

Naturally, he picked those forbidden zones just like he picked the Ant Kingdom. However, after seeing how dangerous the Tier 8 zone was, he knew the two weeks he had given them wouldn't be enough.

So he sent a message to all the leaders overseeing the training of the various teams to extend the time to three weeks. That would be enough for them to finish their task.

This also meant there would be more than enough moments since there would be many battles within the three weeks.

This means the data he asked to be gathered from all 606 would be sufficient to know how to proceed with their training.

It was a blessing in disguise.

He also sent a message to Queen Lunara was doing something rather important for Klaus. The triplets are under her care in a special place that was discovered recently in the Ice Union.

They are calling it the Elemental Domain, for it has regions for all the elements. Naturally, only the iverlords could access it, but thanks to his status, he managed to send the three ladies there.

They will also be brought to the badlands in three weeks, just like everyone. They are very important to him.

Despite it being a week after the battle, Danny and Mark were still not awake. Of course, Klaus wasted no effort pouring his energy into the immortal ice every single day.

He estimated they would wake up in another week, and then they would leave to meet the others.

Meanwhile, a couple of days after Klaus and his team left the academy, Hunter and his team also departed. This time, they brought their three siblings and formed a team of eight.

Although Klaus prevented Hunter and Kate, who were the legacies of the Duncan family, and Kim, Zaid, and Richy, who were also once heirs of three of the five great clans, he said nothing about their three siblings joining his recruiting trial held using Oracle AI.

But since they chose not to participate, it meant they didn't share a destiny with him and were only destined to be enemies forever.

So they left under the excuse of going on missions.

However, they didn't go on any mission. Instead, they met up with the mysterious figure who offered them the chance to help kill Klaus and his friends.

This time, they were taken to a remote location, far from the surveillance of all satellites.

This was where they would be transformed into the best versions of themselves—at least, according to the figure's words.

This begs the question: who was this person, and what was his endgame?

He first appeared when Klaus began gaining fame. He observed him for a moment, but he couldn't act against him immediately.

So he struck through the Dark Order. That day, when the high-priority kill order was issued, the Dark Order assigned the mission to one of their most trusted members.

That was how the woman who would become the key to the Dark Order's downfall was set in motion. Aya Middlestone—Luna and Nuna's mother—was the one meant to orchestrate Klaus's destruction.

But that plan failed, and what followed was a catastrophe for the Dark Order, leading to their complete annihilation a few months ago.

However, this mysterious figure—the engineer from the alliance that Klaus had dismantled—had been pulling strings from the shadows for a long time.

Many had died because of him, and even if one were to investigate, the truth was that he had been orchestrating his plans long before the apocalypse descended.

He was also linked to many deaths that shook the Earth in the early stages of the apocalypse. And now, he had started a new project—one that would become another thorn in Klaus's side.

But this time, something else was at play, and Klaus, who could sense it, knew that stopping it was impossible for now. It would come to pass whether he liked it or not.

The heavens are helping this mysterious man, for the mysteries around him are so otherworldly that even Klaus couldn't place his finger on them.

So, even though he knew letting Hunter and his team go was a mistake, he had to allow it, while keeping a watchful eye on them.

If there was a mysterious force pulling strings on Earth, then Klaus wouldn't waste time trimming its hair. That would grow back and perhaps be much more dangerous.

He would cut off its head entirely.

So he let them go, and now the eight youngsters are staring at a dark, cloaked figure. The figure was shrouded in darkness from head to toe, clad entirely in black.

Behind him stood eight large coffins.

"I already promised to turn you into Void Stage beings, and I intend to keep that promise," he said coldly, making the eight before him shudder.

"This is the process. It will take time, but you will be strong enough to battle and kill your enemies when you emerge.

I will also make arrangements to help you handle the changes that will happen to your enemies.

This time, you will finish what your parents couldn't."

Despite the fear in their eyes, they nodded.

The figure snapped his fingers, and the eight coffins creaked open, revealing interiors filled with pools of blood. However, something else in it would have made Klaus raise an eyebrow.

Those things shouldn't be on earth, or at least, they shouldn't be in the hands of such a figure. But since it's inside the box of blood, Klaus would find out later.

The sight made their bodies tremble, but their determination outweighed their fear—they knew what had to be done.

"Submerge your entire body inside. When the time comes, you will all be brought out. By then, the weakest among you will be Void Stage."

Hunter and his team stepped into a coffin without hesitation, and the lids shut tight.

The figure waved his hand, and a towering mountain rose, concealing the eight coffins within its shadow.

He stepped back and formed a series of hand seals when he was at a safe distance. A glowing spell diagram appeared in the air before descending upon the mountain.

"Soon, this world will know the pain of the lost ones," he muttered before vanishing.

However, moments after his departure, another figure emerged from the ground, eyes locked onto the mountain.

She retrieved a small device from her space ring. It's a rectangular item coated in green ice.

She planted it in the soil, and then silently merged back into the earth, vanishing with the dirt.

Naturally, this place would be monitored, and Klaus would make his move when the time was right.

But whether he would be able to catch the big fish—that would be determined when the moment arrived.

He could have tried now, but he knew the figure would be on high alert, so he would make his move when his project was ripped.

Danny and Mark woke up a week later, and Klaus left the Ant Kingdom with his team.

Their next destination: Monsterland—a place where even his eyes would be opened to the dangers they had never known existed.

But aside from that, his destiny is also waiting for him...

Chapter 727 - 727: Pros, Cons, and Trust

A day after Danny and Mark woke up, Klaus and his team left the forbidden zone. They headed straight toward Monster Land, where they would meet up with the others.

On the way, he decided to come clean to them about the evolution he had in mind. Since he would be using his blood, he wanted them to know the pros and cons.

He might be a brat, but he wouldn't become a tyrant who hides such important information from his friends, even if the end game is for their own good.

He wanted a clean conscience in all he did. That was why, if he made up his mind to kill you, no matter how long it took, he would do it.

"Okay, listen up. I have something important to say," Klaus said, making his friends, chatting among themselves, turning and looking at him.

They were currently flying in one of the military fighter jets.

"I planned on awakening your bloodlines in Monster Land. However, the method I had in mind has changed due to recent developments.

Initially, I wanted to use a forbidden ritual that would have unlocked your sealed bloodlines ahead of their scheduled awakening.

However, things are different now. This time, the method I will use will unlock your bloodlines, tweak them, and make many improvements.

But there is a catch. In fact, there are a couple of catches." He paused and looked at their expressions.

"Let me talk about the pros first." He smiled.

"Aside from your normal class getting a big upgrade and some powerful ability entering your arsenal upon awakening your bloodline, you will also gain another class that is either similar to or completely different from the one you currently have.

Now, before you say that it will require more training to master, know that it's the complete opposite.

Instead of seeing it as extra work, see it as your biggest cheat. This is a class that depends entirely on how powerful your bloodline becomes.

It also has a timer, which means it can't be used for an extended period of time.

But like I said, it's a cheat because you don't need to master anything. The moment you take that form, your mastery will reach its peak.

That means someone like Nadia, who is a puppeteer, could wield a sword as if she had been training for years.

And that's not even the best part. As her bloodline grows, so does the strength of that form."

The faces of everyone except Nari turned solemn. It was like hearing the most unbelievable thing in the universe.

They knew how time-consuming it is to master a skill, technique, spell, or even a weapon. So hearing an entire class can be mastered and used like a profession when activated sounded strange.

"You saw Kathy's battle form. That is an example of what I'm talking about. Of course, she had been using a spear before her awakening, but she wasn't a spearman per se.

Now that she has mastered the art of using the spear on the stage, a true spearman will give her a salute. That is the type of power this method will give you.

Of course, if you're not convinced, then Nari, show them."

Nari was already on her feet, and at Klaus's command, she transformed into her spearman class, donning golden armor as a golden spear appeared in her hand.

"This form allows me to wield the spear and use it like a real spearman despite being an archer. And oh, I can use it for two hours a day, just like Kathy.

However, the best part is that even if I am exhausted in my archer form, I will feel like a new person when I switch to this form.

All wounds will be healed in this form, and I will return to my real form only after the two hours run out." She giggled as she looked at her sisters, who were giving her pointed looks.

She had hidden this from them simply because of moments like this, so they would clearly be giving her a beating when they were alone.

"All she said is true, and you all saw that. Of course, there's also a part that can be used to enhance your skills, weapons, spells, and much more.

There's still more to uncover later," Klaus added.

"This is great, then. In fact, this is awesome..." Anna said, and Klaus nodded.

"But there are some catches, like I said." They all focused their attention on him and started to listen.

"First, the moment I use this method, not only will the heavens frown upon you and make life harder for you in the future, but your tribulations will also become much more difficult from the next time you face them.

Initially, it was 10% destructive and 90% restoration will, but after that, you'll be looking at between 25% and 30% destructive will. It may sound small, but even a single percentage makes a huge difference, so there's that.

Second, your fate will be controlled by me. This means I will have supreme control over you. I will be something akin to a god.

I can command you to kill yourself, and you wouldn't be able to resist that command. I could even kill you with a mere thought. Basically, I will own your body, mind, and soul.

So while the rewards are enticing, the price is also huge.

So I ask, do you guys want to use this method or the first method? Either way, you will become powerful warriors after awakening your bloodlines." He asked, prepared to hear their rejections. However, the answer he received was rather emotional.

"Are you kidding me? This isn't even a question you should ask." Strangely, it was Amelia who spoke.

"The main reason you are doing all this is for us to become Earth's defenders, so why ask such a question if we can all become this powerful using the second method.

"Damn the price. I know you wouldn't abuse your power. You didn't send us packing after we came against you and your friends, and you didn't isolate us even after we joined your team.

So why care about the price now? You could have done a whole lot of bad things to us after how we behaved when you arrived in the academy, but you didn't.

This means you have integrity, so I won't hesitate to pay that price. If you want an answer from us, then our answer is that we trust you and wouldn't hesitate to give our lives to you."

The rest nodded without any hesitation.

Every last one of them. They all want to use the second method, which involves consuming Klaus' blood. This, strangely, made Klaus emotional, though he hid it from all of them.

The trust they have in him was just too deep.

"You guys are the best," he smiled. "I'll tone down the training for the first week as a reward for showing how much you trust me."

"Just a week?" Lily stared at him with a narrow expression.

"Fine, two weeks."

Everyone laughed, making the Paragon very happy. Naturally, the heavens frowned at this display, but they couldn't do a thing.

Chapter 728 - 728: Arrived At Monsterland

The flight from the Ant Kingdom to Monsterland is about nine hours, but could be done in under an hour if it were an active combat situation and one had to get there fast.

The combat jets are super fast and can traverse great distances quickly.

But since this is just a normal flight, they choose to relax and fly at their own pace.

However, nine hours later, they arrived at the badland known as Monsterland and were welcomed by some familiar faces.

"Good to see you again, War God Henry," Klaus said to the war god he had met when he went to Blite Mountain.

He nods at his remark.

With him were four warriors, Klaus immediately recognized as true warriors.

The aura around them wasn't that faint one on the greenhouse flowers, calling themselves geniuses of the Great Families.

They were Peak Transcendents but not war gods. Their attire suggests they are soldiers belonging to the Union Military.

"This is General Dane," War God Henry said, gesturing at a dark-haired man about 45 years old with some battle scars on his arm.

The look in his eyes showed he was someone with great strength, and perhaps the muscles on him indicated he was a brute, just like his pal Danny.

"He is the highest authority here." Klaus saluted, and the general and the three with him returned the salute. It was a formal gesture but one filled with respect.

"This is General Eric; he is the second-in-command and a swordsman." A young man with a bald head and an athletic physique was introduced.

He gave a slight nod, making his bald head shine even brighter. Klaus couldn't help but smile.

"This is General Manas. He is the top healer in this unit and the one in charge of keeping our soldiers alive here."

A blonde man with an air of calm and healing nodded slightly. Klaus returned his nod.

"Then this is General Gordon; he is in charge of information gathering." Another blonde-haired man was introduced, and he nodded slightly as well.

Per Klaus's quick observation, his build and looks show he is an assassin and a good one. This qualifies him to be the one in charge of gathering information.

In other words, he is a spy.

All four were powerful warriors, and Klaus, who knew what the Badlands were for, could only admire them.

While the Forbidden Zones were filled with thousands of monsters, the Badlands were filled with tens of thousands of terrifying monsters.

Rumor has it that all seven Badlands have hidden monsters that haven't been discovered yet.

Klaus knew about the dynamics of the monsters, but he never believed that their strength was merely at the Ascendent level.

He had the privilege of speaking with the Moonborns' surveillance team, and according to them, aside from the terrifying Void Stage entities they had discovered, there were hidden ones even their systems couldn't detect.

Of course, their estimation fell within the Void Stage, but they believed these entities were at the peak and had perhaps hidden themselves to break through first.

That was why Klaus came here.

The plan was to take back one of the lands that once belonged to humans from the beasts and monsters, and in doing so, check to see if there are indeed dangers hidden out of sight.

If this place were reclaimed, humanity would have more land for important developments that would benefit the masses.

"Nice meeting you all," Klaus said. "I am also here with my team to train and perhaps see if we can finally reclaim this Badland and turn it into a place where humans can live."

The four generals and War God Henry nodded.

Klaus had already informed the leaders of this zone that he and his team would need access to all information here and perhaps even classified information, since most data collected wasn't readily available for anyone to review.

"Why don't you and your team get settled in first? Then, when the rest arrive, we can sit down and do a deep dive into the situation we're barely holding together here,"

General Dane said with a small smile.

The fragile nature of the Badlands wasn't a secret. But hearing him say it so casually sounded rather funny. Klaus couldn't help but laugh.

"Then let me and my team settle down first. If things go as planned, you all will be going home in a few months." They laughed and started leading him toward a flatland spanning several meters.

War god Henry has already found a place for his team to settle down. He was the first to arrive.

General Dane asked, "Are you sure you don't want to use the military tents we have?" Klaus had requested a flat area for himself and his team, as this would be their home for the entire training duration.

Naturally, they were puzzled, so he had to ask.

Klaus smiled upon hearing his words. "This place is enough for us. It's perfect."

After moving a few meters into the open space, he halted them.

Klaus then walked to the center of the field, placed his hand on the ground, and closed his eyes.

A few seconds later, the ground began shaking as if something was emerging. The War God, generals, and Klaus's team stood still, watching him, wondering what he was planning.

Then their answer came. Thick ice walls started bursting from the ground, taking shape as they rose.

"Don't tell me he's about to create tents using ice elements," General Manas asked, though he could already tell the answer.

Klaus was indeed using his ice to create tents for every last warrior he would train.

"This is unbelievable," General Eric said, gazing at the majestic ice tents, perfectly aligned over the once-flat surface.

"The ice is full of life. It's brimming with healing energy—very powerful healing energy," General Manas, the healer of the Badlands, said, causing the other generals to shake their heads in shock.

"He's creating healing chambers for them. With this, they won't have to waste their energy healing themselves after training." A voice answered their questions.

Up in the air, Nari and Queenie appeared, prompting the four generals and War God Henry to salute them.

Initially, they had planned to remain hidden, but seeing something remarkable unfold, they decided to join their sisters. However, for now, they chose to maintain their dignified Overlord presence.

When alone with Klaus, they will become themselves.

"You should examine them. I'm sure you'll learn something valuable from them," Nari said to General Manas.

"That would be inappropriate."

Of course, inspecting someone's work without permission wasn't advisable in the military.

Though he might be a superior officer, he couldn't simply pry into the secrets of any soldier without formal authorization.

So he hesitated.

"I don't mind. If you think you can learn something from it, then feel free to examine it," Klaus said as he flew toward them.

"You can even step inside one and occupy it if you want. It'll help with your cultivation too." He smiled.

"You five should move in and take this chance to witness the artistry of the most handsome warrior you will ever meet."

They all burst into laughter as Klaus's team started settling in.

Chapter 729 - 729: Arrival of the Rest of the Team

A few hours after Klaus and his team and War God Henry's team settled in, the nine teams that went to the Tier 7 forbidden zones started arriving.

The first to arrive was the team led by his Uncle James, Klaus's brute uncle, whose preferred weapon of choice is the boomerang.

He was in charge of 61 warriors, and thankfully, they all arrived intact, though everyone could see their exhaustion.

Klaus provided them with a place to rest and rejuvenate inside the healing chambers. Naturally, only ten chose to sit and cultivate.

The rest passed out the moment they lay on their ice beds, which felt rather comfortable despite being blocks of ice.

Klaus saw this and could only smile. Some of them would understand the dangers they would be facing in the coming days when the time came.

For now, they can relax and feel comfortable.

After they settled in, he took his uncle to a fortress he had built for his five uncles.

He had a special place prepared for all the leaders handling the ten teams to undergo their first three weeks of training.

But for his uncles, he built a single fortress for them since they prefer being together always.

After Uncle Jojo arrived, Uncle Ziggy, the gunslinger, also appeared with his team. Just like the others, they were exhausted, so most passed out and would only wake up after hours of sleep.

Uncle Xian followed, then Old Lu. A few minutes after he arrived with his team, Instructor Victor, the instructor in charge of the outer area of the academy, also appeared.

He was a powerful warrior, so Klaus trusted him with the lives of 60 warriors, and he brought them back in one piece—though utterly exhausted.

He had worked them to the bone, following Klaus' instructions to ensure they each reached their limits during battle.

Uncle Mark also arrived a few hours later. Within nine hours of Klaus's arrival, all teams had gathered in the Monsterland Badlands.

Klaus let them all settle in first. Of course, he was still waiting for two more teams.

Lycos and his team, whom Klaus had befriended the hard way when he went to the moon with Ohema, had just undergone their tribulations and finally become Transcendents.

This was the main reason they hadn't joined him and his friends for their first training in the Ant Kingdom.

Klaus, of course, would use the first week to hammer some battles into their bones. He knew they were already battle-hardened warriors since they had come from the most dangerous place a human could go—

The moon.

But still, they would have to undergo his training if they want to be on the team.

The second set of people he was waiting for were the triplets. He had already received word from Queen Lunara that they would arrive within the hour.

They had achieved their objectives, so he would sharpen their skills and then help them awaken their bloodlines.

He had already given them techniques to master, and the place they had gone for the past three weeks was perfect for that. Now, he would wait for them to return and see if they were slackers or warriors.

After welcoming everyone, he retired to his room.

Meanwhile, General Dane was meeting with his three subordinates in a secure room to discuss something important.

"First off, I want to say that this place now has some of the most powerful warriors in the world. However, none of them are important to this discussion," General Dane began.

"Klaus Hanson is the main person for this discussion. I know you all saw his display, and while it looked flashy, it was also terrifying.

I don't know about you three, but I was impressed. Because of that, I've decided to give him complete command over this place." He declared with no doubt in his words.

The three generals turned to look at each other before letting out a deep sigh.

"This saves us a huge headache," General Eric said with a faint smile. "We were actually planning on telling you that, General.

We all know we wouldn't be able to defeat him despite our years of training, and for some reason, even just speaking with him made me feel like a child in front of him.

That boy is both scary and wise. So I believe handing him supreme command of this base is a wise move. This will even allow us to sneak into his training and perhaps gain something from it."

If only they knew he indeed has tens of thousands of years of experience as a cultivator. But who is asking?

Klaus has memories of his past life as Fruity, and in that life, he lived for thousands of years, so in a way, he is indeed that old—very old, in fact.

This means giving him the helm to take charge of the base isn't a bad move. However, he couldn't just make that decision without consulting his team.

Luckily, they also share the same thoughts. But aside from them, someone else listening in on their secret meeting also agrees with their decision.

They thought they were in a secure room.

"Then it is decided, we will let Klaus Hanson take charge of the base for the duration of his stay here," General Dane said.

"You should do that," a voice spoke, causing the four inside the secure room to freeze. Nari looked at them with a sarcastic smile, appearing out of thin air.

Perhaps gaining the ability to feel emotions was a bad move. The phoenix was now playing with people's emotions like a chess game.

"Overlord Nari..." General Dane said, his voice barely above a whisper.

Nari laughed and settled down beside them, looking at them closely before sighing.

"You four should really sneak into his training. But before that, know that you will become like normal soldiers once you hand over your command to him.

However, the moment you become part of his training, you will be worked to the bone. And let me tell you—Klaus won't hold back, regardless of your status in the military."

The four nodded. They understood the implications, but they wouldn't back down no matter where it took them.

They knew that with Klaus at the head of the command, things would flow smoothly.

"Very well. I will ensure you all get the best out of this."

After saying that, Nari left, leaving the four generals to breathe a sigh of relief. Her presence was like death waving at them.

Nari will have to do more if she wants to paint a new image of herself. Her past self, as the destroyer, has made her a danger in the eyes of everyone.

They fear her like death itself.

Nari reappeared far from the secret room and took a deep breath.

"This is all I can do to help you now, Eric. Lady Margaret would be happy knowing you're still well and kicking," Nari smiled.

Though she had always known Eric—having grown up in the same orphanage long before the apocalypse—she hadn't been in a position to do much for him.

But now, she understood the meaning of familial love and care, so she would help all those who had been her friends in her robotic life.

Now that she has unlocked her emotions, she would do her best to keep them close.

Nari 2.0 is still a calamity, but a reasonable one...Lol.

Chapter 730 - 730: Two Deadly Sisters (1) [18+]

After Klaus ensured everyone had settled down, he returned to his ice fortress to rest for the night.

The next day, they will meet and get a good view of the dangers they will face in this expedition.

A few minutes after he returned to his room, Lucy and Anna appeared inside using the Paragon mark's teleportation ability.

They will be spending the night with their man.

Before coming, they met with the rest of their sisters and concluded that they would spend every night with Klaus in pairs.

Today, Anna and her big sister were the ones to go.

Tomorrow, a different set will come.

Oheme, who is even farther from them, was factored into this. She can come and go as she pleases, so there is no need to be with all the ladies before she gets to spend time with Klaus.

"You ladies are looking rather delicious this evening." Both sisters are clad in revealing nightwear. Klaus could see their shaved nether regions and round boobies.

This sight started causing things to rise.

"If we look delicious, why don't you devour us?" Anna said.

Klaus smiled and waved his hand, removing the clothing from their bodies.

He moved closer and took Anna's nipples into his mouth and started sucking on it. Meanwhile, Lucy gently removed Klaus's trousers and started stroking his dick.

Slowly, they moved closer to the bed and lay on it.

The moment they fell on it, Klaus pulled Anna up, making way for Lucy to get access to his dick. That was the perfect setting, and the two sisters couldn't argue about that.

Anna was moaning as Klaus played with her nipples while Lucy was having a good time with the dick sucking hard on it.

Slowly, the situation inside the fortress started to heat up. Klaus looked like he was having fun, and he was indeed getting the best treatment.

But the feeling coming from his Paragon Road and diamond jewels was driving him crazy.

So he decided to drive Anna crazy too. He pulled her further up until her nether region was right in front of him.

He wasted no time as he quickly sank his tongue in there and started licking her nether cave.

"Mmmmhhh!"

"Aaahh"

"MmmH"

Her moans started filling the fortress. Klaus loves that sound, so he kept going until she couldn't hold on much longer.

After a couple of minutes, her dam burst open, spraying her love juice all over Klaus's face, almost drowning him. Klaus didn't complain because she wanted that.

The juice poured out, and when the last one came, he dug in again

"Aaaahhhh", Anna moaned and kept moaning, making Klaus smile while he ate her out.

The feeling was indeed euphoric as it took her just a few minutes again to bring her to the peak of pleasure.

She came again, this time also with a huge release.

Klaus always knew how to handle all his ladies in order to bring them to the peak of pleasure easily. So Anna, who had just climaxed twice, went through the best feeling she had been craving for the past weeks.

Now, she had climaxed again, and Klaus was about to go again, but Anna stopped him and turned toward her sister.

Lucy was busy sucking Klaus's dick, making her sister smile at her.

"Big sister, it's your turn," Anna said, causing Lucy to pause and pull her head back.

"You..."She had been busily working for the start juice, but it seemed she had to abandon it and go have her nether cave licked and be brought to the peak.

"Don't worry; we will share," Anna smiled, and her sister returned her smile. She gave Klaus's dick a gentle squeeze before moving toward his face.

Meanwhile, Anna giggled and started sucking him. Like they say, good things must be kept in the family. Anna and her sister indeed won a jackpot, landing a paragon.

Klaus watched this simple exchange and couldn't help but smile. He had indeed come a long way. He now had some of the best and most amazing women on earth in his bed anytime he wanted.

That feeling is the best. If possible, he will ensure that nothing brings darkness into the light he had found.

This is also the main reason he was doing his best to raise capable warriors, as he alone could not handle everything.

Klaus was licking Lucy's pussy while Anna was sucking him.

A few minutes later, Lucy climaxed. Klaus was also nearing his climax, so he quickly went deep into her and started exploring the most beautiful place one could go.

After Lucy came the second time, he pulled her away to get her share of the star juice.

Though he knew there would be many chances to get many doses of his star juice, this moment was important to them.

They are sisters sharing the same man, so if sharing is something they are doing, then his cum must be shared too.

Lucy went for his balls while Anna continued with his dick. A few minutes later, he climaxed, and Anna took the first shot.

Lucy came for the second, and after an entire minute of swapping, they emptied the last drop of star juice from him.

"You two look like a cat and a mouse fighting over a fish", Klaus said, causing the two sisters to blush. They indeed went hard on that star juice.

"I guess you fell in love with a cat and a mouse then", Lucy commented. She looked at her sister, and Anna smiled

"You go first, big sister" Lucy nodded and started stroking Klaus's dick. Since the first half of their night has ended, they can only move to the second phase.

She wasn't really in a hurry to do anything, for she knew they had the entire night.

So while she was stroking his dick, Anna moved toward Klaus's face for another round of licking.

"Just do it slowly now; I don't want to come many times and run out of energy before it reaches my turn, " she said, and Klaus smiled.

"Don't worry, I will savour it."

Thus, he lifted her onto his body and spread her legs, making way for his tongue.

He went back in and started eating her out.

A few seconds later, Lucy climbed onto his dick and started riding him. Naturally, this was the best part Klaus was waiting for.

The moment she started riding him, the two sisters started moaning, causing their moans to mix into a melodious symphony that could intoxicate anyone.

Having two beauties moan to your attention was indeed just what the paragon needed at the moment. So they were moaning, and she was enjoying it.
