161 CHAPTER 161

"You're still alive" Lilith huffed and chased after it. 1

"Hahhaha, Explode your essence sister, let's drag them to the grave with us." Ursa said with a crazed expression.

Aella's eyes widened immediately the essence shot past them, but she was firmly locked down by Ursa, they circled each other, each with their own fair share of injury.

The witch was annoyingly powerful, even she had to acknowledge that fact.

Having made up her mind on what to do Lilith chased the essence which was now glowing, her face expressionless.

Vega really planned to explode.

"You can't be thinking of absorbing her essence? She's too powerful; it could end badly," Mercelyne warned.

"That's right, you need to remember that you're still mortal no matter how powerful, your body can't handle the clash between two powerful forces, you could die" Lena panicked.

"Or I would win the clash and get stronger." She said adamantly.

"Lilith, you could die, you'll lose everything, start afresh, you'll fail this incarnation. It's not worth the risk" Mercelyne analyzed as the logical one she was.

"Better than letting it kill everyone here." She said and without much directly grabbed the essence, forcefully sucking into her body.

"What is she doing?" Aella noticed.

"Courting death" Ursa replied

And as if coming to a tactical understanding they both shot towards Lilith but it was already too late.

The essence has been forcefully consumed by her, her eyes rolled backwards, she doubled over, body convulsing.

Just as Mercelyne predicted, Vega wasn't going down without a fight; she was wrecking havoc inside her.

She spurted out a mouthful of blood, the staff fell from her hand, her knees hit the gravel totally numb, unable to move.

Noticing Aella's distraction and eagerness to get to Lilith's rescue, Ursa took the opportunity to send a killing blow.

A body made of fur slammed into Aella, pushing her away from the line of Ursa's hit. That brought her back, she looked at the black massive wolf that towered above her like a protector.

"Lilith" She whispered, tears pooling at her eyes, she didn't know exactly what was going on but she couldn't feel her.

They both looked towards where Lilith had been, she was gone, no one was there, not even a body. Only the marks of what had transpired remained as evidence.

"Eyes on me" Ursa whistled.

They faced her, "How are you holding up?" Aella asked, worried, Eros's dark fur was mangled with red and different cuts on it, his breathing ragged too.

"Not bad." He shrugged it off, "you got her real good" his words dripped with pride, "let's finish this together."

"Anything you say love."

They stood as one, Alpha, dragon rider and wolf, an impossible combination against one ancient witch.

The final showdown.

Without further warning they attacked, together. Moving as one, both working in sync.

Already weak, Ursa surprisingly held out against them until her knee hit the grass, a fire from Aella sent her stumbling and Eros's strong jaws locked into her. His venom successfully spread across her body.

She could barely move now, her spells got sluggish, her body slowed down. Realizing this was a lost cause set herself up to escape, she would live to fight another day.

"I'll kill you myself" She spat at them, hatefully, her body turned into a blur and quickly shot into the air, running with all its strength.

This was a special escape spell she had crafted, no physical body could match it.

Still cursing the couple and gloating at her escape she didn't realise when she slammed straight into something, no not something, a barrier specifically. The force sent her flying back, throwing right at the feet of Aella.

"Good thing I had Cels lock us in, you really didn't think you were going to escape right?" Aella tutted.

Finally, it was time to end this.

Aella walked towards her slowly, she crawled backwards, her eyes finally showing fear, she couldn't die, not now, not when she was so close. She absolutely couldn't but reality was saying otherwise.

Settling for the most effective way of ending a witch, Aella set her on fire, and this was no ordinary fire.

A flame both sisters had specially created, to ensure she never had the chance to return or escape it, one that would give her slow painful death.

Blue flames rose in the air, it burned fast, following Ursa around as she tried to put it off, soon she was sprawled on the floor, her body slowly turning to ash.

With her powers gone the rest of her fleet fell and the survivors had a much easier time getting rid of them.

Ursa cackled loudly, her cackle sending goosebumps through anyone that heard, "You think it ends with my death don't you? He's coming, this set's him free. He'll destroy you, all of you."

Her laughter decreased with her breath, there was nothing to see anymore. Aella turned her back to her, there was nothing to see anymore. It was over.

She had barely taken three steps when uneasily shot through her, her body screamed danger, she quickly dodged. But before she could, a large figure loomed over her.

Eden, the last bout of Ursa's power had hit him, her body turned into ash, regret filling her eyes that she didn't get her actual target.

Paralyzed, Aella watched Eden's massive body shrink and return to his human form, his face white as snow, his lips curled into a tight smile.

His heart took a direct hit.

"I love you doll." he whispered with a struggle, his body drenched with blood.

"No. No. No. No. Eros, love, hold on. I'll heal you" she said frantically, channeling the last bits of her energy to him.

Not stopping despite noticing the shadows behind her, all that mattered was saving Eros, why wouldn't her powers work.

She kept getting weaker, but Eros's breathing only got shallower, his body getting colder, her powers were useless for him.

She didn't care, suddenly she felt a powerful arm wrap around her waist and pulled her forcefully away from him.

"No. Let me, I can heal him. Let me heal him." She screamed, "please" and she fought against the body.

Pack members quickly carried Eros, while the hand took her weak body,

"Please" she sobbed against it.

A hand struck on the pressure point of her neck, she collapsed, her body relaxed, tears still streaming down. "Sleep sister."