Chapter 196: Unless It's You, I Will Never Accept Any Invitation for the Rest of My Life

"Haha! Such big talk!" The man sneered, "I feel like I can see cows flying in the sky. Aren't you going to invite her? She's right here at this jewelry exhibition!"

"But, I must remind you, even the president of the Jade Association, Yi Bo, invited her to make an appearance at the exhibition, and she didn't agree! If you're so capable, go ahead and invite her!"

The man noticed that Zhou Hanyun completely ignored him, which naturally made him a bit unhappy, so he vented all his anger on Yang Yan.

He was curious to see how this boastful guy would handle it when the time came.

"Oh really! If you hadn't mentioned it, I wouldn't have known she came to Huaxia. I must extend the host's privilege to her, or next time we meet, it would be a troublesome matter if she clings to me."

Yang Yan stroked his chin and said thoughtfully.

"Hmph! I want to see how you'll invite her. Are you planning to open a jewelry store? If you can invite her as a guest for your opening ceremony, I'll buy the most expensive set of jewelry in your store."

The man raised an eyebrow and said arrogantly.

"Are you sure?"

Yang Yan asked with a cold smile.

"Absolutely sure!" The man lifted his head, almost looking down his nose at Yang Yan, "But if you don't have the ability to invite her, how about this beautiful lady accompanying me for dinner?"

The man revealed his true intention, his gaze already fixed on Zhou Hanyun.

Yang Yan now looked at the man like he was an idiot.

"What kind of look is that? Are you afraid?"

The man was completely infuriated by Yang Yan's look and asked fiercely.

"It's nothing, just a look at an idiot."

Yang Yan's face carried a harmless smile.

"Hmph! Do you dare to take this bet or not? If not, get lost, just looking at you annoys me."

The man said furiously.

"Do you know how much our most expensive jewelry set costs? Are you sure you're not being impulsive saying that?"

At this point, Zhou Hanyun couldn't help but speak up.

"Don't worry, beautiful. No more than a few million at most, and I can afford that. So, are you willing to accept the bet?"

The man, when facing Zhou Hanyun, put on a chameleon-like smile and asked expectantly.

"And what if it's more than a few million? Are you sure you can afford it?"

Zhou Hanyun didn't answer the man's question but continued to ask calmly.

"Well, let me put it this way: as long as it's worth the price, no matter how much, I'll buy it. You wouldn't just mark something up to over a billion, would you?"

"Besides, I'm Ma Laowu, a billionaire. Do you think I'll default on this money? If you're willing to accept the bet, we can sign a contract right away. Of course, after our dinner, there will be some enjoyable activities."

The man who called himself Ma Laowu greedily looked at Zhou Hanyun and even subconsciously licked his lips as he said the last sentence.

Zhou Hanyun glanced at Yang Yan, who was still smiling slightly, as if she understood something, and immediately turned to Ma Laowu and said:

"No problem! I'll take the bet."

Hearing that Zhou Hanyun really accepted, Ma Laowu had no more scruples and his eyes shone as he looked at her:

"Great, since you've accepted, shall we sign a contract so there's no dispute later?"

"Of course."

Zhou Hanyun said lightly.

She had great confidence in Yang Yan.

Since he said he could invite Christina, there should be no problem.

The items in the exhibition area are also for sale, but their prices are high, and few can afford them.

However, exceptions always exist, and one must be prepared for someone to make a purchase.

For such expensive items, a contract must be signed on-site if someone buys; a simple receipt won't suffice.

In fact, they even have a lawyer and notary on hand to ensure the legitimate rights of both buyers and sellers.

Once the conditions were agreed upon, Zhou Hanyun and Ma Laowu both hurried over to the lawyers' office area.

Ma Laowu went up and briefly explained the situation, then handed some money to a lawyer, who then smiled and drafted the contract for him.

With the freshly printed contract in hand, Ma Laowu quickly came to Zhou Hanyun, smiling and saying:

"See if there are any issues. If not, sign it, and we can take it to the notary for authentication, and we're done."

Zhou Hanyun picked up the contract and reviewed it. It wasn't complicated, but it was indeed detailed, in line with their agreement.

If there was anything particularly noteworthy, it was the part about what to do after her and Ma Laowu's dinner.

The gist was that if Zhou Hanyun could get Christina to attend their opening ceremony, Ma Laowu would buy the most expensive jewelry there.

If Christina didn't come, then Zhou Hanyun would need to accompany Ma Laowu for dinner and do something to make him happy afterward.

There was even a parenthesis stating that what made Ma Laowu happy was up to him to decide.

This guy was really driven by his desires!

Yang Yan looked at Ma Laowu coldly but a subtle smile curled at the corner of his mouth.

"Any issues? If not, sign it so we can have it notarized?"

Unaware he'd fallen into a trap, Ma Laowu said triumphantly.

While Zhou Hanyun was reviewing the contract, Ma Laowu had already eagerly signed his part and affixed his fingerprint.

"Okay."

Confident of victory, Zhou Hanyun swiftly signed her name and printed her fingerprint.

Once she finished, Ma Laowu couldn't wait to take the contract to the notary for certification and backup.

After completing all the procedures, Ma Laowu laughed heartily at Yang Yan, who had remained a cold onlooker:

"Young man, boasting has its price. I'll tell you, when the Queen of the Yin Kingdom invited Christina to a banquet, she said that unless invited by that person, she wouldn't attend any events or parties in her lifetime."

"I don't know who she's referring to, but it's certainly not you. Now you know what gives me confidence, don't you? Beautiful, I look forward to sharing that dinner with you."

Hearing Ma Laowu's words, Yang Yan became even more certain that the person must be Christina.

Yang Yan also couldn't help but recall all those moments from the past.

Christina was an undeniable madwoman, but also a genius.

Her learning ability was astonishing, even shocking Yang Yan.

He had met countless geniuses but had never encountered anyone as quirky as Christina.

During the time he taught her, both found it very enjoyable.

But later, when Yang Yan had to leave due to other matters, even though Christina pleaded with him to stay, he left without looking back.

However, before leaving, Yang Yan did explain everything to her.

She also understood Yang Yan's situation and realized he had no choice, so she left him with these words:

I will wait for you! Unless it's you, I will no longer accept any invitations in this lifetime.
