

Chapter 100

Today, Alex nearly dominated the trending topics.

Everyone had been eagerly following the drama and, upon seeing the new topic, clicked out of curiosity.

They were stunned.

This sibling relationship was beyond what they had ever imagined.

Soon, curious, gossip-loving onlookers flocked to the live stream.

Charles, seeing the skyrocketing viewer count, checked the show's ratings.

It was firmly at the top of all streaming apps, far ahead of the second place.

The trending topics were mostly about Alex, Olivia, and Lindsay's entanglements, but they all linked back to the variety show.

His face broke into a wide grin, looking like a blooming daisy.

He couldn't help but silently thank Lindsay for her foresight.

He hadn't anticipated that the sibling couple would create such a sensational buzz.

He also couldn't help but disdain their shamelessness.

What kind of siblings would hug and kiss in the courtyard at night?

Thankfully, they weren't biological siblings.

Otherwise, this variety show might have been shut down.

At the Harper family residence.

After dinner, the family gathered in the living room to chat.

Oliver suddenly received a phone call, his expression changing.

Then he received a video from his assistant.

He turned on the TV and cast the video to the screen.

They watched Alex and Olivia hugging.

The video wasn't long. After it finished, Oliver opened the variety show's live stream and cast it to the screen again.

Olivia was talking about her experience on the show.

But the chat was filled with discussions about the sibling's earlier intimate moment.

Their father, Richard, was present as well.

After watching the video and seeing the comments on the live stream, his face darkened.

He couldn't help but slam his hand on the table. "This is outrageous. Alex and Olivia are behaving inappropriately."

How could siblings engage in such intimate actions?

The worst part was that it had been live-streamed, and now the video was circulating online.

If people in high society saw this, the Harper family would become a laughingstock.

He was also upset with Olivia, thinking she had led Alex into such intimate behavior.

Olivia only hugged, held hands, and kissed her brothers on the forehead and cheek when Richard and Grace weren't around.

So not only was Richard angry, but Grace was also taken aback.

In her understanding, siblings shouldn't be this close.

The most intimate moments she had with her brothers back home were simply leaning on each other while talking.

During family events, she would link arms with her brothers as they entered.

Her relationship with them was considered quite good by high society standards.

But since starting middle school, she hadn't hugged them, let alone kissed their foreheads or cheeks.

"What on earth are they doing?" Grace couldn't help but think the worst.

Could Alex and their adopted daughter Olivia be secretly dating?

She had raised Olivia as her own daughter and introduced her as such to the public.

How could this be happening?

Edmund and the other brothers weren't as shocked.

After all, they were often this close with Olivia.

Oliver frowned. "Alex was too careless. With Lindsay's sudden popularity among the mystic fans, people online are speculating about who the real siblings are. And now this incident will only add to the confusion."

Among Alex and Olivia, he chose to criticize Alex first.

Edmund also furrowed his brows. "You should never have let Alex participate in this variety show. It's causing nothing but trouble, and this will damage Via's reputation."

Whether she was biological or adopted, the intimate actions in that video being broadcast live would invite criticism.

Olivia was a girl; how could she bear such slander?

So, it was all Alex's fault.
