

Chapter 115

In another car.

Justin stared intently at Lindsay's latest Instagram post.

His face showed disbelief.

Not only did Lindsay announce their breakup on Instagram, but she also recorded their phone call from that day.

And now, she released it all without hesitation.

Had she been preparing for this all along?

This realization brought a sharp pain to his heart.

How could this happen?

They had been doing so well before, so how did it come to this?

At that moment, his phone suddenly rang.

Seeing that it was Linda, he answered, "What's up?"

Linda's voice was unusually sharp and urgent, "Did you see Lindsay's Instagram post? Your breakup is trending, you're getting a lot of hate right now."

Justin was silent for a moment before saying, "I saw it."

Linda was furious. "Is Lindsay out of her mind? She didn't even discuss it with you before stabbing you in the back like this. This sudden move caught us completely off guard."

It was really a slap in the face, with Justin posting that they were still together, only for Lindsay to follow up with a post about their breakup, along with recorded evidence to back it up.

They couldn't even rebut, claiming Lindsay had broken up earlier was a lie, and that she was trying to grab attention wouldn't work now.

Justin raised his hand to rub his forehead, "I didn't expect her to be so ruthless."

She deliberately timed it perfectly to trample on his reputation. She must have planned it all.

Linda, exasperated, asked, "Why didn't you tell me about your breakup with Lindsay earlier?"

If Justin had told her before appearing on the show, she could have prepared.

Justin held the phone to his ear.

He slumped back in his chair, a sense of despair settling over him. "I never agreed to break up with Lindsay before. I thought she was just angry with me, that we would patch things up."

He had never considered breaking up with Lindsay, so he hadn't confided in anyone.

Linda took a deep breath. "We need to react immediately now, or you'll be labeled as a two-timing jerk."

She had objected to Justin's collaboration with Olivia before.

Sure enough, it had gone wrong.

Now, not only did she find Lindsay increasingly irritating, but she also began to harbor a disdain for Olivia. What was more surprising was that this antipathy towards Olivia exceeded her feelings towards Lindsay.

After all, she had been harboring a secret she dared not reveal—she liked Justin.

Justin asked, "What should we do?"

Linda countered, "First, tell me, is Olivia your true love? Is she the one you really care about?"

Suppressing her bitterness, she added, "I need to coordinate with the PR team to devise a strategy."

Justin immediately denied, "There's no true love. Lindsay was just venting out her frustration online. She misunderstood me."

From the beginning, the only person he had ever loved was Lindsay.

He had his reasons for consistently protecting and being kind to Olivia, and they weren't rooted in romantic feelings.

He hadn't expected Lindsay to misunderstand his relationship with Olivia so deeply.

So, although his heart ached now, he believed that as long as he could explain things clearly to Lindsay, they could reconcile.

Linda was skeptical. "If that's the case, then post another tweet denying the affair with Olivia and your affection for her. Just say you and Olivia's second brother are childhood friends, so you were helping to take care of Olivia at his request. We need to clear up the misunderstanding about you dating two women."

Otherwise, it would harm Justin's reputation. Some fans have already left because of this.

Justin thought for a moment. "Okay, I'll post it."