

Chapter 128

Charles, already aware of the situation from the staff who had been with the three at the restaurant, couldn't help but comment sarcastically, "Serves them right. What were they thinking?"

Meanwhile, an internet celebrity known for posting comedic videos tweeted that they had coincidentally run into the show's crew and witnessed Justin and Olivia seemingly arguing.

The tweet included photos showing Olivia with swollen, tear-streaked eyes and Justin storming off alone.

The public saw the pictures and immediately began speculating that the two were fighting because their affair had been exposed.

To them, it looked just like a couple's quarrel.

As more people joined in on the criticism, the situation, already unfavorable for Justin and Olivia, worsened.

Linda, witnessing this, was nearly consumed with rage. They hadn't even figured out how to manage the previous crisis, and now this! Why couldn't Olivia just stay out of trouble?

On the other side, Lindsay and her team were keeping up with the latest developments. Elric commented, "No matter how they spin it now, they can't clear their names."

Lindsay smiled. "Exactly. Their reputations are beyond repair."

This was only the beginning.

As they discussed, Linda and Oliver's teams spent hours trying to devise a strategy to salvage the situation but came up empty-handed.

Linda contacted Justin again. "Are you aware of the latest mess? What are we going to do?"

Justin replied, "I didn't give the couple's pendant to Olivia."

Linda pressed, "Then why does she have one too?"

She emphasized, "This is a limited edition, not sold separately. There are only two in the world."

Justin explained, "Someone else gave it to her."

Linda asked, "And yours? Was it from the same person?"

Justin replied, "Yes."

Linda continued, "Who is this person?"

Justin hesitated before saying, "An elder."

Linda thought for a moment. "Can we get this elder to come forward and clarify the situation?"

Justin was silent for a while. "That's not possible."

Linda was confused. "Why not? If this elder can clear things up, it could help salvage your reputation."

Justin took a deep breath. "Her identity makes it unsuitable. Besides, the public won't believe it. If it were just the photos, we might have had a chance. But with the couple's pendants, even you don't believe it, right?"

Linda asked, "So, what do we do? If this continues to spread, it will severely damage your reputation."

Justin looked exhausted. "I'll post something on Instagram. Whether people believe it or not, it's out of my hands."

With irrefutable "evidence," there was no way to clear their names completely.

"I'll state that Olivia and I have never been more than friends. If anyone can find concrete evidence of an improper relationship between us, go ahead. I'm not afraid," Justin declared.

Linda was at a loss for words. Was Justin planning to give up on this?

She suggested, "Why don't you try asking that elder again?"

Justin immediately shut that down. "Don't even think about it. It's not happening. Let's leave it at that."

With that, he ended the call and posted a message on Instagram, "Once again, I clarify that Lindsay is my only girlfriend. There is no improper relationship between Olivia and me. The pendant she has was not from me."

He leaned back in his seat and closed his eyes, exhausted.

Sharon, sitting in the front passenger seat, glanced at him through the rearview mirror and secretly rolled her eyes. In her mind, she cursed him, thinking, "He looks decent but is just a cheating scumbag. Serves him right."

All six guests were heading back to the capital, so the production team had booked them on the same flight.

When Justin and his group arrived at the airport, boarding had already begun.

As he entered the cabin, he saw Lindsay and Elric sitting together. Unable to contain himself, he quickly walked up to them.

Looking at Elric, he said, "Mr. Edgworth, could you please switch seats with me?"
