

Chapter 131

Lindsay looked away from Justin after she was done talking.

She gently poked Elric's arm and pointed to the magazine that she had left open.

"Have you been here?" she asked, flipping through a travel magazine that showcased a beautiful island.

Having a second chance at life, she decided to make the most of it. Along with cutting out toxic people and taking better care of her health, she was determined to enjoy life to the fullest. Whenever she could, she'd set off on trips to explore new places and soak in the sights.

Elric looked delighted.

He couldn't help but smile at Lindsay's playful pokes. Her cute attempts to get his attention were utterly charming.

He leaned in to look at the magazine page.

"I have actually been there," he said. "Although it's a small island, it's..."

Elric began to enthusiastically introduce the island to Lindsay.

Lindsay's eyes sparkled with interest. "When I have time, I want to go there."

Elric immediately whispered, "I'm very familiar with this place and know a great, secluded diving spot. How about I take you there?"

Lindsay considered Elric a friend, so she didn't refuse. "Sure, we can ask Wendy if she wants to join us too, or maybe invite some friends along."

Going out with a group would be lively and fun.

Elric wanted to go alone with Lindsay but knew it wasn't possible. If someone snapped a photo of them together and posted it online, rumors would spread like wildfire. While he wasn't concerned about his own reputation, he didn't want Lindsay to face any backlash because of him.

"Then it's settled," Elric said, deliberately glancing at Justin, who was still standing nearby and listening to their conversation.

"Mr. Ford, what are you still doing here? Haven't you already finished putting up an act?" Elric said, implying that he should stop trying to bluff Lindsay and leave.

Just as Justin was about to speak, a flight attendant approached and politely asked him to return to his seat since the plane was about to take off.

He swallowed his words, maintained his composure, and nodded to the flight attendant. "Alright."

He gave Elric and Lindsay a deep look before turning and heading back to his seat. Once seated, he closed his eyes and pretended to sleep, his face somber.

Due to their close proximity, Justin could still hear Lindsay's cheerful voice as she discussed plans for the island trip with Elric.

What pained him the most was that Lindsay actually agreed to go with Elric.

After their breakup and everything that had happened, she was still so happy to make plans with someone else.

Did breaking up with him make her this happy?

He didn't believe it.

Olivia clenched the hem of her dress tighter, her eyes filled with darkness.

If she hadn't seen it with her own eyes, she wouldn't have believed that Justin would lower himself to such an extent, seeking reconciliation with Lindsay.

When he was alone with her, though he was accommodating, he still maintained a cold and noble demeanor. So, he wasn't secretly in love with her?

She struggled to make sense of it all, feeling frustrated that things had to be this way.

A nagging thought kept creeping into her mind: Was it really true that people only appreciate what they've lost?

She couldn't help but wonder if most of us only realize the true value of something—or someone—after it's gone.

She felt even more regretful now.

She shouldn't have plotted to make Lindsay leave the Harper family and break up with Justin.

If Lindsay hadn't suddenly decided to leave the Harper family and break up with Justin so decisively, things wouldn't have spiraled out of her control.

Alex, on the other hand, was listening intently to Lindsay and Elric's conversation.

The more he listened, the more jealous he became.

He had never taken his sister out to play, so why should Elric get to?

This guy was shameless, constantly trying to get close to his sister. He looked like a big wolf dog wagging its tail, seeking affection from his sister. Alex found that really irritating.

After about three hours, the plane arrived at the New Horizon Capital Airport. The show crew escorted Lindsay and the other five guests off the plane and towards the exit.

big sale: 100 bonus free for you get it