

Chapter 142

If Olivia were to upset Grace which would make Grace share her concerns with Richard, it could be detrimental to her.

She needed to keep her five brothers close while ensuring that Grace and Richard didn't develop any negative opinions about her that could shift their favor towards Lindsay.

The next day, Lindsay accompanied Jenny to get a makeover.

Jenny had always been strikingly beautiful and alluring.

Previously, to spite her parents and rebel against the family, she changed her hairstyle and color weekly, adopting an edgy, non-mainstream look.

Later, for Joey, she dyed her hair black and straightened it, adopting a more professional appearance.

Lindsay suggested she try a style that suited her better.

Jenny agreed, deciding to reclaim her true self.

She got her hair permed and dyed it an ash blue.

Then, she and Lindsay went shopping and bought a whole new wardrobe of bold, sexy, and alluring clothes.

Trying on a sultry burgundy slip dress, Jenny admired herself in the mirror. "I look amazing!"

Lindsay, standing nearby, agreed. "You really do. You were held back by that worthless guy."

Jenny had worn clothes she didn't like, such as business attire, for Joey's sake.

She complained, "Exactly. That jerk couldn't even stand me wearing a slip dress. If my skirt didn't cover my knees, he'd get upset. Once, I wore a dress with a partially open back, and he gave me the cold shoulder for a whole day.

"Now that I think about it, it was so pointless. That idiot wasted my beauty."

She tried on another backless dress. "I love how my long hair falls over my back, teasingly hinting at what lies beneath. It's so sexy and beautiful. That guy clearly didn't know how to appreciate it."

Jenny turned to Lindsay. "You're the best. You always do and wear what you like, never changing for my brother."

Linds cared deeply for her brother and family, always attentive and supportive in every aspect of life.

However, she never changed herself for them.

For example, Justin disliked Jenny and Lindsay racing cars or riding motorcycles. Since Jenny wouldn't listen to him, Justin tried to convince Lindsay to stop doing those activities, thinking Jenny would follow suit. But Lindsay continued her hobbies regardless of Justin's disapproval, and he eventually had to accept it.

When they argued, if Lindsay wasn't in the wrong, she wouldn't apologize just to make peace.

After returning to the Harper family, they wanted her to leave the entertainment industry and suggested she study economics or management abroad, but Lindsay flatly refused.

If the family ever said hurtful things to favor Olivia, Lindsay wouldn't just endure it—she would retaliate.

Lindsay could be warm and caring to those she valued, but she wouldn't let them change who she was.

Jenny realized she had been foolish in the past, rebelling against her parents to get their attention and changing many of her preferences for that worthless man.

Most of their arguments ended with her conceding first.

Lindsay patted her on the shoulder and said, "It's not too late for you to realize this now."

She had often advised Jenny not to change herself or her preferences for Joey, but Jenny had been too fixated on him and had pursued him despite her advice.

Lindsay suspected that Joey might have subtly gaslighted Jenny.

Jenny nodded. "That's right, my life has only just begun."

She then looked at herself in the mirror with a smile. "Oh my, the more I look, the more I see how beautiful we are. We should definitely let more people appreciate this beauty."

At that moment, Lindsay was also trying on a different style of a long dress in the same color. She looked at herself in the mirror and chuckled. "Indeed, the two women in the mirror are absolutely stunning."

As they were bantering, Lindsay's phone rang.

It was from an unknown number.

She answered it, "Hello!"

Since she hadn't hired an assistant yet, she handled all her entertainment industry matters herself. Unknown numbers could be new work opportunities or offers, so she always answered them.

big sale: 100 bonus free fou you get it