

Chapter 16

Lindsay noticed the three of them looking at her.

She joked, "Are you all still planning to win without doing anything?"

In unison, they replied, "Absolutely!"

Lindsay laughed and shook her head. "Then I suggest we visit the households that Adam mentioned."

"We can arrange times to help them and then exchange our work for money or food."

Elric, who had initially been reluctant to move, agreed, "Yes, let's ask them today. We don't want the other team to beat us to it."

They had the information and couldn't let the other team seize the opportunity.

Leslie and Wendy also agreed, "Alright."

With Lindsay leading the way, the four of them accurately found each household and arranged times to help with chores.

After successfully scheduling with the last household, Wendy looked at Lindsay with admiration.

Her way of addressing Lindsay changed, "Linds, how did you manage to find each household so precisely?"

Following Lindsay, each time they knocked and asked, it matched the households Adam had mentioned.

Once or twice could be luck but getting it right five times was definitely a skill.

Leslie and Elric also looked at Lindsay with curiosity. "We want to know too."

Lindsay waved the paper she was holding. "I made a map earlier and asked Adam about the features of each house.

"For example, the Lynn family has a few oak trees in their yard, which is very distinctive. The Smith family has some stones piled up by their door. It was easy to find the right places by following the map and recognizing these features.

After she explained, the three guests were momentarily stunned.

Then, one by one, they showed expressions of genuine admiration. "Lindsay, that's impressive!"

These were things they hadn't even considered.

No wonder Lindsay had been asking Adam about the characteristics of these homes earlier—it was to find them accurately.

Elric smiled and said, "They always say opportunity favors the prepared. I suddenly understand that phrase much more deeply now."

He turned to Lindsay and asked, "Do you always take everything you do this seriously?"

He was born with a silver spoon in his mouth, and being the youngest son who didn't need to inherit the family business, everything in his life was always arranged for him.

Lindsay smiled. "Pretty much. If I'm going to do something, I try to do it well."

From a young age, Moses taught her that one can only truly rely on oneself and should keep learning throughout life. Doing each task well was a responsibility to oneself and others.

Lindsay didn't elaborate to highlight her dedication and hard work; instead, she changed the subject.

"Starting tomorrow, we have work lined up for the next few days."

She asked, "Do you want to continue exploring the village, or should we head back to rest?"

Leslie and Wendy thought Lindsay would continue to talk about herself, emphasizing her dedication.

To their surprise, she didn't, making her seem even more genuine.

Wendy, massaging her legs, said, "How about we go back to rest? I feel like my legs are about to give out."

Although she usually practiced dance, she had never been this tired before.

Lindsay sympathetically said, "We've been sitting in the car for a long time and walking a lot since we got here. It is exhausting."

The two male guests agreed, "Yes, let's go back and rest."

So, the four of them returned to the courtyard.

Without any bedding, Wendy took clothes from her suitcase to use as makeshift padding and lay down to rest.

She was utterly exhausted and fell asleep quickly. Lindsay, on the other hand, sat cross-legged on the bed, resting with her eyes closed.

Seeing the two of them like this, the live stream cameraman quietly stepped out.

However, the viewers couldn't stop commenting on the live stream.

Chapter 16

"Lindsay is amazing, finding each household so accurately."

"She made a map and took notes, which is why she found them so precisely. She's really dedicated."

"I've become a fan of Lindsay. I love how serious she is about her work."
