Chapter 170

"They told me the surveillance records had been cleared," Fiona said, frustrated.

Lindsay understood that this was typical of Oliver's tactics, ensuring no loose ends. "Send me the times and locations. I'll help you find evidence to clear your name."

Fiona could sense Lindsay's genuine intention to help her, and she wouldn't hold back. "Alright."

Lindsay continued, "Once we have the evidence, I'll get you on a reality show. When everyone starts criticizing you and bringing up the past, we'll release the evidence to turn the narrative around."

Fiona understood that being on a reality show would quickly generate significant buzz. She nodded, "Alright, I'll leave it in your hands."

Lindsay smiled. "Don't mention it. If all three of you decide to join the studio, I'll personally manage you."

Hector, who had been silent, asked in surprise, "You mean, you'll also be our manager?"

They had heard of celebrities managing themselves, but not of an already famous one managing other artists.

Fiona and Joshua were equally surprised.

Lindsay smiled. "Yes, I'll be your part-time manager. Don't worry, though. I'll make sure to follow your career plans and arrange everything accordingly. Jenny and I will also get you offers. Of course, I'll hire three assistant managers to handle your work and personal affairs. If you have someone in mind for the role, feel free to suggest them."

Hearing this, the three artists had no objections.

Lindsay seemed genuinely invested in their careers.

Joshua looked at Lindsay and asked, "Can I ask what you have planned for us if Hector and I join the studio?"

Fiona's plan sounded great, so they were curious about theirs.

Hector nodded, "Yes, I want to know too."

Lindsay had already thought it through.

Looking at Joshua, she said, "I'll secure you the role of the second male lead in a historical drama set in the 1920s. After it airs, you'll participate in a reality show to solidify your popularity."

She knew of a high-quality historical drama that was still in the early stages of filming. Recently, the second male lead made headlines for a DUI hit-and-run, and the director, Melvin Price, didn't want to use such a problematic actor.

However, the actor's father was the drama's biggest investor, so he pulled out his investment, causing the production to halt. Melvin was searching for new investors, but most people weren't optimistic about the drama, especially given the significant funding gap.

Previously, Melvin had approached Oliver for a supporting actress, but he had declined.

In the past, when Lindsay hadn't joined the reality show, Oliver had shown her the script and asked if she was interested.

After reading it, Lindsay thought the script was excellent, and she liked the role, predicting the show would turn out well.

She was about to ask Oliver to secure the role for her when the director failed to find the necessary funds, and the project was shelved.

Lindsay believed in the potential of this drama and planned to invest in it.

She would cast Joshua as the second male lead and take on the role of the supporting actress herself.

Joshua's temperament and appearance matched the character perfectly, and both roles were very appealing.

If the drama succeeded, their gains would be significant.

Additionally, it would provide a good opportunity to compete against the drama Brandon was working on.
