Chapter 176

"Criticism directed at me is inevitable; just handle the comments effectively," Lindsay continued. "There's no need to get into arguments that could create a negative public impression. The main PR focus will be during Fiona's live reality show in five days."

Albert nodded. "Don't worry, Ms. Lindsay. We are fully prepared."

Their ability to establish themselves in the industry hinged on this battle.

Winning would not only validate their studio but also allow them to showcase their skills in the industry.

Losing, however, would mean humiliation and possibly having to find new careers.

They couldn't afford to lose; they had to win.

Everyone else, hearing this, looked excited and eager.

They had all been mistreated and sidelined at Harper Entertainment, and now they wanted to strike back.

The common "enemy" had united the studio, and they were all determined to succeed.

As they continued their discussion, the major entertainment companies, including Harper Entertainment, had already identified who was behind the new studio.

Ryan was the first to get the news. He was playing video games in his office with Elric when his assistant relayed the information.

Ryan couldn't help but express his surprise, "Lindsay is that formidable? She managed to poach Harper Entertainment's best operations team."

As competitors, the major entertainment companies kept a close watch on each other.

Ryan had been aware of Albert and his team's resignation.

Although his own company's operations team was excellent and he had no intention of replacing them, he understood the value of such a team.

Other major entertainment companies likely shared his sentiment.

Smaller companies wouldn't dare make a move, fearing the wrath of the Harper brothers.

The Harper brothers had made it clear that anyone who took in Albert's team would be their enemy.

Ryan had been curious about why Albert and his team had suddenly resigned and was puzzled by how Edmund had allowed them to leave.

Sensing something was off, Ryan decided to keep a closer watch on Albert's activities.

He hadn't expected such a result.

Although he knew Lindsay was trying to poach talent from Harper Entertainment, he didn't expect her to make such a significant move right off the bat.

Albert and his team were industry-renowned for their high-level operations and PR expertise. Despite being sidelined, they continued to manage tasks and clean up after Harper Entertainment's new team.

Now that they had been recruited by another company, things were about to get interesting.

Elric, unsurprised, remarked, "Linds is so capable. Why are you so shocked that she managed to poach an operations team?"

Ryan thought to himself, "This is definitely a case of love being blind."

To Elric, it seemed normal for Lindsay to achieve the impossible.

"I'm just puzzled. Albert was so loyal to Harper Entertainment and very savvy. How did he end up joining Lindsay's newly opened studio?" Ryan mused.

There had to be more to the story.

Elric, still focused on his game, replied, "It's because of Linds' charm and capability! Can't you see that, Ryan? You're slipping."

Ryan rolled his eyes. "You're the one who's slipping!"

"But I do agree, Lindsay is impressive. Not only did she poach Harper Entertainment's veteran operations team, but she also got Fiona a guest spot on Sarah's reality show. It's hard to fathom how she pulled that off."

"Fiona's reputation is so tarnished. How is she going to manage that?" Ryan wondered aloud.

Even their company wouldn't be able to rehabilitate Fiona's image right now.

How was Lindsay planning to do it?

Elric smirked. "This is just the beginning. Don't be so surprised. As for how she'll manage Fiona's image, you'll see soon enough. Get ready to be amazed."

Ryan, even more curious, responded, "Alright, I'll be watching."

He then instructed his assistant to closely monitor Lindsay's studio and report any developments immediately.
