Chapter 177

There are three major entertainment companies: Harper Entertainment, Star Entertainment, and Shaw Entertainment. The president of Shaw Entertainment was a refined man in his thirties.

Upon hearing the news his assistant had reported, Kenneth Shaw's face showed a hint of surprise.

"I really didn't expect this."

He couldn't understand why Albert would lead his team to a small, obscure studio.

And then there was the matter of Fiona.

Why would Sarah agree to her as a guest star?

Sarah had a strong aversion to unethical artists and possessed the influence and support to ensure that no one could impose unwanted actors on her productions.

So how did Lindsay manage to pull this off?

He was also curious about the future.

Was Fiona aiming to redeem herself or to maintain her controversial fame, squeezing out every bit of her remaining value?

Given Fiona's personality, if she wanted to remain controversial, she would have done so long ago. Why wait until now?

But redemption seemed unlikely too. For the first time, Kenneth felt a surge of curiosity and the urge to keep an eye on Lindsay.

The assistant said, "Yes, and Mr. Price's drama is also funded by their studio. As the major investor, they even arrogantly declared they wouldn't use Harper Entertainment's artists. And Mr. Price really sent two of Harper's artists back."

Kenneth hadn't anticipated this at all. Lindsay was truly bold.

The assistant asked curiously, "Star Entertainment offered such high terms, but Lindsay didn't accept and instead opened her own studio. What is she after?"

After thinking for a moment, Kenneth replied, "Most likely, she's planning to directly confront Harper Entertainment."

"All the people in her studio, except for the Ford family's heiress, are poached from Harper Entertainment."

A playful smile curved his lips. "We are in for a good show. Let's see whether the Harper brothers or their own sister comes out on top."

He was eager to watch the Harper brothers embarrass themselves. Though they were already a joke, he sensed an even bigger humiliation was on the horizon.

"Keep an eye on Lindsay's studio. Report any movements to me."

They had all underestimated Lindsay before. They thought she was just engaging in minor skirmishes against the Harper brothers, but now it seemed she was planning a full-scale confrontation with Harper Entertainment.

This was getting more interesting by the minute!

At Harper Entertainment, Edmund and Oliver sat on the couch in Edmund's office, listening to the assistant report the findings.

After hearing everything, both of their faces showed shock and disbelief.

Oliver even confirmed with the assistant again.

"Are you saying Lindsay turned down Star Entertainment's contract and started her own studio? She even poached our entire operations team and all the artists?"

The assistant himself couldn't believe it when he first discovered the news. After multiple confirmations, he finally reported it.

But it was the truth.

He nodded. "Yes, Mr. Albert took his team and joined Lindsay's studio. He is now the operations director. Fiona, Joshua, and Hector all terminated their contracts with our company and joined her studio."

He continued, despite facing the dark expressions of the two bosses, " Their studio also invested in Mr. Price's project and announced they wouldn't be using Harper Entertainment's artists."

Oliver snapped the pen in his hand, the crack echoing in the room. His face turned even darker as he gritted his teeth, "Lindsay, if she's so capable, why doesn't she just fly far away?"

Their own sister was openly opposing them, poaching their old team and their artists. It was clearly intentional!

"Edmund, she's doing this to humiliate us, to make us a laughingstock."
