Chapter 180

Seeing the harmony between Lindsay and Elric, their fans breathed a sigh of relief.

Elric's fans were different from other fan groups. They weren't angry at Lindsay for rejecting the contract; instead, they admired her for being so independent. Consequently, Elric's fans flooded the comments on their Instagram posts with praise.

"My bias is amazing; she's living the life I envy."

"If Linds has the ability, why shouldn't she start her own business?"

"My El isn't narrow-minded; of course, he supports my bias' decision."

"To those trying to stir up trouble, don't think we can't see through your schemes. You're just trying to cause problems between my bias and El."

"Hmph, neither El nor us El fans will fall for it."

"Do you think we El fans are stupid? We're thrilled Linds is so capable; why would we ever scold her?"

"Exactly, with El protecting Linds, of course, we'll follow his lead."

"Those trying to stir things up are idiots, full of nonsense."

"Congratulations to my bias for becoming her own boss! From El's fans + Linds' fans, we send our blessings!"

This comment was copied and shared widely, showing that many of El's fans had also become Linds' supporters, calling her their bias with great enthusiasm.

Lindsay's fans were even more enthusiastic, flooding the comments with cheers and praise. The camaraderie between the two fan groups was remarkably harmonious.

Oliver did not anticipate this outcome. He was left speechless and couldn't understand Elric and his fans' mindset. Despite being so publicly snubbed by Lindsay, they happily flocked to support her.

It was absurd.

As Alex had said, Elric wasn't a normal person.

With his first plan failing completely, Oliver felt he was out of luck.

He decided to release the news about Fiona signing with Lindsay's studio the next day.

Wendy and Leslie saw the news online and privately asked Lindsay if she had started her own studio.

After receiving confirmation, Wendy and Leslie also posted similar messages on Instagram, congratulating Lindsay and asking her to treat them to a meal.

Sharon saw these posts, and her manager suggested she join in to gain some publicity.

Since they were on the same show, it made sense both logically and diplomatically to post something as well.

Remembering how the Harper siblings had treated her, Sharon decided to post a similar message, partly to ride the wave of popularity and partly to irritate the Harpers.

Now it was up to them to decide whether or not to respond.

Sharon's post indeed got under Olivia's skin. She was already aware of her brother's plan and had been eagerly waiting for Elric's fans to turn on Lindsay.

But to her surprise, Elric, the blunt guy who had always ignored her, wasn't upset at all and even publicly supported Lindsay. His fans, instead of criticizing Lindsay, praised her, which Olivia found both infuriating and perplexing.

Then she saw the posts from Wendy and Leslie. This wasn't unexpected, given that the four of them were a team, so it was no surprise they would support Lindsay. But Sharon's post felt like a stab in the back.

Olivia silently cursed Sharon for shamelessly chasing clout and dragging them into an awkward position.

Should they respond to her post or not?

Either way, it seemed like they couldn't win.

Before Olivia could decide what to do, she saw a post from Alex.

"Congratulations to Linds on becoming her own boss!"

Although Alex wisely refrained from asking Lindsay for a meal, his post still managed to infuriate Olivia and Oliver.
