

Chapter 35

"We don't need money as payment; just have them give us some food."

This way, they could earn food and make their livestream content more interesting. Otherwise, like today, if they kept picking peaches in the orchard, viewers would soon get bored.

Hearing Lindsay's suggestion, the smiles on the faces of the other three grew wider. This idea was great—not only was it easier than picking fruit, but it was also much more engaging.

They all agreed. "This is a good idea."

Wendy thought for a moment and suggested, "Why don't we prepare today and start the classes tomorrow?"

The others agreed. "Sounds good."

They wanted to be prepared; otherwise, if they ended up teaching the children poorly on livestream, it would be an embarrassment.

Lindsay smiled and said, "Then let's go find Mr. Warren and have him inform the villagers."

The three agreed. "Okay!"

But before they could head to the village committee, Adam arrived. He first thanked Lindsay and Elric for saving the children. Then he explained the situation with the reservoir gate.

It turned out that the person guarding the reservoir had gone to the restroom, and his mischievous son had played with the controls, accidentally opening the gate, which nearly caused a disaster.

If not for Lindsay and Elric, the two children from the Lynn family would likely have drowned. The villagers wouldn't have let the guard's family off easily, and a serious feud would have arisen, disrupting the village's peace.

Adam still felt a chill thinking about it.

After exchanging pleasantries, Lindsay brought up the idea they had discussed. Adam smiled and said, "That's a great idea! Go ahead and set up the classes; I'll take care of the rest."

This village was very poor and backward. He hoped these celebrities could bring some changes to the children's lives, allowing them to learn more about the outside world.

Knowing the village well, Adam took it upon himself to visit families with children and inform them about the classes. At the same time, he spread the word about Lindsay and Elric's rescue throughout the village.

On their way, Eddy and Austin told everyone they met in the village about the incident. As a result, the villagers' impression of Lindsay and her team shifted from indifference to fondness.

When they heard from Adam that these celebrities could teach the children to sing, dance, paint, or help with their homework, many of the elderly and parents were intrigued.

Learning that Lindsay could repair electrical appliances and that she had fixed the village's broken tractor, made them even more eager.

Families began bringing their broken appliances to the courtyard, hoping Lindsay could fix them.

Lindsay was the first to get to work, borrowing tools from the village committee and asking the production team for some materials. She started repairing broken televisions, rice cookers, radios, and other appliances for the villagers.

Lindsay worked diligently, quickly, and effectively. She managed to fix everything except the appliances that needed replacement parts.

"Lindsay is amazing. Not only can she fix tractors, but she can also repair so many other things."

"Precious Linds could make a living with her repair skills even if she weren't in the entertainment industry."

"She's so clever, coming up with the idea of holding classes."

"I'm suddenly excited to see what they'll teach the children."

"My Linds is like a treasure, always surprising us."

In addition to her existing fans, Lindsay gained many new female fans who flooded the comments with praise, but it didn't feel excessive.

At noon, the four of them went to Austin's house for a hearty lunch before returning to the courtyard.

Lindsay continued repairing appliances while the other three prepared their lesson plans.

Each time Lindsay fixed an appliance, the villagers would give her rice, noodles, meat, or vegetables in return.

By the afternoon, when the villagers left happily with their repaired items, the tables in the courtyard were piled high with food.

This sight left the other team, who had spent the day picking fruit, stunned.

They were surprised by Lindsay's ability to fix so many appliances and noticed that Elric, Leslie, and Wendy were benefiting from her skills as well, making them feel even more envious.
