

Chapter 49

Alex noticed his sister's red eyes, realizing she felt insulted. Annoyed, he looked at Sharon and said, "Via's been busy all morning, so you shouldn't be picky. You haven't done anything, so be grateful there's food to eat. Besides, my sister's cooking is delicious."

To prove his point, Alex took another mouthful and forced himself to eat it, trying to support his sister.

This made Sharon feel wrong, as she hadn't even said anything but was now labeled as lazy and picky by the siblings.

Just as Sharon was about to speak, Justin cut her off. "The food tastes good. Thanks for your hard work, Olivia!"

Olivia smiled sweetly and waved her hand. "It was no trouble at all. I'm happy to help everyone."

Sharon, unable to get a word in, found herself further criticized by Alex and Olivia's fans in the live comments, accusing her of being ungrateful and spoiled, ruining their beloved angel's efforts.

At that moment, Elric finished washing the dishes and overheard the conversation. He couldn't help but chuckle. Glancing at the table, he said, "If the food is so good, why did you eat so little? Our group couldn't get enough of Lindsay's mushroom soup."

He smacked his lips, reminiscing. "I could eat another bowl, no problem."

His comment made the viewers notice the discrepancy.

"Justin says the food is good, but he's only eaten a little."

"Alex ate a bit more, and it looked like he was forcing it down."

"Olivia herself only had a small portion..."

"Justin is definitely going easy on Olivia. He looks uncomfortable but keeps praising her."

"It's so awkward watching him try to compliment her."

"You can tell good food by comparison. Lindsay's oatmeal with diced ham and soft-boiled eggs were devoured by her group."

"Especially when Elric mentioned it, you could tell it was hearty and flavorful."

"I was practically drooling while watching."

"But Olivia's group's food doesn't look appetizing."

"If it's so good, why didn't they finish it?"

"I noticed the dishes looked a bit undercooked when they were eating them too."

Sharon's fans also started to criticize them.

"A movie star and a top celebrity bullying our Sharon to protect their little angel."

"It's too much! They make bad food and force others to eat it. What's the deal with that?"

"That angel act is so fake. We can see right through it."

In the kitchen, the group eating their breakfast felt embarrassed by Elric's comments. Sharon, however, found Elric's bluntness refreshing. She wasn't entirely without temper either.

"I'm full. Since you find the food delicious, you can finish the rest," she said.

She had genuinely liked Alex and wanted to be close to him, but now she had lost interest.

His blind adoration for his sister was off-putting, and anyone who got close to him would feel suffocated.

Olivia felt humiliated. What did Elric mean? Was he saying her cooking was inferior to Lindsay's? She looked at him with even more resentment and frustration.

"Elric, do you dislike me?" she asked.

Why was he always against her? It must be because Lindsay had spoken badly of her in private.

Elric looked at Olivia, puzzled. "You're not made of gold, so why should I like you? Besides, men and women should keep some distance. I don't want to come on a show and end up in a scandal."

With a look that clearly said he wanted to avoid any trouble, Elric quickly left.

Olivia's face turned red with anger.

Elric was such a jerk with no sense of decency.
