

Chapter 50

Olivia was fuming.

Alex and Justin both thought Elric was incredibly rude.

Only Sharon, sitting quietly, felt secretly delighted.

She realized that a sharp-tongued guy like Elric was exactly what a manipulative girl like Olivia needed—a true expert at dealing with her type.

Seeing Olivia's pale, angry face, Alex felt deeply concerned. "Via, ignore him. The breakfast you made is delicious, much better than those mushroom soups. I love them."

To prove his point, he forced himself to eat a few more bites, pretending they were delicious.

The viewers reacted quickly:

"Alex's acting is hard to watch."

"It looks like he's swallowing poison, not enjoying delicious food."

"The real enjoyment was from Elric's group during breakfast. They made me hungry!"

"Watching this group makes me lose my appetite."

"Alex dotes on his sister too much. I wonder if he'll ever get married."

"Why criticize him for spoiling his sister? Our Lex is a rare gem of a brother."

"Exactly, spoiling your sister is what a good brother does."

"A man who spoils his sister is a good man."

"Exactly, spoiling your sister is what a good brother does."

"A man who spoils his sister is a good man."

Soon, Alex's fans were arguing with others online.

Olivia's attempt to match Lindsay's efforts only highlighted the contrast.

The breakfast she made was so bad that half of it remained uneaten, becoming a joke among the viewers.

Meanwhile, Lindsay's group went to help a local family catch fish. They spent the entire morning fishing and were treated to a hearty lunch. After working until mid-afternoon, the family gave them two fish as a thank you.

When they returned to their yard, they found Alex running back and forth to the bathroom.

Seeing this, Elric couldn't help but ask, "Ate too much this morning?"

Alex was speechless. Elric was getting more annoying by the minute.

Seeing Lindsay, Alex's eyes lit up like he had spotted his savior. "Linds, please, can you give me something for this diarrhea?"

His legs felt weak from running to the bathroom so many times, and he regretted eating too much earlier.

He knew Lindsay had a knack for home remedies. Once, during a camping trip, both he and Brandon had gotten sick. Lindsay had gone up the mountain to find herbs. She brewed them into a tea, and it had worked like a charm.

Lindsay understood what Alex wanted but wasn't inclined to help. "You overate. A few more trips to the bathroom will help with digestion."

Alex felt insulted, sensing an undertone in her words. "You can't just leave me in this pain."

In the past, Lindsay would have given in to his plea immediately, feeling sorry for him. This time, she just shrugged. "I can. Why wouldn't I? We're not close."

Alex was shocked at her coldness. "You're so heartless."

Lindsay nodded. "Yep, my heart's made of stone."

Elric gave Lindsay a thumb-up, admiring her firmness. "Alex, you're the one spoiling your sister. Consider this a memorable experience."

Alex knew Elric was mocking him. "Easy for you to say. You're not the one in pain."

Elric raised an eyebrow. "Of course not. I'm in great health."

Alex was about to retort, but another wave of stomach pain hit, and he dashed back to the bathroom.

Comments

Support

Share