

Chapter 51

Elric turned to the others and said, "This is just his way of showing love for his sister."

Wendy chimed in, "Alex is in such bad shape from eating her breakfast. Why hasn't his sister come to take care of him?"

Since discovering the relationship between Alex, Olivia, and Lindsay, Wendy felt uneasy. It also seemed odd that despite Alex's obvious affection for his sister and the fact that it was Olivia's breakfast that made him sick, she wasn't there to help.

Elric shrugged. "Who knows, maybe he's just one-sidedly doting on her while she doesn't even care."

He then changed the subject, "Aren't the students supposed to arrive soon?"

Lindsay nodded. "Yes, Mr. Warren called earlier. There will be about a dozen kids coming to learn today."

Elric, who had never taught before, was excited. "Let's get ready then."

The four of them started preparing for the children's arrival.

Alex's fans initially criticized Lindsay for being cold-hearted and Elric for being indifferent.

However, they soon switched to another live stream and saw Olivia happily picking fruit with Justin's help.

This realization sparked a sense of dissatisfaction among them.

It seemed Olivia wasn't as attentive to her brother as she should be, especially considering Alex's condition was because he ate her breakfast.

Not long after, a dozen children of various ages, led by Adam, entered the courtyard. After Elric and the others introduced themselves and their skills, they let the kids choose what they wanted to learn.

Elric taught guitar, Leslie taught drawing, Wendy taught singing, and Lindsay offered to help with their homework.

The children split into groups based on their interests, each choosing one of the three teachers.

One teenager approached Lindsay and asked, "Can you help me with my senior year high school assignments?"

He had heard from Adam that someone could help with homework, which was why he came.

Lindsay smiled and replied, "Yes, I can help."

She gestured for him to sit down. "Come over here. You can ask me anything you don't understand."

In the livestream chat, Alex's fans began to criticize.

"Lindsay is trying to act like a know-it-all?"

"She said 'ask me anything' as if she knows everything?"

"It'll be embarrassing if she can't answer a question."

The teenager, not used to seeing such a pretty girl, shyly sat down and pulled out a math worksheet. Pointing to a problem, he said, "I don't understand this one."

Lindsay glanced at the problem and then took his notebook and pen, explaining, "This problem is solved by..."

She provided a detailed explanation and then asked, "Do you understand now?"

The boy nodded enthusiastically. "I understand now. You explain so well."

He then asked Lindsay several more questions, not just in math but also in physics and chemistry.

Lindsay only needed a quick look at each problem before giving a clear and thorough explanation, starting from the basics and building up, while reinforcing related concepts.

"Lindsay really is a genius. Even I, a poor student, understood her explanations."

"She remembers high school topics so clearly and explains them so well."

"No wonder she said she could help with anything; she really knows her stuff."

"Lindsay is amazing! She explains things better than my teachers."

"What happened to those who said she was pretending to be a genius?"

"They're probably too embarrassed to speak now."

"Precious Linds is fantastic!"
