

Chapter 56

Justin almost gagged after taking a bite of Olivia's fish. Comparing her cooking to Lindsay's, Olivia's attempt was downright terrible.

However, to avoid embarrassing Olivia, he swallowed the fish.

"The taste is okay," he said, unable to muster a genuine compliment.

Relieved by their reactions, Olivia smiled. "Great, if you like it, have some more."

She took a bite herself, and her expression froze. The fishy taste was overwhelming. She had followed the tutorial perfectly, so why did it taste so bad?

On the live stream, she couldn't spit it out, so she gave more fish to Alex, knowing he would eat it no matter how bad it was. She also gave more to Sharon and Justin, keeping a smaller portion for herself.

Alex stared at the mound of fish on his plate, feeling a pang of resignation. What could he do but eat it?

At that moment, he longed for his biological sister's cooking.

Sharon didn't want to eat any more but felt compelled by Olivia's repeated claims that she made it because Sharon wanted it.

On the live stream, she had no choice but to accept what Olivia gave her, quickly eating the fish while holding her breath, then moving on to eat the pasta.

Justin did the same, pretending to enjoy the meal despite its unpleasant taste. If not for the direct comparison to the other group's cooking, it might not have been so obvious. But now, everyone could see how forced his enjoyment was.

"The actor's skills are impressive; he can make even bad food look delicious."

"If Olivia hadn't given him so much, I bet he wouldn't have eaten more than three bites."

"From here, you can tell Justin really dotes on Olivia."

"There's definitely something going on between those two. Olivia really knows how to get both a top star and a movie star to orbit around her."

"Poor Alex has the worst of it, though. Eating that huge plate, I wonder if he'll spend the night in the bathroom again."

"He has to eat that much to show how much he loves his sister, right?"

Seeing these comments, Justin's female fans weren't pleased. They didn't argue back this time; they wanted to know what kind of relationship their idol had with Olivia.

Alex's fans were also unhappy, seeing how uncomfortable their favorite star looked while eating. They felt bad for him, having had a stomachache all day and now dealing with this meal. For the first time, they thought Olivia was inconsiderate.

Meanwhile, Lindsay's group, along with Adam, visited the home of the puppet master. The man was in his sixties and lived with his grandson after losing his son and daughter-in-law in an accident.

When he heard about their interest, the master was delighted. He eagerly showed them his cherished puppet figures. After some discussion, they decided to perform a puppet play of "Pinocchio." The master had a set of the main characters but needed to create more puppets for the additional roles.

Lindsay and the others agreed to spend time each day helping out and planned to show the audience how puppets are made. This was incredibly meaningful to the master, who was thrilled and shared many stories about the history of puppetry.

They listened attentively, asking questions from time to time. It wasn't until after 8 PM that they returned to the courtyard.

As soon as they got back, they heard Alex vomiting. He was now dealing with both diarrhea and vomiting.

Lindsay couldn't help but remark, "It's true love indeed."

She thought to herself, "He deserves it."
