

Chapter 57

Elric commented, "Indeed, this brother's love runs deep. I even reminded him in the kitchen earlier, but he didn't listen."

Wendy couldn't help but feel a bit gleeful, though she sighed and said, "Poor Alex, really."

In the live chat, Alex's fans were extremely worried about him. Some even started to blame Olivia, and a few directed their anger at Lindsay for not helping Alex when he asked for medicine.

However, Lindsay's fans quickly defended her, pointing out that she didn't owe Alex anything and that he was responsible for his own actions. After all, he knew he had a sensitive stomach yet still ate the food to please his sister.

As the livestream ended, many viewers left comments expressing concern for Alex's health.

At the Harper family home, Richard was away on a business trip, but Grace and the other four brothers were watching the livestream.

Grace was worried about Alex's condition. "His stomach has always been sensitive. Now he's vomiting and having diarrhea in that remote village. I hope he's going to be okay."

She then expressed her disappointment, "Lindsay is really heartless. She really meant it when she said she won't care about Alex."

Usually, when Alex gets sick, Lindsay takes the initiative to care for him. But this time, even though Alex showed vulnerability and asked Lindsay to make him medicine, she coldly refused.

Grace had noticed the difference since Lindsay left the family. When Lindsay was around, she would monitor Grace's blood pressure and ensure she took her medication. Whenever Grace felt unwell, Lindsay would prepare nourishing broths and light meals for her.

Lindsay used to give her special massages daily, ensuring Grace could sleep comfortably through the night.

Without Lindsay, Grace's sleep quality had deteriorated, and she missed the attention and care.

She had never truly appreciated it before, thinking it was just natural for a daughter to care for her mother. But now, she found it hard to accept Lindsay's coldness towards Alex.

"Does she really not want to acknowledge us anymore?" Grace found this even harder to accept.

Edmund frowned. "She's probably still mad at Alex. He should've known better than to eat something that would upset his stomach."

"Lindsay is being unreasonable too," Edmund continued. "They're siblings, yet she purposely creates conflict on the show, making a spectacle of it."

Oliver expressed his displeasure. "Exactly. Lindsay's behavior is getting out of hand. I've worked hard to build Via's image as a sweet girl, but Lindsay's participation in this show has ruined it by creating a stark contrast, which has harmed Via's reputation in the past couple of days."

Oliver had planned to use Olivia and Lindsay's contrasting upbringings to highlight Olivia's excellence, showing how growing up in their family had made her better than Lindsay, who grew up outside.

He also wanted to make it clear to Lindsay that without his support as her manager, she wouldn't last long in the industry.

But things hadn't gone as planned. Lindsay's actions had backfired on his strategy, making Olivia look bad.

He had already hired people to manage public opinion, but Alex's condition today had caused some of his fans to turn against Olivia.

Worse yet, there were even some viewers speculating inappropriately about the relationship between Alex and Olivia, which was becoming a headache for him.
