

Chapter 59

Grace didn't expect Lindsay to see through their intentions so clearly.

However, she didn't directly admit it.

"I watched the livestream. Via performed very well and was excellent. Oliver said if you come back, he'd get you some good offers. Brandon mentioned you could have a second lead role in his new show."

She sounded like they were doing her a great favor.

Lindsay scoffed, "Well, I really appreciate that. I wouldn't dare to take Oliver's so-called offers. He's probably laid traps for me to fall into. I've been burned before, and I won't be fooled again. And in Brandon's new show, the first lead is Olivia, right? So, you still want me to make her shine by giving me the supporting role?"

Grace had her phone on speaker as well.

Brandon, who had a fiery temper, couldn't hold back when he heard Lindsay's sarcasm. He shouted, "Lindsay, don't be ungrateful. If you weren't our biological sister, we wouldn't bother with you at all. What's wrong with supporting Olivia? Why do you always have to compete with her? Can't you just be content?"

Wendy frowned even deeper. Is this really how they talk to their own family? Helping the adopted sister at the expense of the biological one and expecting her to just accept it?

Lindsay sneered. "Yes, I'm that ungrateful. What are you going to do about it? You already said you would blacklist me in the entertainment industry, and you did. So, keep doing it. See if I care."

Grace was displeased. "Lindsay, stop being so stubborn. We are a family. If you come back tomorrow, we won't hold it against you."

Lindsay was being too stubborn. She had personally called, giving her an out, yet she was still resisting?

Lindsay laughed coldly. "Mrs. Harper, let me remind you, I've already cut ties with your family. So, stop trying to guilt-trip me. If you're feeling unwell, go to the hospital. And whatever happens to your family in the future, don't come looking for me."

With that, she hung up before her mother or anyone else could say another word.

In the Harper Family Residence.

Hearing the busy tone from the phone, Grace's face darkened further. She gripped her water cup tightly. "How dare she act like this?" She felt an indescribable emptiness inside as if something crucial was missing.

She wondered if Lindsay truly did not care about her health anymore.

The four brothers also looked grim. "She's getting too rebellious," Oliver said, narrowing his eyes. "Then we'll clip her wings and ensure she can never soar again."

He couldn't believe that with them around, Lindsay would still manage to secure good offers and continue her career in the entertainment industry after this show. She was forcing them to be ruthless.

Grace also wanted to humble Lindsay. "Do as you please. She's too disobedient now." Then she added, "But no matter what, she's still your sister. Don't go too far."

Oliver smiled. "Don't worry, Mom. We'll be careful."

If she weren't their biological sister, he would've already taken more drastic measures. But because she was family, he didn't want her to slip out of their control.

Back at the Cottage

Wendy looked at Lindsay with sympathy. "Your mom and brothers are so unfair."

Having such family members, she couldn't bear it either. No wonder Lindsay chose to cut ties with them.

Lindsay smiled nonchalantly. "I got used to it."

She couldn't understand the Harper family's logic either. If they cared so much about Olivia and didn't want her competing with Olivia, then her cutting ties should've been exactly what they wanted. Why couldn't they just let her go? It was baffling.

As they talked, a sudden knock on the door interrupted them.
