

Chapter 62

The next day, Lindsay made oatmeal and pancakes for breakfast.

In the other group, Olivia accidentally overslept and didn't make breakfast. They planned to eat at the place where they were helping out.

Alex, after receiving IV fluids the night before, was no longer experiencing vomiting and diarrhea but looked pale and exhausted.

Justin suggested he stay at the courtyard to rest.

Alex got up to see the others off and saw Lindsay's group enjoying breakfast. Elric, Leslie, and Wendy were eating with satisfaction. He didn't have much of an appetite, but the smell of the oatmeal and pancakes made him hungry.

However, Lindsay didn't even glance his way, let alone invite him to join them. This made him feel even worse.

He suddenly realized that with Olivia and the others having breakfast at a villager's house, he would be left without food.

This thought left him feeling dejected, much to the distress of his fans watching the live stream.

Lindsay glanced at Alex, thinking he deserved his predicament.

Olivia, accustomed to being pampered by the Harper parents and her brothers, often received without giving. This naturally led her to overlook them sometimes.

This morning, Olivia likely didn't even think about the fact that while they would have breakfast at the villager's house, Alex would be left hungry.

But Alex's disappointment was not Lindsay's concern. She wasn't going to worry about him.

Elric, noticing Alex's state, asked, "Alex, didn't your dear sister make breakfast for you?" He added, "After vomiting and having an IV last night, she didn't make you some oatmeal?"

Alex gave Elric a sidelong glance. "I didn't have an appetite."

Elric, relentless, said, "Even without an appetite, some oatmeal would be good to soothe your stomach. You ate until you were vomiting and had to get an IV for your sister, and she left you to fend for yourself. What a deep sibling bond you have."

Elric's words were sharp, targeting Olivia's supposed sweet and caring persona. He knew Lindsay must have endured a lot from Olivia while living with the Harpers. Now, he wanted to expose the truth and see how Olivia's fans reacted.

Alex's expression stiffened. Hearing Elric's words, he couldn't help but wonder why Olivia hadn't made him some oatmeal. Had she really forgotten, or did she just not care enough?

He remembered how, in the past, when he had stomach pains, Lindsay would come all the way from the other side of the city to make him oatmeal.

No, he couldn't keep comparing them.

He glared at Elric. "I told you, I didn't have an appetite."

He quickly left the courtyard and returned to his room, not wanting to hear any more of Elric's taunts.

"Alex looks so pale, and Olivia didn't even make him oatmeal."

"Last night, Alex had to go to the village clinic for an IV, and Olivia didn't stay with him."

"Alex's stomach got upset because he ate the food she made, and she just left him? How could she?"

"I'm so disappointed in Olivia. It's always Alex giving, but I've never seen her treat him well."

"Yeah, Alex spoils her so much, and this is how she repays him? She's too selfish."

Elric's words had turned many of Alex's fans against Olivia. Seeing Alex's haggard appearance, they felt even more sympathetic and angry on his behalf.

Meanwhile, Olivia, Justin, and Sharon went to help a farmer pack vegetables. When they arrived, they asked if they could buy breakfast, and the farmer generously made them some spaghetti without charging them. Eating the hot and delicious spaghetti, Sharon felt like crying from relief.
