

Chapter 69

Her outfit showcased her good figure to the live stream audience. With a confident smile, she started practicing yoga, trying to make her movements and poses as graceful as possible.

An elderly man, feeling puzzled, commented, "??? Who is this? Why did they suddenly switch people?"

"This is another female celebrity participating in the variety show."

"This young woman doesn't look as good. I still want to see Lindsay boxing."

"Isn't this on purpose? Lindsay is boxing, and now she's doing yoga."

"Honestly, she looks okay, and her figure is fine, but nothing special."

"Exactly. Even though Lindsay was wearing sportswear, she looked stunning while boxing."

"This girl seems a bit calculated. She has light makeup on, while Lindsay was completely bare-faced."

"Even with makeup, she's not as pretty as Lindsay!"

"It's not just that she's not as pretty; there's a significant difference."

"Watching Lindsay box and then suddenly seeing this girl do yoga feels oddly off."

"The contrast is too strong. I was captivated by Lindsay's fierce style, and now this gentle yoga feels out of place."

"I don't want to watch yoga; I want to see my bias boxing."

"You can watch yoga anywhere, but Lindsay's boxing is unique."

"I follow other yoga streamers who have better figures and even sexy abs."
"

"Now that you mention it, I'm curious if my bias has abs too."

"I want to see."

"Me too."

The comments quickly shifted, and the discussion took an unexpected turn.

This development was entirely opposite to Olivia's expectations.

Charles, seeing the comments, smiled playfully.

Olivia's attempt to outshine Lindsay had backfired. She intended to create a contrast, but instead, the audience favored Lindsay even more.

If Olivia knew, she would probably be furious.

After washing up, Lindsay went to the kitchen to make breakfast.

Elric had set an alarm every day to watch Lindsay boxing. After watching, he also went to wash up and then headed to the kitchen to help.

The live stream soon split into two again: one showing Olivia doing yoga and the other showing Lindsay and Elric in the kitchen.

Comparing the viewership, Olivia's stream was struggling with only tens of thousands of viewers, consisting mainly of her own fans and some supporters of Alex.

Meanwhile, Lindsay and Elric's stream had already amassed millions of viewers.

"I didn't know my El God could get up early. He usually has a reversed schedule."

"El God is obviously waking up early just to watch her boxing."

"If someone as picky as El God wakes up just to watch her, my bias is truly captivating."

"Wow, today she's making crab cakes and shrimp cocktails. Another day of drooling."

"Poor Alex must be suffering again. His little angel made plain oatmeal while practicing yoga."

"I feel for the other three guests in Olivia's group."

"I'd love to interview them and ask how they feel seeing Elric's group enjoying their meals every day."

"Smiling on the outside, crying on the inside."

The comments jokingly teased, making fans of the other groups uncomfortable. They couldn't help but sympathize with their idols along with the other viewers.

At the same time, they grew more dissatisfied with Olivia. Didn't she say she learned cooking specifically for the show? This was it?