

Chapter 74

Everyone present and the viewers watching the live stream were taken aback by Lindsay's confident words.

"Did Lindsay mean she can play any mandolin song we request?"

"How is that possible? Can she really be that good? I don't believe it."

"Where did Lindsay get the courage to say something like that?"

"Is Lindsay just overconfident, or is she actually arrogant?"

"Alright, everyone, let's request a song."

"Yeah, she dared to say it, so let's give her a challenge."

The hired trolls quickly discussed what song to request. They finally settled on one they thought Lindsay wouldn't know.

"Play 'The Battle of Evermore'."

This mandolin piece was less commonly known compared to other popular songs like 'Dust in the Wind' and 'Losing My Religion.' It has a complex structure, featuring multiple sections that represent different moods and melodies, making it quite challenging to play.

When the hired trolls suggested this song, those unfamiliar with it looked it up. Critics, along with Alex's and Justin's fans, agreed on the request.

"Yes, play this song."

"I've heard this piece before. Let's see how Lindsay performs it."

"The chosen mandolin piece is quite difficult. I wonder if Lindsay can play it."

Lindsay couldn't see the comments, so Charles relayed the message. "They want you to play 'The Battle of Evermore'."

Lindsay was very familiar with this piece. She said, "Alright!"

Without any delay, she started playing the mandolin. The music began with the deep and solemn sound of war drums, followed by the intense and fierce atmosphere of battle. It ended with a sorrowful and poignant melody, a stark contrast to the earlier sections.

Not only were the people present captivated by the atmosphere, but the live stream viewers were also engrossed in the performance, watching the screen intently.

As the song concluded, everyone gradually came back to their senses.

"Lindsay's playing is truly amazing."

"I study the mandolin, and I have to say, Lindsay not only played it perfectly but also captured the deep, solemn, and heroic tone of 'The Battle of Evermore'."

"I've never listened to mandolin music before, but I was completely immersed just now."

"Listening to Lindsay play this piece, you can tell how skilled she is with the mandolin."

"Those who said she was following a script, do you feel embarrassed now?"

The hired trolls and Alex's fans did feel a bit embarrassed. They hadn't expected Lindsay to be so proficient with the mandolin. However, the trolls weren't about to back down easily.

"We admit Lindsay is pretty good at the mandolin, but that doesn't mean she wasn't acting."

"If she wants to prove herself, let her play something on the fiddle, dulcimer, and trumpet."

"And isn't there a guitar on set? She should play a piece on that too."

"Yeah, if she can play all those instruments, we'll believe she really knows them and wasn't acting earlier."

Seeing these comments, Charles smiled with amusement. This was a chance for more exposure. If Lindsay could play all these instruments, it would not only prove that his show wasn't scripted but might also go viral online.

So, he relayed the viewers' requests to Lindsay.

Lindsay, unfazed, said, "Sure, let them choose."

"My girl is so confident, I love it."

"She's amazing. I love her confidence."

"Wow, she's so cool! Let them bring it on. My girl is awesome."

"Lindsay is so bold. I wasn't a fan before, but if she pulls this off, I'm switching sides."